MANY BUILDING PERMITS

Inspector T. O. Doane Reports Unusual Business During Last Month.

ARE MOSTLY FOR RESIDENCES.

Not Enough Houses to Supply the Great Demand, the Local Realty Agents Say.

Building permits have been issued during the month of September considerably in excess of the number usually approved at this time of the year. The most important building to be erected is that now in course of construction on Park avenue for the Courier-News. Nearly all the others are for frame dwellings and are in various sections of the city.

Werner Heidloff is building a two-story frame dwelling on Westervelt avenue, 200 feet north of Front street, and has a permit for a one-story garage on the premises. W. H. Clum is the architect and Stahl and Kinney will do the carpenter work. Other frame dwellings for which permits have been issued are: To Fred E. Smith, two story and attic, at 605 Central avenue; John Abel, two story house on Everett place; Clare Naylor, two story and attic dwelling at East Second and Washington streets; Edith M. Pittinger, two story and attic dwelling on Ravine road. The architects for this building are Hollingsworth and Bragdon. A permit for a one story garage has been issued to Minnie J. Marsh, of 56 Westervelt avenue, which will be built by A. F. Marsh.

Among others Charles Loizeaux, of 620 North avenue, will build a two story and attic dwelling on Cameron avenue, for which George Hummer has the contract. W. H. P. Veysey, of 812 Park avenue, will build a square frame garage and Minnie E. Stephenson has contracted for a one story brick store on Madison avenue near Front street. Dr. A. K. Brennan has given the contract for the carpenter work on his new dwelling 401 Grant avenue, to John A. McNally. This will be a two story and attic frame structure. Many permits were also issued for alterations.

Notwithstanding the briskness in building there are not enough houses to supply the demand. One of the best known house agents in town said today that the demand for flats and small dwellings far exceeds the supply and many house hunters are being turned away unsatisfied every week. At present there is considerable demand for flats or small detached houses for rent no to exceed twenty dollars per month.

GEAR ADMITS CHARGE; FINED FIVE DOLLARS.

Charles Gear, of this city, who was arrested in the borough Tuesday night by Marshal Weiss on a charge of disorderly conduct, was arraigned before Recorder Dolliver in the borough court this morning. The arrest was made on a warrant sworn out by George LeMatty, of Somerset street. The latter said that he met Gear Monday night and, that without and cause, Gear used vile language to him and struck him with his artificial arm. The prisoner pleaded guilty to the disorderly charge and was fined $5, with a promise of twenty days if arrested again. As Gear did not have the money to settle he is still held a prisoner in the lockup.

"DRYS" OF UNION CO. NOMINATE CANDIDATES

Members of the Prohibition party in Union county got together quietly last night at the home of P. N. Dalley, 1147 Mary street, Elizabeth, and nominated a county ticket. A dozen or so of gray-bearded, earnest advocates of total abstinence met early and adjourned early. The only feature of the gathering was the address on the progress of prohibition by George J. Haven, of Camden, the State chairman. The following was the ticket nominated:

EXPLAINS CATHOLIC VIEW OF MIXED MARRIAGES

The attendance and interest in the Mission being held at St. Mary's R. C. church, Stony Hill, continues unabated. Rev. Raymond Walsh's instructions on the sacrament of matrimony, was given last night in a lucid and comprehensive style. His theme was "Why Does the Catholic Church not Sanction Mixed Marriages," wherein he portrayed in a practical manner that it was more in justice to the non Catholic part than the Catholic that the church has taken this course.

This morning the members of the League of the Sacred Heart received communion in a body at the 8 o'clock mass. Tomorrow the mission will hold a service in memory of all deceased members of the parish, with instructions on purgatory at both masses. On Sunday the Holy Name Society will receive Holy Communion in a body at the 8 o'clock mass with instructions. At the 10:30 mass the closing Mission sermon will be delivered and the Mission will close at 3 o'clock in the afternoon with a renewal of the baptismal vows, the blessed Sacrament on the church grounds and cemetery, benedictions and the final blessings.

FORESTERS CONVENTION AT MADISON ENJOYED

The High Court of the Independent Order of Foresters met at Madison on Wednesday and about 200 delegates from all over the State were in attendance. Officers for the next two years' term were elected, among whom were Dr. Mark L. Clawson, High Court Physician, and A. M. Vanderbeek, a member of the Supervision of Laws committee. Dr. Clawson and Mr. Vanderbeek were the representatives from Court Watchung, No. 3871. Immediately after the morning session a banquet was served and the afternoon sesion resumed at 2:30.

A feature which surprised and pleased the delegates was the street decorations of flags and bunting put up by the merchants of Madison. It was a totally unexpected tribute to the Foresters and much appreciated. Court Plainfield No. 1144, was represented by Chief Ranger Henry Hanson, Lewis J. Feiring, James and Charles McCarthy, Max Winzenried, Fred Breen, James Paterson and Edward J. McCue. Dr. H. H. Lowrie was also among the high court officers present. L. T. Titsworth, of Dunellen, the State organizer, also a high court officer, was present.

The high court will meet in Plainfield in 1911.

PLAINFIELD REPRESENTED AT THE $50,000 BANQUET.

Former Mayor Lewis V. F. Randolph, retired financier; former Mayor Alexander Gilbert, president of the New York Clearing House; former Mayor B. A. Hageman, New York manufacturer, and David H. Rowland, banker, were the Plainfielders to be honored with invitations for the sumptuous $50,000 Hudson-Fulton celebration at the Hotel Astor, on Wednesday night. The feast was attended by rulers, princes, kings of finance and the foremost men of brains from all quarters of the earth.

Yates—Valentine.

The Presbyterian church, Westfield, was the scene of a pretty wedding Wednesday when Miss Marguerite Stores Valentine, of Brooklyn, and Westfield, was married to J. W. Yates, Jr., of Virginia. The Rev. Dwight Hillis, of Brooklyn, officiated. A reception was held at the residence of the bride's sister, Mrs. Lamb.

STUTSMAN LECTURES ON BUSINESS LAW

The pupils in the Plainfield Business College listened to a short talk by Martin B. Stutsman this morning which Mr. Stutsman outlined the series of lectures which he is to give the students during the fall and winter. Attorney Stutsman was introduced to the seventy-five or more pupils of the school by Professor Herr who said that Mr. Stutsman was a graduate of that college and after graduating from the Plainfield High School took up his studies at New York University, from where he graduated with honors.

In his remarks this morning Mr. Stutsman told the class his first lecture would be the "laws of contracts as related to business translations." Then will follow laws relating to bills and notes, drafts, etc., negotiable and non-negotiable paper;" "agency laws," "partnerships," "real property," "surety and guardianship" and "common carrier" laws. When these topics are properly assimilated there will be a foundation for the study of questions of greater weight, all of which will be of material assistance in a business career.

The official canvass of the votes cast at the special election on September 14 was made in the Governor's office at Trenton yesterday afternoon by Governor Fort and the six Senators selected by him to comprise the State Board of Canvassers. The result showed that the five proposed amendments to the State Constitution were defeated by an average of 23,721 out of a total vote of 82,898. Of this number 3,354 ballots were rejected.

As a result of the efforts made in Hudson and Atlantic counties in behalf of the fourth amendments to raise the salaries of the members of the Legislature, that amendment received the highest vote, being defeated by 22,677. The largest adverse vote, 24,866, was polled against the fifth amendment, to extend the terms of the Governor, members of the Legislature and other officers and to creat Assembly districts.

The third amendment, by which it was proposed to reform the judicial system of the State, was defeated by a majority of 23,780, and the second amendment, to reorganize the Court of Pardons, was lost by a majority of 23,690. The majority against the first amendment was 23,587.

The first amendment was designed to abolish that provison of the Constitution, which permits the foreclosure of mortgages in the Circuit Court and Court of Common Pleas. This amendment was included, for the reason that provision was made in the third amendment for the abolition of the two courts named.

At the Presidential election in 1908 the total number of names on the poll list in the State was 472,102. The vote cast at the special election was 17.14 of that at the regular election last year.

The canvassing board was composed of Governor Fort, Senator Harry V. Osborne, of Essex; Senator Joseph S. Frelinghuysen, of Somerset; Senator William J. Bradley, of Camden; Senator Ernest R. Ackerman, of Union; Senator George S. Silzer, of Middlesex, and Senator William C. Gebhardt, of Hunterdon.

Governor Fort returned from the Interstate Fair grounds, in order to meet with the board at the hour appointed by law for canvassing the returns.

The vote for and against the several amendments in each county is given in the table herewith:

The vote in Union and Somerset counties was as follows: Union—for, 6,554; against, 12,223. Somerset—for, 2,854; against, 2,947.

Good Sale of H-F Stamps.

Postmaster E. H. Bird reports a good sale of the Hudson-Fulton stamps. He received 60,000 stamps of that issue and says that he will have no trouble in getting rid of them. A large number of them were disposed of yesterday and today to be used in sending out the monthly bills. The mail at the local postoffice today was unusually heavy on account of the thousands of bills sent out.

K. of P. District Meeting.

In connection with the meeting of Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, K. of P., tonight there will be a district session. It is expected that fully 150 representatives of the order will be here, including many of the State officers. There will be initiatory work and a banquet will follow.

TALK POLITICS AT FAIR

Carlton B. Pierce is Boomed for G. O .P. Leadership of House.

PLUMS FOR SOMERSET COUNTY.

Fresh from primary battles in which many political heads were thumped, several hundred New Jersey politicians rallied around the president's tent at the Inter-State fair grounds yesterday afternoon and hobnobbed with one another.

Union county was one of the many bailiwicks that turned up a slim representation. United States Senator John Kean, who has not missed a Politicians' Day at the fair in fifteen years, was a conspicuous figure in the throng. He wore his usual serene look and maintained his reputation of being a good handshaker. "Union county Republicans have nominated a strong ticket," he said, "and on election day we will send all the candidates through to victory by very comfortable majorities."

Whenever the effect of the primary results on the United States senatorial situation was discussed, it was conceded that Senator Kean had come out of the factional rows unsinged. He was not mixed up in any of the fights as were Governor Fort and former Governor Stokes, who are both considered to look longingly to the senatorial togs now worn by the Sage of Ursino. It was freely admitted that Mr. Stokes is nursing a political black eye as a result of the fight in his home county of Cumberland, where the voters rolled up a big majority in favor of the renomination of Assemblyman Isaac T. Nichols against the vigorous and acrimonious opposition of the former Governor.

In a somewhat similar manner Governor Fort undergoes a loss of prestige on the face of the returns in Essex county. The Governor sided with Colonel Austin Colgate in the latter's candidacy for the chairmanship of the Essex county Republican committee, and the Colonel was beaten by Dalrymple, the "regular" candidate against whom Mr. Fort directed a broadside of criticism in the speech he delivered in Newark last week. On the other hand, contrary to the experience of the present and the former governor, Senator Kean's own county is solidly and harmoniously in sympathy with his being continued in the upper house of congress.

Banking on the assurance that the Republican ticket will win easily in Union county, a number of the present members of the Legislature predicted the elevation of Assemblyman Carlton B. Pierce, of Cranford, to a very influential place in the next law-making body. Assemblyman William W. Smalley, of Somerset county, who has broken political precedents in his section by capturing a nomination for a fourth term, said to The Daily Press correspondent that he believed Mr. Pierce should be made majority leader at the next session.

"How about the speakership for him?" was suggested.

"No, I think we would prefer the leadership," replied Mr. Smalley. "He would make a splendid leader, too," continued the Somerset county legislator; "he has the natural aptitude for the job, he is experienced and he is independent and honest. He would make a good speaker, too, but without knowing just how he feels I should say offhand that the leadership would appeal to him."

Mr. Smalley himself was suggested as good speakership timber, assuming that the House would continue Republican in majority.

"Oh, no, I hardly think I could get that honor," commented Mr. Smalley. "Of course, Senator Frelinghuysen will be president of the Senate next session, and in view of this it would hardly be regarded an equitable distribution of honors to accord one county the presiding officer of each house."

So far as the Senate organization is concerned, it is acknowledged that Senator Ackerman will serve as majority leader at the coming session. This will put him in line for the Senate presidency the following year. Senator Ackerman was in town yesterday acting as a member of the State Board of Canvassers to canvass the vote on the constitutional amendments, but he did not arrive in time to go out to the fair grounds.

James E. Martine, of this city, and General Dennis F. Collins, of Elizabeth, were the only Union county Democrats who mixed with other politicians. It was the first time in several years that the "farmer orator" has not come down to the fair as a candidate for some office. He was none the less effusive, however, concerning Democratic hopes.

SEVENTH-DAY BAPTIST RALLY DAY EXERCISES

The rally day exercises under the auspices of the Sabbath-school of the Seventh-Day Baptist church, will be held tomorrow at the usual hour. Special exercises and music are being prepared. The topic for the prayer-meeting tonight will be "Lessons from the Life of Abraham." The pastor, Rev. Edwin Shaw, will preach at the regular hour tomorrow morning from the text, "What meaneth then this blessing of sheep in mine ears and the lowing of the oxen which I hear?"

The consecration meetings of the Junior and Young People's societies of Christian Endeavor, will be held tomorrow afternoon at the usual hours. There will be a "Blue Stocking" sociable at the church Sunday afternon, under the auspices of the Women's Society for Christian Work.

It is expected that Mrs. John R. Truell, who has recently visited the denominational mission church in Haarlem, Holland, will bring greeting from that church to the people of the Seventh-Day Baptist church prior to the morning preaching service tomorrow.

GRAND JURY FAILS TO INDICT CODINGTON

The Somerset County Grand Jury upon completing its work a few days ago, handed up 41 indictments, but to the great surprise of those interested in the case, no indictment was found against Freeholder Joel Codington, of Warren township, who was accused of a misappropriation of township funds.

There was considerable interest in the filing of the report of Hugh K. Gaston, Supreme Court Commissioner, of his investigation of the Warren township affairs. The details of this report were not made known by the court, but were handed to the grand jury for its guidance in obtaining corroborate evidence on its own account, after which it was ordered to be placed on file as a public document in the county clerk's office.

In view of the reported disposition of the Codington case by the grand jury the report is of unusual interest. Whether there was any testimony given before that body to offset the damaging evidence set forth by the commissioner's report will probably never be known, but it is reported that a statement made before the jury to the effect that Treasurer Codington had deposited $2,300 in the Bound Brook National Bank to the credit of Warren township after Commissioner Gaston made his report to the court had considerable influence on the action of the grand jury.

WEDDING RECEPTION FOR MR. AND MRS. W. F. WILSON

A wedding reception was tendered to Mr. and Mrs. William F. Wilson at the home of the groom's parents, Councilman and Mrs. W. W. Wilson, on West Third street, last night. There was a large company of relatives and friends present from High Bridge Somerville, Raritan, Dunellen and this city. The couple was married a few weeks ago, the bride being Miss Colvin, of Somerville, a niece of James Colvin, of West End avenue.

The feature of the evening was dancing, which was continued until a late hour. At midnight refreshments were served. Mr. and Mrs. Wilson were showered with congratulations and were the recipient of numerous gifts. Mr. Wilson is manager for his father's grocery at West Front street and Clinton avenue, and and his wife reside there.

Y. W. C. A. RESUMES ACTIVITIES SUNDAY

The vesper service Sunday afternoon will be in charge of Miss Mary Corbett, the new student secretary of the Northeastern Territory committee of the National Y. W. C. A.

This will afford an opportunity to see the new addition to the building and learn about the work planned by the improvements made. Miss Lucy Chaplin, of Bridgeton, will be the speaker on October 11. Her subject will be "The Best Things Our Association has to Offer." On October 14, "An Advertisement Social" will be held.

FLIRTATION BY MAIL BARRED IN PLAINFIELD

Postoffice authorities here and throughout the country have decided to turn a censorious eye on flirtations by mail and the department where this governmental chaperonage will be exercised is in the "general delivery" department. Misuse of the mails in this way will be made as difficult as possible.

Of course there are some people, such as transients, who have their mail sent ahead and get it at the general delivery window, but records show that this has more often been a means used by individuals who have good reason to conceal their real place of residence or else want to get their mail under an assumed name.

The authorities have come to the conclusion that Cupid is spending too much over the general delivery window and that the missives handed out there are apt to be too burning and often rather misdirected, both from the viewpoint of affection and propriety. It is the foolish young girl who falls a prey to the lure of the general delivery. It is such "sport" they think to carry on a correspondence under an assumed name or receive letters that would never get through under strict parental supervision.

The rule that has been applied in most of the larger cities is to insist on identification by claimants of mail and when letters keep coming for a number of weeks or months to ask the recipients why the mail cannot be delivered at their regular address.

SOLD LIQUOR ILLEGALLY

Jury Speedily Convicts Siegel Cooper Company's Driver.

ANOTHER PLEADS GUILTY.

Acker, Merril and Condict's Employe, Makes No Defense—R. H. Macy & Co., Next on the Calendar.

Walter L. Hetfield, Jr, assistant prosecutor, won a signal victory for the State yesterday in securing a verdict in the first of several cases, in which it is the purpose to stop the practice of the New York department stores from illegally selling liquor at retail in the county. The cause won yesterday by the State was directed against the Siegel Cooper Company, Edward Coleman, a driver for that concern, being the defendant in the action. The jury was out but ten minutes when it returned a verdict of guilty with recommendations for mercy.

Immediately afterward, Alva Dunham, driver for Acker, Merrill and Condit, through his counsel, Frank E. Laughran, of Jersey City, entered a plea of non vult. The cases against R. H. Macy and the Merchants' Express Company will be tried in December.

In view of the fact that Union county is the first of any in the State to secure a conviction in these cases, the result is of the greatest importance. No intimation was given yesterday that the Siegel Cooper Company would take the case up on an appeal, but it is believed that this will be done. The concern was represented by McDermott & Enright, the latter trying the case and representing Coleman.

Mr. Hetfield, representing the State, called among his witnesses, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Rainey, formerly of this city, to prove the sale of liquor; that they gave the order for the liquor here and the delivery was made here. Immediately afterward Mr. Enright moved for a verdict in favor of the defendant on the ground that it was a violation of the Interstate commerce act, known as the Wilson bill. For over two hours this point was hotly contested by Mr. Hetfield and Mr. Enright. The former contended that the liquor was delivered by an agent for Siegel Cooper Co., and the action was not an intervention of a common carrier.

Mr. Hetfield said: "Where the delivery is made without intervention of a common carrier the place of delivery is the place of sale." He maintained that the goods were in the control of the Seigel Cooper Co., until delivered to the Raineys and the court sustained the contention. Mr. Hetfield admitted that if the liquor had been shipped by express that would be no violation, but it was not shipped that way.

At the conclusion of the presentation of testimony, the case was given to the jury and within ten minutes a verdict of guilty was returned. Mr. Hetfield was congratulated upon the splendid manner in which he handled the case.

The New York department stores were discovered taking orders and delivering liquor in this city and steps were taken to stop it. Alva Dunham, driving for Acker, Merrill & Condit; Edward Coleman, driver for the Seigel Cooper Co., Lewis Wexler, driver for R. H. Macy & Co., and Thomas Meehan driver for the Merchants' Express Company, were arrested. They were indicted at the May term of court.

The Seigel Cooper Co., filed a bill in the United States District court in an effort to restrain further proceedings against them on the grounds that it was a violation of the Interstate commerce act. Judge Cross in a lengthy opinion decided against the Siegel Cooper Company. Sentence will be pronounced in the case of Seigel Cooper Co., during the week of October 11. Yesterday's case was tried before Judge E. S. Atwater and a jury at Elizabeth.

It is reliably reported that since the indictments were found by the grand jury, the practise of the New York department stores has not ceased here. One taxpayer exhibits a bottle of whiskey which it is stated was obtained from a driver for one of the New York stores contrary to law.

The Plainfield Baseball club will cross bats with the McNulty Brothers' team of New York, on Crescent Oval, tomorrow. The McNultys always put up a fine game and the fans are assured of a good contest tomorrow. Randolph will pitch for Plainfield and is anxious to defeat the New Yorkers for what they did last week. The local team will present its old lineup, with Jack Martine at short and that means that the visitors will have to go some to win. The contest will be called at 3:30 o'clock sharp.

Manager Dorflinger, of the Plainfield Baseball club is trying to schedule a game with New Brunswick to be played on Crescent Oval, Saturday afternoon, October 9, which may be the last one of the season for Plainfield. The New Brunswicks are a strong attraction and should they decide to play here, doubtless will draw a big crowd.

The Boston Nationals will play New Brunswick at the latter place on Sunday, when "Dave" Driscoll will present his strongest lineup in an effort to defeat the Beaneaters.

"Cliff Randolph gives as an excuse for being defeated last week that it has been two or three weeks since he pitched a game and was not in prime condition for the contest. He knows that he can beat McNulty Bros.' aggregation and will try and turn the trick tomorrow.

The Warren A. C. plays its last game of the season tomorrow, when it will meet the Bon Ami A. C., at Somerville.

"Lou" Wiltse's new Somerville team will go up against Bound Brook tomorrow, and the chances are that it will defeat Manager Newhouse's aggregation. Last week Bound Brook won by a score of 2 to 1.

GOLF.

The first annual championship tournament of Pennsylvania, under the auspices of the newly organized Pennsylvania Golf Association, began over the links of the Huntingdon Valley Country Club on Saturday. The competition is open to such clubs as are affiliated with the association. Thirty-six holes of medal play were in order on the first day, and the best thirty-two qualified for match roads. All the rounds will consist of eighteen holes, save the final.

Members of the Dyker Meadow Golf Club are busily engaged on their fall schedule. There will be an eighteen-hole medal play handicap tomorrow, while on the following Saturday the schedule calls for the seventh monthly club handicap for first and second prizes. This competition will mark the last opportunity to qualify for the club championship and also for the Dyker Meadow Cup. The sixteen players to return the lowest net scores in the season's monthly handicaps will be drawn to play off at match play handicap for the Dyker Meadow Cup. In regard to the club championship competition and other events the program reads:

The sixteen players who have made the lowest sixteen gross scores in the year's monthly club handicaps will be drawn to play off at match play scratch, as follows: First round, eighteen holes, to be played before October 18; second round, eighteen holes, before October 25; semi-final, thirty-six holes, before November 17 final, thirty-six holes, to be played before November 8.

FOOTBALL.

The Dunellen football team has a hard game on its hands tomorrow, when it meets the strong Acorn A. C., of Brooklyn. The "Acorn" boys had one of the best teams in Brooklyn last year and from the work done in practice it looks as though they will have a team just as good, if not better, than last year. They will probably outweigh our boys by a few pounds, but Dunellen expects to more than make this up with their fast work and forward passes.

The Acorns, although they do not use the forward pass to any extent, play a fairly open game, using end runs a great deal. They play together well, both on the defensive and offensive. Dunellen plays a good all around game, using the forward pass a great deal, so that it looks as though the game would be well worth seeing.

Plainfield, N. J., October 1, 1909.

The "progressive" Republicans will not dispute the weather man's assertion that there was a light frost in New Jersey last Tuesday night.

The West End avenue sage wonders why Admiral George Dewey is not conspicuous in the Hudson-Fulton celebration. Come to think of it, we do remember that name.

Had William Jennings Bryan managed the airship flight program, that particular feature of the Hudson-Fulton celebration might have been more of a success.

The New York Herald, which first gave to the world Cook's story of his conquest of the North Pole, in attempting to publish all the press comments on the polar controversy explains that it is impossible to classify the clippings as that are all favorable to the real discoverer, Dr. Frederick A. Cook. Evidently the Herald has "read out of meeting" the one shining exception to this verdict, the paper that is making an attempt to bolster up the absurd but amusing charges of Commander Peary. Much to their credit the American press and the American people believe in Dr. Cook.

Although the verdict may be the subject for an appeal, Assistant Prosecutor W. L. Hetfield, Jr., has won a victory of more than State-wide importance in convicting the driver of a New York department store of selling liquor illegally in this municipality. The practise is general and has grown to such magnitude that punative action is necessary as a protection to law-abiding property-owners and taxpayers who, as they do here, pay a thousand dollars a year for the right to sell at retail and eight hundred and fifty dollars to sell at wholesale. It is necessary, also, in the interests of the general public, who not only profit by the revenues turned into the city treasury in this way but, as good citizens, demand that the laws of their making be obeyed. It is unfortunate, however, that some humble employe of the real offenders must suffer the punishment, instead of the employers, a jail sentence for whom would, undoubtedly, have a salutory effect.

SALOONS RESPONSIBLE FOR SUNDAY BASEBALL

The Rev. George Mooney, formerly pastor of the Monroe Avenue M. E. church, and now pastor of the South Orange M. E. church, who welcomed the county W. C. T. U. convention held in his church in that borough yesterday, placed the responsibility for Sunday sports on the saloon interests.

"In Essex county," he said, "within the last month there have been 45,000 people assembled at cycle races, baseball games or other sports on Sunday. Back of every one of these places descreating the Lord's day are either directly or indirectly the saloon and brewery interests."

HERE AND THERE.

Another old landmark has disappeared from the city, and the method of removal is worth the telling. It was the tall brick chimney which stood at the old Spicer & Hubbard mill, now the Spicer Universal Joint Company, on Madison avenue. The new concern wanted the chimney taken down, but the method of doing this was at first puzzling. Finally, a bright idea was suggested. A workman ascended the chimney from the inside and every few feet he punctured a hole through the brick for support. When he reached the top he began to demolish the chimney by removing the bricks. In this way the chimney was taken down without a mishap and at very little expense.

LOST WILL IN SECRET DRAWER.

Securities and Insurance Papers of Suicide in Old Bureau.

Harris Reibel, a dealer in second-hand furniture, of 951 Elizabeth avenue, Elizabeth, yesterday, while going over an old-fashioned bureau which he bought a few days ago from Mrs. John R. Halsey, widow of John R. Halsey, of Elizabeth, who killed himself in July, came upon a secret compartment, which he found filled with papers.

Mr. Halsey was a wealthy man and Secretary of the Celluloid Company of Newark. After his death no will could be found, and although it was known he carried insurance policies, the policies could not be located. They were found in the compartment found by Reibel.

Besides the will, life and fire insurance policies there was a lot of stock in telephone and telegraph companies and many documents relative to the estate of Mr. Halsey's father. The will found gives everything, both real and personal, to the widow.

MARTHA WASHINGTON STAMP.

Government Printing Shop Has Been Asked to Submit a Model.

The picture of Martha Washington may be placed upon one of the postage stamps of the present series. A number of women prominent in the Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution have requested the Postoffice Department at Washington to take such action. It is suggested that the proposed issue of the twelve-cent stamp offers an opportunity to do this. The suggestion is supported on the ground that it would be an appropriate recognition of one-half of the people of the United States.

The Director of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing at Washington has been asked to prepare a model bearing Martha Washington's head, in addition to one bearing the head of George Washington. Both will have careful attention from Postmaster General Hitchcock on his return from his vacation.

BLAMES FORTUNE TELLERS.

Husband Says Wife Has Been Prompted by Them.

Replying in the Court of Chancery at Trenton yesterday to the suit of his wife to compel him to give bonds for the payment of alimony recently awarded to her, on the contention that he was converting his property into cash with a view of fleeing the State and making his home in Europe, Frederic Bux, a Mercer county farmer, declared that the only basis the woman had for her allegations concerning his supposed flight was that had been told her by fortune tellers, whom she has been consulting through all of their matrimonial troubles.

He insisted that he had no intention of leaving the country, although he admitted that he had been selling his property. This, he said, was due to poor crops and high living expenses.

Mystery in Paterson Suicide.

A man who gave his name as John Miller, twenty-seven years old, died in the General Hospital at Paterson yesterday from the effects of a self-inflicted wound. He was found dying in a lane outside that city limits by a milkman. The man was revived at the hospital long enough to give his name, but would not tell his address.

PERMANENT INJUNCTION AGAINST CITY OF RAHWAY

In the suit of Mary H. Kidd and John Edward Marsh against the city of Rahway for the pullution of their land and water running through their land, Vice-Chancellor Emery has granted a permanent injunction, restraining the city from allowing its sewerage to run through a creek on the property of the complainants.

The suit brought by Miss Kidd and Mr. Marsh was the result of an attempt on the part of the city of Rahway, in July, 1908, to make a clearing in the Cranford sewer which passes through that city, the sewer having become clogged.

An examination of the sewer showed that the cause of obstruction was the growth of roots within it, and to get at the cause so as to remedy the defect, the contractor in charge of the work diverted the flow, causing it to empty into a stream passing through the property of the complainants. A temporary injunction was at once obtained, although it was several days before the outward flow could be stopped, during which and for some time after, the stench was almost unbearable.

In making the injunction permanent Vice-Chancellor Emory questioned the right of the city when the sewer was constructed to enter into the agreement with Cranford to keep the sewer in repair at the expense of that city.

LIFE OF RAILS ON ELECTRIC AND STEAM ROADS.

Some interesting statements relative to the decreased length of life of electric rails as compared with those on steam roads was brought to light at a recent meeting of railroad men held in Sheffield, England.

Professor McWilliam, of the Sheffield University, said, in reference to the corrugation of rails on electric roads, he considered it to be a mechanical effect of the mechanism running on the rail.

All the metallurgist can do, he said, is to try to find something that will wear longer under the conditions of this service. Chief Engineer Willox, of the Metropolitan Railway, London, said that on steam roads, with the use of large wheels and springs, the life of rails may be twenty-five years or more. However, with a low centre of gravity, small wheels, the deal weights of motors and the extraordinary acceleration, which are features of electric service, the life of rails comes nearer being twenty-five months. He had found that rails rolled from steel to which silicon additions had been made, had an increased life of about 110 per cent.

The service will be mostly one of song which will include quartets, duests, solos and congregational singing. The Mandolin Club will play several selections.

The hall will be prettily decorated for the occasion with fruit, flowers, etc., to give it the appearance of a harvest home. Admission will be free and a cordial welcome is extended to all.

There was a large attendance of members of the Society of Friends, of which Mr. Vail was a member.

Change in Mail Service.

There is one unimportant change in the U. S. mails, effective today as the result of a change in the time table on the New Jersey Central. The Allentown mail which formerly reached here on the 8 o'clock morning train, now gets here at 8:44, but it will not affect the local delivery. It will necessitate the mail mesenger making one extra trip to the railroad station.

PIANO CONTEST FAKES EXPOSED!

IMPORTANT FACTS FOR HOLDERS OF GOLD BONDS, PIANO COUPONS AND DISCOUNT CERTIFICATES.

There are several Piano houses which have no prices for their goods except grossly inflated ones arranged expressly for fake discounts in connection with schemes of various kinds. These houses seem to find it impossible to dispose of their pianos in a legitimate, straightforward way, but instead resort to one scheme after another—catch-penny devices, so crude as to be positively insulting to the intelligence of the public. These schemes usually take the form of guessing contests, drawing puzzles and various feats of little skill. In all of them the object is identical to mislead the prospective buyer into the belief that he is getting something for nothing, while at the same time prices are arranged sufficiently high to off-set the allowance to which his prize certificate entitles him.

EVERYONE WHO MAKES A GUESS GETS A PRIZE!

If you have ever answered one of these ads you received a discount certificate. EVERYBODY DOES. It matters not whether the answer is good, bad or indifferent, from adult or child it draws a prize in the shape of a certificate or due bill (generally from $65.00 to $100.00) to apply on the purchase of a new Piano. Of course the price of the Piano is fixed accordingly and the purchaser pays a high price even after the amount of certificate is deducted, usually a much higher price than an instrument of similar quality could be secured for in any legitimate music store.

To test the value of one of these certificates present it in payment for something other than a new piano—say a low priced used piano, music cabinet or a bench, and see how quickly the dealer will turn you down. He will not even give you 50 cents worth of music for it. Try the experiment!

AT $185.00 WE WILL SELL A BETTER PIANO THAN THE SCHEME HOUSES ASK $325.00 TO $400.00 FOR! Such well known and high grade makes as Haines Bros., Brewster, the Genuine Mathushek and others too numerous to mention.

SOME STATE NEWS BRIEFS

The annual convention of the Gloucester County Sunday-school Association will be held in the Westville Methodist Protestant church on October 7.

Falling from a scaffold at the General Chemical Works, in Camden, James Edwards, of 429 Lindon street, Camden, sustained concussion of the brain and was taken to Cooper Hospital.

In recognition of her two years of faithful service as president of the Paterson Teachers' Association, Miss Jennie Denton was presented with a beautiful diamond ring yesterday afternoon, at the annual meeting, held at Public School No. 1.

Robert Kirkwood, sixteen years old, of 221 Marshall street, Paterson, fell from a hayloft in a stable near his home and fractured the base of his skull. St. Joseph's ambulance took him to the hospital, where it was said that the young man's injury was likely to prove fatal.

Mrs. Minnie Dorwart, of Mt. Ephraim, reports the mysterious disappearance of her husband and ten-year-old son, Walter. They boarded a train for Philadelphia on September 11 and have not been seen since. She says her husband had been acting queerly for the past year and she fears for her son's safety.

In a fight over politics Wednesday, Philip Hill, colored, of 238 Pine street, Camden, was shot in the left arm. His assailant escaped and the wound was dressed at Cooper Hospital. Later, Hill appeared before Justice of the Peace Tatem and had a warrant issued for the arrest of William Coleman, also colored, as his assailant.

The West Jersey Baptist Association, in session in Bridgeton, Wednesday, elected Rev. J. M. Davis, of Pedricktown, moderator. There were two ballots, the first being a tie between Mr. Davis and Myron J. Kimball, of Vineland. Frank W. Allen was re-elected clerk and Robert D. Seargraves treasurer. The sessions closed with an address by Marshal A. Hudson, of Syracuse, N. Y.

Endeavoring to get out of the way of a trolley car and an automobile, Mrs. Sarah Payne, fifty-eight years old, of 927 Walnut street, Camden, walked directly in front of a machine operated by Lewis H. Christie, of 800 Market street. The accident occurred at Seventh and Market streets. Mrs. Payne was taken to the Cooper Hospital, where it was found she had two fractured ribs.

An action for $15,000 damages has been commenced in the New Jersey Supreme Court by former Judge Howard Carrow and William J. Kraft on behalf of Frank Worrell. Mr. Worrell was the driver of a carriage which was struck at the shoe factory crossing in Lumberton, on December 28 last, when Edgar G. Allen, who was in the carriage with him, was killed. Mr. Worrell was thrown from the carriage and seriously injured.

Awakened by a noise early yesterday morning, David Borquin, of 1008 Copper street, Camden, saw a man running from the yard and blazed away with a revolver from a window. It is believed that the fellow was shot, as he was heard to say: "Oh, Oh!" but no bloodstains could be found after the intruder had disappeared. Investigation showed that an attempt had been made to rob the house, entrance having been effected through a rear shed window.

Quite a number of dignitaries of the Episcopal church were in court before Vice-Chancellor Leaming in Camden yesterday in connection with the case of Mrs. Mary Lippincott, executrix for Mary Ann Kent, against the Vineland Protestant Episcopal church, including Bishop John Scarborough and Dean C. M. Perkins, of the Burlington Convocation. The action involved two properties deeded to the church by Mrs. Kent in 1900 with the proviso that they should not be given absolutely until after her death. In the meantime she had sought to have them reconveyed to her, but died before the litigation had been concluded. Now Mrs. Lippincott wants them to pay part of the expenses incurred in keeping Mrs. Kent for several years prior to her death.

BERGEN COUNTY MAN TO FLY TO GOTHAM TO WORK.

New York, Oct. 1.—S. M. Moore, a manufacturing jeweler, has won the distinction of being the first man in the United States to purchase an airship for private use. Mr. Moore, who lives at Highwood Park, said yesterday that he expects soon to be traveling from the Palisades to his place of business in Broadway.

"I have not tested the ship yet," declared Mr. Moore. "It may not arrive here until Friday. I shall have to engage somebody to teach me how to handle it, and have already asked Glenn H. Curtiss to be my instructor."

The machine is a Herrick-Curtiss aeroplane of the latest pattern, and was made especially for Mr. Moore by the Herrick-Curtiss concern, at Hammondsport, N. Y. Mr. Moore would not tell just what it cost, but said its price was less than $4,000.

—Edward V. French has leased his house on Watchung avenue, where he formerly resided, and has moved to 934 West Front street.

THE WIFE.

I stretch out both my hands to you
It pleased you once to call them fair;
Look now and see if anywhere
Are hands more scarred and worn than these
That lost their fairness serving you.

I lift up my two eyes to you—
It pleased you once to call them sweet;
Judge now if any eyes repeat
Their lack of light—poor eyes that wept
Their sweetness out in guarding you.

Oh, hands and eyes once dear to you
I would not they had served you less,
Yet hands like these who might caress,
Nor eyes like these win love again
For all their wistful prayer to you.
—Theodosia Garrison in Harper's Bazar.

LIGHT BREAKFAST DELUSION.

It is customary to make the first meal of the day slightly the lightest and distinctly the plainest and simplest of the three. If there be any deficiency of the appetite breakfast is the meal at which this is most likely to show itself. But this lack of appetite is in nine cases out of ten clearly traceable to sleeping in an unventilated room or to late hours in foul air the night before, or to insufficient exercise the preceding day, and is no indication that the body really requires less food at this time. Perfectly healthy men who sleep with their windows open and go to bed at a reasonable hour will tell you that they enjoy their breakfast as well as any meal of the day, and many even call it their best meal.

Another popular delusion in regard to the lightness and unimportance of the breakfast is that wide spread subterfuge, the "continental breakfast," consisting of a cup of coffee and some fruit or a single roll. This is a very pretty breakfast as far as it goes, but it doesn't go far, and the sole basis for its adoption on the continent is that it is only intended as a temporary tideover until the real breakfast of meat, eggs, fish, with beer or wine, which is taken at about 10 or 11 o'clock, like very early luncheon. If you haven't got a good appetite for breakfast make it your business to go and get one instead of allowing yourself to be blinded by this morbid state of affairs and decideding that all you really need is a cup of coffee and a roll or an orange or a puff of breakfast bran.—Dr. Woods Hutchinson in the Women's Home Companion.

WINGS AS A FISH-CATCHER.

Habits of the cormorant and of our native fish hawk are generally known. Their methods of taking fish are very much like those of birds of prey. But the cassowary fishes according to a method of its own. A well-known naturalist witnessed its operations on a river in the island of New Britain.

He saw a cassowary come down to the water's edge and stand for some minutes apparently watching the water carefully. It then stepped into the river where it was about three feet deep, and partially squatting down, spread its wings out, submerging them, the feathers being spread and ruffled.

The bird remained motionless, and kept its eyes closed as if in sleep. It remained in this position for a quarter of an hour, when suddenly closing its wings and straightening its feathers it stepped out on the bank. Here it shook itself several times, whereupon a quantity of small fishes fell out of its wings and from amid its feathers. These the bird immediately picked up and swallowed.

The fishes had evidently mistaken the feathers for a kind of weed that grows in the water along the banks of the rivers in this island and which much resembles the feathers of the cassowary. The smaller fishes hide in these weeds to avoid the larger ones that prey on them.

Exercise for the Student.

It is a well known fact that many of the girls who are the crack athletes in school or college are also honor girls in their studies.

Why is it?

Because mental work is easier, quicker and better when the body is given a chance.

The ambitious schoolgirl should make it a point to play hard in the open air for at least one hour each day. She should also walk to and from school unless the distance is too great.

When one lives too far for walking start early and let the street car catch you when you have gone about a mile. Repeat going home

Crazy Man in Powder Works.

Paulsboro, Oct. 1.—A supposed crazy man got into the Gibbstown Powder Works Wednesday and for a time had things his own way. He carried a big horse pistol and said there would be a strike and he would shoot any man who would not walk out. Ray Springer started an argument with the stranger and he was finally ejected.

Reward for Missing Cranford Man.

Cranford, Oct. 1.—A reward of $1,000 has been offered by the family of Philip Jahn, for information that will lead to finding him. Jahn is a painter. He disappeared on August 31.

SHOWER OF "STAR DUST" FOR THE EARTH IN 1910.

Providence, R. I., Oct. 1.—Frank E. Seagrave, a Providence astronomer, whose calculations relative to Halley's comet have attracted widespread attention, announced last night that the correction of a slight error in the calculations of the comet has developed the discovery that on May 19, 1910, the comet will reach the same plane as the earth in its orbit. It is thereby determined that the tail of the comet will sweep across this plane instead of clearing it. The earth and comet will meet on the same plane, but not in the same path. There will be a distance at the nearest point of 13,000,000 miles between the two.

The fan of the comet's tail, according to Seagrave, will spread out and for a short period the earth will find itself swept by "star dust" brought from many millions of miles beyond the farthest known comet.

"There need be no scare over the approaching event," said Mr. Seagrave. "Nothing will happen. The end of the world will not come. It will be nothing more than we have already passed through on June 30, 1861, when the earth swept through the tail of the 'comet of 61.' The nearest it could ever come to the earth would be 6,235,000 miles."

PHOTOGRAPHED THE COMET.

Chicago, Oct. 1.—The notable achievements of taking a reproducable photograph of Haley's comet, now 350,000,000 miles from the earth, has been accomplished at the Yerkes Observatory, Williams Bay, Wis. It is the first photograph taken in the United States since the return of the comet, which can be seen with the naked eye.

It is also believed to be the first photograph of the comet ever taken.

Divorce Recalls Elopement.

Paterson, Oct. 1.—The elopement of Editor Ludovico, of the defunct Italian newspaper La Question Sociale, with Amelia Canova, who was a silk weaver in this city, is recalled by the final decree for a divorce which has been granted to Effecio Canova by the Court of Chancery. The Canovas were married a number of years ago and among the friends of their household was Ludovico, whose paper was suppressed by the postal authorities and was driven out of this city through the efforts of Mayor McBride. According to the testimony given in the divorce proceedings Ludovico called frequently on the Canovas and an attachment grew between the woman and the editor, the result being that they fled to Old Forge, Pa. They were living there as man and wife, it was alleged in the petition, and their present whereabouts is unknown. The decree was granted last March and the final decree was issued yesterday and was sent to Lawyer Henry Marshall, counsel for the petitioner.

Civil Service "Exams."

Trenton, Oct. 1.—New Jersey civil service examinations will be held Thursday, October 21, at Trenton, Newark, Jersey City, Bayonne and Camden, for the following positions: Rodman, salary from $700 to $900 per year, and draftsman at the same pay. The above positions are for State, Newark, Jersey City and Bayonne service. Applications must be filed with the Civil Service Commission not later than noon, Monday, October 18, with Gardner Colby, at the State house, Trenton.

Date for Sale of Water Bonds.

Newton, Oct. 1.—The Borough of Branchville officials have set October 21 as the date of the public sale of $30,000 worth of water bonds to pay the cost of the municipal water plant about completed. Twenty $500 bonds and twenty of the denomination of $1,000 will be offered. The bonds run thirty years and bear interest at the rate of four and one-half per cent., payable semi-annually. The sale will take place at the Lodomo building in the borough.

Two Legacies to Priests.

Jersey City, Oct. 1.—By the will of Terence Reilly, formerly a patrolman here, two priests receive bequests of $100 each. Rev. Father Doyle, of St. Mary's Roman Catholic church, and Rev. Patrick Smith, of St. John's. He bequeathed $200 to his sister, Mrs. Ellen Foley, and his insurance in the Police Mutual Aid Society to his brother Robert. The residuary estate is divided among his sister and four brothers.

Students Placed in Lockup.

New Brunswick, Oct. 1.—Two Rutgers students, who gave the names of Frederick Brennel and Bert Howard, went about town Wednesday night pasting circulars on lamp posts and windows. Policeman Hardy placed them under arrest. They remained in the lockup from 2 o'clock until 9 o'clock yesterday morning, when Recorder Houghton gave them a hearing and imposed a small fine, which they paid.

Jumped From Window; Now Dead.

Trenton, Oct. 1.—As the result of a jump from a second-story window in St. Francis' Hospital, Sunday, Morris Aroniss, aged twenty-two years, died yesterday. Aroniss suffered from heart disease, and this, combined with the shock resulting from his fall Sunday morning, and the effects of his exposure to the cold, resulted in his death.

—The work of improving Terrill road is progressing favorably under the direction of County Engineer F. J. Hubbard.

CHOSE SCHOOL LOT AS PLACE TO SLASH THROAT.

Freehold, Oct. 1.—Adelphia, three miles below Freehold, on the Lakewood road, was treated to a little excitement when a demented man, John Herbeck, chose the schoolhouse lot as a place to commit suicide Wednesday. Herbeck, who is a stranger in these parts, applied for lodging at the home of Monroe Huff at Ardena, the night previous. He was denied admittance and now declares that he slept on a haystack, for the attempt at suicide was unsuccessful. When he made his appearance in Adelphia he asked some children if he could get in the schoolhouse, saying he wanted to kill himself. Unable to gain admittance, he retired to the lot in the rear of the building and slashed his throat with a razor. He then walked to Jeremiah Stillwell's blacksmith shop and asked for a doctor. Following Mr. Stillwell's directions, he called upon Dr. George McMillan, who bandaged his wounds up and telephoned to Freehold for County Detective William D. Hulse, who hurried to the scene.

Herbeck had become violent by that time and was holding Dr. McMillan and Charles Bearmore at bay in the street. Detective Hulse slipped up behind the demented man and threw him to the ground. After binding him securely he was placed in the automobile and hurried to the county jail, where Jail Physician Harvey S. Brown took eight stitches in his throat.

Papers were found upon the demented man showing that he had enlisted in the navy at Chicago in 1901, and was later discharged. He told the officer that he had been working as a machinist in New York, but had left the city when he saw the battleships come in the harbor Saturday. Herbeck was taken to the State hospital at Trenton.

CHATHAM BOY SHOT WITH FLOBERT RIFLE.

Chatham, Oct. 1.—Charles Wittreich, the eighteen-year-old son of Emil Wittreich, residing in the township, was taken to Overlook Hospital, Summit, Wednesday, with a bullet wound in his left groin. The physicians used the X-rays in futile efforts to locate the bullet.

With his cousin, James Wittreich, the boy went to the woods near their home yesterday to try a Flobert rifle. James loaded the gun and it was discharged accidentally.

James ran to the house to summon aid. After the injured boy's removal to the house, Dr. William J. Wolfe, of Main street, was sent for. The physician ordered him taken to the Summit institution. The injury is not considered dangerous.

SWAM THROUGH BLAZE WHEN FUEL TANK BURST.

Rahway, Oct. 1.—A. Moore, of Linden, a member of the Rahway Yacht Club, met with a severe accident Wednesday through the explosion of the fuel tank in his boat. The explosion threw Mr. Moore and his son into the water. The blazing gasolene covered the water about them, but the two succeeded in climbing up the wharf safe, although somewhat scorched.

Orville May and his sister Florence, who were in a rowboat nearby, had hard work to get out of harm's way. Moore's yacht was burned almost beyond repair.

GENERAL GRANT UPHELD BY SECRETARY OF WAR.

Washington, Oct. 1.—Secretary Dickinson finds nothing to criticize in the action of General Grant taking part in a temperance and law enforcement parade in Chicago in his uniform as a major-general of the United States army and says that as to such movements each soldier and officer has a right to determine that matter for himself.

Caught Boys Robbing Meter.

Rutherford, Oct. 1.—Joseph Rosenthal, fifteen years old, of Wallington, and Samuel Roth, sixteen years old, of Passaic, were arrested Wednesday by Patrolman Robinson while in the act of robbing gas meters in the home of James Willis, on Meadow road. Mr. Willis saw Roth enter the house from behind a tree, while Rosenthal stood outside on watch. Willis captured the boy in the cellar while he was tampering with the meter. He broke away from Willis, and both lads ran toward the meadows, but were caught by the patrolman on a bicycle.

Strangers Had His Rig.

New Brunswick, Oct. 1.—R. C. McWharter, of Stelton, reported to the police Wednesday night that he had left his horse and surrey standing on George street and it had disappeared. This morning Policemen Lyons and Hardy located the rig in charge of two men, one of whom, William Movus, said he had paid $100 for it. The other man was Robert Hicks. The rig was turned over to its owner, who made no complaint.

Veterinarian Charges Assault.

Elizabeth, Oct. 1.—Alleging that he was asaulted by Jacob and Harry Weinstein several months ago, while he was investigating a charge of cruelty made by an S. P. C. A. agent, Dr. F. A. Zucker, a veterinarian, has brought suit here against the two men for $5,000 damages. The men were fined in the Criminal Court for their alleged cruelty.

PLAINFIELD AGAINST PROVIDENCE OF NEWARK

The Plainfield Association Football club will meet the Providence A. C., of Newark, on the grounds at Clinton avenue and South Second street, tomorrow afternoon at 3:30 o'clock. The Providence team is playing fine football this season, and the local boys will have to be in their best form to beat them. However, the Plainfield team has not been defeated this season and they do not mean to be tomorrow. They will have to give a fine exhibition of the game if they are going to be victors. This will be the Plainfield team:

PLAINFIELD A. C. WILL MEET NETHERWOOD A. C. TOMORROW.

The Plainfield A. C. and Netherwood A. C. will cross bats on the Monroe A. C. diamond on Clinton avenue, tomorrow afternoon, when they will contest for supremacy. This will be the first time the teams have met. Both clubs have a star left-handed twirler, and as each will endeavor to secure the most strikeouts, a pitcher's battle may result. Frederickson has been the mainstay of the Netherwood team, and is one of the pitching finds of the season.

Dufford, the left-handed twirler of the Plainfield A. C., has pitched twelve games, won seven and lost five. He has developed into a twirler of class. In the catching department the Plainfielders out-class the Netherwoods, but the latter claim a better fielding team.

Hunt Club vs. Country Club.

The baseball teams representing the Watchung Hunt and Plainfield Country clubs, will meet on the grounds of the former on Plainfield avenue, tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock for the purpose of deciding the long tie game of last season. Morris J. Dumont is captain of the Hunt club team and says that his aggregation will "get even" for the way the country club beat them last year. Duncan Bulkley wil pitch for the Hunt club. The lineup for both teams is not known at present, but it will be the strongest possible.

Plainfield vs. McNulty Bros.

The Plainfield Baseball club will meet the McNulty Bros.' team, of New York, on Crescent Oval, tomorrow afternoon. The local club will present its original lineup as follows: Boyd, cf; Emery, 3b; Jack Martin, ss; Brit. Martin, 2b; Barnes, 1b; Schott, lf; O'Loughlin, rf; Seery, c; Randolph or Brewer, p. The New York aggregation will have its regular lineup, which means that the game will be a hotly contested one from start to finish. The contest will be called at 3:30 o'clock.

Baseball Games Tomorrow.

The following baseball games are scheduled for Plainfield and vicinity, tomorrow: Plainfield Baseball club vs. McNulty Bros., at Crescent Oval; Plainfield A. C. vs. Netherwood A. C. at Clinton avenue; Warren A. C. vs. Bon Ami Club, at Somerville; North Plainfield A. C. vs. New Brunswick, Jrs., at New Brunswick; Bound Brook vs. Somerville at Somerville.

TENNIS.

The final round of the women's tennis touranment, at the Plainfield Country Club will be played tomorrow afternoon at 3:00 o'clock. The competitors will be Miss Barbara Fleming and Miss Sarah Schuyler, each of whom has already defeated the other twenty entrants in the preliminary rounds, which were started two weeks ago.

NINTH N. J. SURVIVORS HOLD THEIR REUNION.

Seventy survivors of the Ninth New Jersey Veteran Volunteer Association attended the twenty-third annual reunion held at Toms River, yesterday. The old town gave the veterans a royal welcome, every house and business place being decorated with flags and bunting. The visitors were entertained by Burnside Post, No. 28, G. A. R. During the morning they were escorted through the principal streets of the city. In front of the court house the mayor extended a hearty welcome on behalf of the citizens.

Following the unveiling of the cannon, the veterans marched to the Opera House, where they were again welcomed. These officers were elected:

President, Gen. James Stewart, Jr.; vice-president, Col. Samuel Hufty, of Camden; secretary, Lieut. E. H. Green, of Woodbury. William E. Townley, of Elizabeth, a son of the late W. E. Townley, was elected treasurer, and George W. Wolf, of New Brunswick, was elected color bearer. George R. Townley, of Elizabeth, was chosen vice-president of Company K. During the session a young woman read, for the edification of the veterans, a poem written especially for the occasion by Edward K. Drake, of Elizabeth.

The veterans were entertained at dinner by the Women's Relief Corps connected with Burnside Post. The reunion next year will be held at Atlantic City.

"Through a Window," a play of San Francisco by Gertrude Andrews, in which Mary Bertrand is to play the leading role, goes into rehearsal next month.

John Slavin in "The Hot Air King," by Harry B. Smith and Raymond Hubbell, will begin his rehearsals next month. This musical comedy will probably open in Chicago for a run.

Klaw & Erlanger have given McIntyre and Heath the best show these clever comedians have ever had. They will leave New York with the prestige of a successful engagement in the John J. McNally musical comedy, "In Hayti," at the Circle theatre. Jerome and Schwartz have supplied in the songs, "Romeo and Juliet" and "Busy Izzy," two melodies that will be whistled wherever lips can pucker and hearts are light. There are one hundred persons in the cast and the chorus is not only pretty, but can really sing.

Charles Frohman has Bernard Shaw's word that if the American manager is able to carry out his plan of projecting a comprehensive season of Bernard Shaw plays for America, the witty playwright will come to America to serve as Mr. Frohman's acting manager in the enterprise. For this purpose Mr. Frohman has secured two new one-act plays by Mr. Shaw. The principal reason for Mr. Frohman's eagerness to get back to London is to project his Repertoire theatre scheme at The Duke of York's.

Charles Frohman, having now made five productions in America and three in London, has put into rehearsal "Inconstant George," John Drew's new play; "The Builder of Bridges," in which Kyrle Bellew will be the star; "Your Humble Servant," with Otis Skinner in the chief part; "The Bachelor's Baby," Francis Wilson's new comedy; "Israel;" and "The Harvest Moon," a new play by Augustus Thomas. Through his London general manager Mr. Frohman has begun the rehearsals of "Smith," the new W. Somerset Maugham comedy.

Under the management of Messrs. Shubert, Fred C. Whitney has again come forward as a producer, affixing his name to a contract whereby he will book exclusively through the Messrs. Shubert, and will only play his productions in Shubert and other-open door theatres in this country. Mr. Whitney's first production is "The Chocolate Soldier," which is to be seen at the Lyric theatre. The American adaptation of this operetta is by Stanislas Stange and the music by Oscar Strauss, the celebrated Viennese composer. "The Chocolate Soldier" is a musical setting of George Bernard Shaw's great satire, "Arms and the Man," and in the cast are Ida Brocks Hunt, William Pruette, Flavia Arcaro, Jack Gardner, George Tallman, Henry Norman and others equally prominent. Mr. Whitney will also produce during the season Lehar's newest musical comedy entitled "Gypsy Love," which George Edwards will produce in London, as well as another musical comedy, "The Satyr," by C. M. S. McClellan and Ivan Caryll. Another important production will be Paul Bourget's great play "Divorce."

HERMAN A. BERG TO ANSWER TO COURT.

Disbarment proceedings were begun in the supreme court at Jersey City yesterday against former Assemblyman Herman A. Berg, of Hudson county, and the court assigned Frank P. McDermott to presecute the rule to show cause why Mr. Berg should not be disbarred for unprofessional conduct at the opening day of the November term of the court.

The papers charge that he retained $750 for services in obtaining a loan of $3,000 on property for Anna Finkenzeller, of Jersey City, from Martha A. Kirk, of 19 Fairview terrace, New York city, and retaining in his possession since July, 1908, $500 more of the money.

Mr. Berg was elected as a New Idea Republican Assemblyman in a split delegation from Hudson county and served in the 1906 New Jersey Assembly. He was born in Hoboken, December 26, 1879, is a lawyer and identified with the Y. M. C. A. in his city.

MOURNING FASHIONS.

The chief materials employed for the mourning gowns this season are silk and wool armures, jet-finished silk voiles and marquisettes, also etamines and dull silks. For the suits and the long coats, jet-dyed serges and an occasional homespun or rhadame are used. Henrietta cloth also serves in very fine grades for the house or receiving dress; or, in its heavier weights, for the street suit. Black China silk is used almost exclusively for linings, and nets of various sorts are used over or with crepe de chine. There are also mourning fringes of crinkled silk, or of strands of sun silk forms, and much dull jet trimming in band and drop form.

A great deal of white crepe is used. It appears in some shops to be superseding the sheer linen cuffs and collars which for years have been the sole bit of white allowed to the widow in her first period of mourning.—Harper's Bazar.

HOTEL ASTOR COFFEE

Never Sold in Bulk

That's why it is so delicious when it reaches your table. Bulk coffee soon loses its strength by exposure to the air, even if it is of good flavor when first roasted.

Then again, no coffee made of one or two different kinds can have such a rich, smooth flavor as this famous Hotel Astor blend, which is made of several different kinds of the finest coffees grown.

Hotel Astor is the coffee most largely sold in New York City, where coffee users are proverbially fastidious.

It is far better than you thought any coffee ever could be. Try it once and be convinced.

It is economical, too—you have to use so little.

35 cents a pound. In tins—never in bulk.
Most good grocers sell it. Ask yours.

Why Don't You Economize on Coal?

The hungry furnace and the coal man are a hard combination to beat, but the

BOYNTON

is the friend of the man who takes care of the fire. The square fire-pot prevents the clogging of clinkers around the sides of the fire. That means all fire—more heat per unit of space. The square pot gives a greater surface for combustion and heat radiation and actually takes less coal for a good fire. And then there's the Boynton special flue for carrying away the dust. You don't sift ashes all over the house when you shake down the BOYNTON.

Talk it over with the BOYNTON dealer in your town.

There are BOYNTON heating plants of all kinds. Ask about our Round or Sectional Boilers for Steam or Hot Water. Also Ranges.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

One of the special attractions booked here for this season, and one no doubt that will break all records for plays of its class, is Delamater & Norris' sumptuous production of "Salomy Jane," which comes to the Plainfield theatre tomorrow afternoon and night. Rarely, if ever have any of New York's most speculative or enterprising of managers organized a company of the cost or magnitude of "Salomy Jane," for anything but a tour of the metropolitan cities, and only then at advanced prices. The management of this season's production, broad gauged in their business methods, and with the courage of their convictions as to the public's desire regarding their form of entertainment, are presenting here the exact and complete New York scenic and general equipment just as seen at the Liberty Theatre, where it ran for one solid year, and still holds the records for box office receipts. Paul Armstrong, the famous playwright, and author of many Broadway dramatic hits has transformed Bret Harte's successful idyl "Salomy Jane's Kiss," into a refreshing four act play of true western life, with all its quaint characterizations, scenic accuracy, brilliancy of language, wit, and every suggestion of the scenes of its action.

On Monday afternoon and night, Charles K. Champlin and his famous stock company will appear at the Plainfield theatre. His company is larger and stronger than ever and crowded houses await this popular attraction. Among the strong plays in Mr. Champlin's repertoire are "The Powers That Be," a genuine American play with a strong and vital motive involving a fierce struggle between widely contrasted human types and treated with marked vigor and originality; "An Old Sweetheart of Mine," a love story dealing with life on the plains; "The Panther," a thrilling melodrama; "The Charity Ball," a beautiful American play full of heart interest and sweet sentiment; a soul stirring story entitled "The Royal Mounted," one of the strongest plays in the repertoire, full of exciting scenes and thrilling climaxes, and several more strong and interesting high class royalty plays.

IDENTIFY TRAIN VICTIM AS ROSELLE PARK MAN.

The body of the aged man who was killed shortly before 1 o'clock Tuesday afternoon by being run down by a Pennsylvania train while walking along the track near the Fairmount avenue crossing, Elizabeth, was identified yesterday as that of Isaac Suydam, of Westfield avenue, Roselle Park. The identification was made by J. A. West, of Roselle Park, who visited Engel's morgue at Elizabeth yesterday by request of the borough officials. West had no sooner seen the face of the dead man than he exclaimed, "Yes, that's poor old 'Ike' Suydam." Asked whether he could not be mistaken, he replied positively that he could not.

Suydam was about 60 years old, and had been a resident of Roselle Park for many years. He was known by every man, woman and child in the neighborhood. His trade was that of cabinet-maker, but he had not worked at it for years, except to do odd jobs, such as repairing chairs, etc. He was a quiet, inoffensive old man, being his own worst enemy. He frequently left home for a day or two at a time. The theory that he might have committed suicide by intentionally stepping in front of the train that killed him is not credited by those who knew him best. He is survived by his wife.

As soon as the body was identified, word was telephoned by West to the authorities at Roselle Park, and his wife was notified.

HOSPITAL FUND IS $15,000.

Directors in Elizabeth Confident of Getting $20,000.

With only one-sixth of the families of the city heard from the donations to date for the Elizabeth hospitals reach a total of $15,000. In view of the large number of places still unheard from, the sum of $20,000 is practically assured.

The Board of Directors is meeting nightly and going over the returns. They will continue to do so until the work is completed. The captains and their lieutenants are urged to continue their collections so that the desired success may be achieved.

COLLAPSES AFTER ELECTION.

William H. Miller, of Westfield, in a Critical Condition.

William H. Miller, who defeated George H. Graher for the Republican nomination for Councilman in the Fourth ward, Westfield, is in a critical condition at his home in Cumberland street in that town. After the primary Tuesday night he collapsed and had to be taken home in a carriage.

Miller, who is a mason by trade, spent money lavishly to secure the nomination.

It All Depends.

THE KNITTED COAT.

As a sporting garment the knitted coat has its standing. For traveling its worth is not so well known. With it a coat suit of medium weight is available for all weathers.

For warmth on boat or motor (not to mention aeroplane) there is nothing to equal the knitted coat. The best of these are made by hand, and most of them are done with a loose, open stitch that provides for ventilation while yet supplying warmth. One of them, three-quarter length, is knitted in wide ribs, and is a mixture of brown and heather purple, with a little touch of pale amber to brighten it. It is double-breasted, there is a useful pocket on the breast, and there are two larger ones below the waist. The workmanlike character of this coat will appeal to the real traveler who knows what's what.

Many may prefer the shorter coats, also hand knitted, which can be worn either open or closed on the chest. Some of them are provided with roll collars, which can be turned up during a shower and rolled down again when it is over. The sleeves are wide enough to go easily over other sleeves and are caught in at the wrists with more closely knitted bands. Pockets, too, are supplied on these. In everyday life at home we may do without pockets, but when traveling we rebel against tailor and dressmaker who would forbid us these comforts.

HARNESSING THE MISSOURI.

Keen interest is manifested by Congressman Borland, of Kansas City, Mo., in the improvement of international waterways. The Missouri River is going to waste because of the failure of Congress to provide suitable appropriations for the improvement of the "longest stream in the world." At Kansas City and from that point to St. Louis, the Missouri pours along in a generous, if somewhat wayward flood of water. If its banks were protected and its channel cleared the river soon would cut a deep enough channel for any sort of inland waterway traffic.

The field products of Kansas in one year, with bushels as the standard of comparison, aggregate as high as all the coal mined annually in Pennsylvania. It more than equals all the vast traffic which annually passes down the Ohio river. It is not necessary to wait for high water; the water is there. If the government were one-half as generous with the Missouri in the way of permanent betterments, as good results for every month from ice to ice would be achieved as the Ohio produces in the few months of the year when it is available for use.—National Magazine.

EMPLOYES AS STOCKHOLDERS.

Professor Graham Taylor, in his department and Industrial Survey, in the September Survey, says that the International Harvester Company has advanced in co-operating with its employes far beyond the very successful Benefit Association and Pension Fund.

"The partnership-stockholding-profit-sharing scheme announced by the company July 1, 1909, also seems to us to be in advance of other similar policies in being most justly considerate of the employes' interests and vicissitudes. The company frankly states it to be to its own interest to offer to sell stock to its employes as an inducement to remain continuously in the employ of the company, and to have and show the active interest of a stockholder or working partner in the business. But so far from making ownership of stock any bar to independence in continuing in or leaving the employ of the company, the safeguards of the employe's liberty, as well as the money he has invested, seem to be as protective to him as they are liberal upon the part of the company."

THOUGHTLESS CLERKS.

Every business has a good will cap, and every satisfied customer is a feather in that cap. Trained men at high salaries are employed to keep tightly in place the feathers that are already there, and to add new feathers.

It is the advertising department that is most conspicuously engaged in the feathering process, while the adjusting department is most characteristically employed in keeping the plumes firmly anchored. Both of those departments are maintained at a large proportionate expense, which goes to show the value of feathers.

Who then in the organization of a business could be mischevious enough to pluck the feathers from the good will cap? Who, indeed? Yet, all day long, here and there throughout some stores, Peck! Peck! go ruthless beaks, impelled by raven brains in the heads of vacuous clerks. —From "Plucking the Feathers from the Goodwill Cap," by George Rockhill Craw, in The Book-Keeper.

"So you left the farm and came up to town?" interrogated the business man. "I suppose you thought every day up here would be a heyday?"

"Yeas, sir," drawled the bumpkin, as he twirled his hat in an embarassed way.

"But why did you leave the farm?"

"Because, boss, every day down there was a hay day. They never would let me stop ricking it, begosh."—Chicago News.

DISTINCTIVE FALL SUITS FOR MEN AT $15.00 and $16.00

It doesn't pay to go around shivering in your old Summer suit these chilly evenings when such good suits as these may be had for $15 and $16.

There has been an enormous demand for these particular suits this Fall, and it's only because of their unusually smart and distinctive appearance. You have no doubt paid $20 for suits not as good or as stylish.

Our $15 Sack Suits are modeled to please the man of a conservative turn. They're all wool unfinished worsteds in neat stripe effects over a green olive ground.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning Oct. 3, 1909.
By REV. S. H. DOYLE.

Topic.—Life lessons for me from the book of Ephesians.—Eph. iv, 1-6, 25-32.

Inasmuch as the title of this book is not found in some manuscripts and further that it contains no personal salutations, Ephesians is thought by some to have been a circular letter, sent first to Ephesus and then to be read in other churches of Asia Minor. This was not uncommon with the Apostle Paul. In Col. iv, 16, he instructs the Colossians after reading their letter to send it to Laodicea and also for them to read his letter to the Laodiceans. But while we may not hold this opinion we can see from the character of the Epistle that it was well adapted for such a purpose.

Ephesians was not written because of any peculiar difficulties in the church at Ephesus. It is a strong, stimulating letter to gentile Christians encouraging them to "walk worthy of their high calling" in spite of the many temptations to lapse into paganism. For those at Ephesus it was a difficult matter to live a sincere Christian life. Ephesus was the great port of Asia Minor. Its people were rich and licentious and fanatical. There was the statue of the goddess Diana, and their religious fanaticism was seen when in a demonstration against Paul thousands cried out for hours, "Great is Diana of the Ephesians!" But the Ephesians must have been faithful, even amid such unfavorable surroundings, for Paul has no word of censure or condemnation for them as for the Corinthians. They should thus teach us a great lesson. The world's allurements are many, but it "is not a means of grace to help us on to God." Like the Ephesians, we should stand fast. Instead of conforming to this world we should "walk worthy of the high calling of God."

Ephesians naturally falls into two divisions, of three chapters each: I. Doctrinal. II. Practical. In the doctrinal part Paul exalts the glorious inheritance to which the Ephesians were made heirs by the death and resurrection and exaltation of Christ; he contrasts their condition as Christians with that of their former condition as pagans, and speaks of the mystery which made it possible for them to become Christians, praying, after the manner of the Lord's Prayer, that they may enjoy the highest spiritual privileges. In the practical part he exhorts them to unity, warns them against certain immoralities, urges them in all the relations of life to consecrate themselves to God, and, that they may withstand the wiles of the devil, to put on the whole armor of God. The study of this book cannot but result in a spiritual uplift to every Christian Endeavor.

BIBLE READINGS.

Eph. i, 1-6; ii, 1-10, 19-22; iii, 1-7, 14-21; iv, 11-16; v, 15-21; vi, 1-4, 5-9, 10-19; I. Tim. ii, 5-7.

What Makes a Good Social.

The kind of social gathering is of less importance than the results that flow from it, and almost any social managed in the right way will produce good results, just as good corn will grow in almost any soil if it is well cultivated.

The old fashioned social is good, where people just stand around and chat, if they do stand around and chat, and not always with the same people.

The new fashioned social is good, where there are games and entertainments, if the games and entertainments are not an end in themselves, but a means which help people to get interested in one another and in the church.

The society supper is good, for it brings people together around a common board and leads them to break bread together, which is one of the best ways of overcoming formalism and getting acquainted.

The fair, bazaar or paid entertainment is good if we are sure to give people their money's worth and do not charge them the price of a "square meal" for "a lonely oyster swimming in a bowl of milk and water."

I do not share in the common prejudice against church entertainments where a fee is charged, provided they are conducted fairly and honestly and value is given for value received, for it is often the best way of bringing people together as well as a good way, though not usually the best, of raising money for the Lord's work.

Only let us remember, whether we eat or drink, whether we have entertainments for pay or free entertainments, old fashioned socials or new fashioned socials, suppers or games, to do all to the glory of God.—Francis E. Clark, D. D., in Christian Endeavor World.

Via Wireless

Novelized by Thompson Buchanan From the Successful Play of the Same Name

Since Jack Binns electrified the world with his C Q D wireless call for help from the steamship Republic a well deserved glamour of romance has clothed the whole subject of wireless telegraphy. The play "Via Wireless" appeared some months before the Republic disaster, and, strange to relate, the very day Lieutenant Sommers, the hero of the play, was sending out his wireless appeal for assistance from the yacht Irvessa, with no thought for his own safety, Jack Binns in the wireless room of the sinking Republic was duplicating in real life the heroic incident of the play. This live romance, the story of the play, has all the thrill of the Jack Binns incident, and more, for, while Binns risked his life for duty, Lieutenant Sommers risked his for duty and for love of plucky Frances Durant.

CHAPTER I.

JUST SUPPOSING.

FROM the brow of the hill above the Durant works Lieutenant Sommers, United States navy, looked over the city of steel stretched away at his feet.

He saw the acres of huge buildings, their hundreds of chimneys belching forth streams of black smoke; the long streets lined with the houses of the workmen and here and there figures that seemed in the distance pygmies hurrying to and fro.

Faintly the roar of the furnaces, the distant clang of the huge hammers and the clamor of the steel came to him. It was a scene to stir the blood of a man who loved action. For a few minutes the naval man looked in silence; then he drew a long breath and turned to the girl at his side.

"And all this will be yours some day," he said.

Frances Durant looked up with a smile.

"Yes; it does seem quite a lot for one wee bit of a girl to have, doesn't it? But I can depend upon dad to make some arrangements for running it. The steel works are his pride, you know, and he is going to leave them a monument to the name of Durant."

Lieutenant Sommers half sighed.

"Pinckney is a lucky dog," he said irrelevantly.

"Lucky dog?" The girl arched her eyebrows as she asked the question. "Why do you say that, Mr. Sommers? I don't understand."

Sommers smiled at her puzzled look, though she really had a right to be puzzled, for why a man, young, strong, good looking and an officer in the navy, with a medal for bravery already to his credit, should call another man "lucky dog" was enough to puzzle any girl of nineteen who was as pretty and independent as Frances Durant.

"I mean," exclaimed Sommers, "that he's a lucky dog because any man who is young and the manager of a place like this and has the prospects ahead of working throughout his life for you must be a lucky dog. Can't you see?"

The girl laughed in pleased fashion.

"Very clever, Mr. Sommers. But just now you are twice as lucky as Ned Pinckney, for the Durant steel plant is working for you, turning out the gun that is going to make you rich and famous."

The officer shook his head, smiling somewhat sadly.

"Famous, I hope, Miss Durant," he said, "but not rich. I am an officer in the navy, and whatever we navy men do, you know, belongs to Uncle Sam. He took us and licked us into shape, and he gives us our chance, and we must work for him all our lives."

"Well, anyhow, we are working for you now," she said with satisfaction, "and from all I can hear about the works your gun is going to be a marvel. It's something to make a gun, I tell you, but it's more to invent one. Ned Pinckney makes them—makes lots of them—but you've invented one, so I think you are the lucky dog, not he."

Her admiration was so genuinely sincere that Sommers, against his will, had to take it seriously.

"It wasn't just that I meant, Miss Durant," he said. "A naval officer has a lot, I know. I thought he had everything in the world he could wish until these last few weeks, since I came here to superintend the casting of my gun."

"What has made you change?" she asked.

The man looked straight at her.

"I've met you," he said.

The girl bit her lips, for she knew her face had grown suddenly red, and that irritated her. So she spread her fan after the fashion of girls of nineteen and pretended she did not understand.

"I don't see why that should alter matters," she protested airily. "I should think meeting me and meeting other people here would make you more in love with your own free, splendid life."

The navy man shook his head, and his smile was just a little grim.

"Perhaps it might make me in love, but not with navy life," he suggested. "Don't you see? The navy is wonderful. The life is the finest on earth. But let's suppose a little from the other side, and then you'll understand why I said Ned Pinckney's a lucky dog."

"Yes."

"Suppose a man is young and good looking and clever and the manager of a great plant like your father's, and suppose he's in love with you."

"It seems to me that you're a great supposer," laughed the girl.

He nodded.

"That's about all I can be—a supposer. Supposing is just about as far as a naval lieutenant can ever go with the daughter of a steel millionaire."

The girl shook her head angrily.

"Seems to me," she declared, "that naval lieutenants are very queer people even if they do wear medals for bravery." Then, with one of her quick changes of mood, she looked up at him most innocently. "Did you do much supposing, Mr. Sommers, when you plunged into the sea from the deck of your ship that winter's night to save an ordinary sailor?"

Involuntarily the man stepped toward her, his arms half outstretched. She did not move, but he stopped himself with an effort, dropping his arms.

"That plunge was nothing to one I'd like to take," he said.

The girl looked up at him, challenge in her eyes.

"Why don't you, then, Mr. Sommers? I could never have thought you'd be afraid of anything."

"There's one thing I am afraid of," he admitted frankly.

"Yes?" with a world of wonder in it. "What is that thing, Mr. Sommers?"

"Myself."

"Oh!" she said; then, after a pause, "You know we are a good deal alike, for once or twice I've been a little afraid of you too."

"May I finish supposing?" he asked humbly when the pause that followed her last remark had become significant.

"Supposing? Yes; I presume so," she agreed.

"Well, as I was saying, supposing a man, young, good looking, manager of this wonderful plant, with a manager's salary and future prospects"—

The girl yawned.

"Will you please tell me, Mr. Sommers, what that can possibly have to do with"—

"Wait till I finish," he protested. "Suppose he's in love with you?"

"Well," she said, "is it my turn now to suppose?"

He shook his head.

"It will be your turn in just a minute. You must get the other side of this suppose first. The second suppose is, Suppose I love you? Did you hear that suppose?"

Impulsively the man leaned toward her.

"Distinctly," she agreed.

"Then, if you have those two suppose clearly before you, isn't it easy to see why I called him a lucky dog?"

The girl shook her head.

"I'm afraid I'm very stupid, Mr. Sommers, but I can't see why an officer in the navy should call the manager of a steel plant a lucky dog under any circumstances."

"Perhaps if you weighed the comparative salaries and future prospects of the two men and considered both in love with the same girl you might understand," he suggested.

The girl laughed at him.

"Your deduction was very nice, very pretty, very clever, Mr. Sommers; but, you see, it won't stand the highest test."

"No?" he asked, surprised.

"No, Mr. Sommers, not for a moment. Let me suppose a little. Suppose you or some other officer could change places with the manager of the steel plant, or suppose the owner of a steel plant even should come to me and say: 'I have plenty of money. I can give you everything you want. Will you be mine?' And then I should say, 'I'm awfully sorry, Mr. Manager or Mr. Owner of a Steel Plant; but, you see, I have everything I want, thank you, and I don't care the least little bit for you.' Now, where would your suppose theory be then, Mr. Sommers?"

The man shrugged his shoulders.

"Anyhow, Miss Durant," he said, "the manager of the steel plant or the owner of the steel plant can go to the girl he loves, make his fight, take his chance and, like a man, abide by the result. But the navy fellow can't do that. All he can do is to bite his lips and twiddle his thumbs and regret and suppose."

He ended it bitterly, half turning away from her, so that he did not see the girl's quick, involuntary motion toward him. He was still half turned away when she fought down the inclination of her heart to speak. At last she gained self control.

"Of course, Mr. Sommers," she began sarcastically, "if the navy men are so selfish that they're not willing to give a girl a chance to show the stuff she's made of, if they're afraid to take any sort of plunge except a plunge for glory, why, they must expect to receive the reward that comes to the men who won't try—the reward of failure. If I were a man"—her voice took on color of strength and boldness—"whether I were in the navy or whether I owned a continent, I would not let any foolish selfishness of my own keep me from attempting to get anything I wanted."

"Frances!" The man whirled suddenly, catching her two hands. "You mean it?"

She looked up at him, happy and quite unafraid.

"Yes," she said, "of course I mean it." And her eyes invited him.

Impulsively the man leaned toward her. Then, as their faces almost seemed to touch, a cold, hard voice seemed to cut them apart.

"Ah! Good evening! I thought it was you two up here."

Angry, embarrassed, the navy lieutenant stepped back. The girl, with a woman's power of self control, seemed quite unmoved.

"Oh!" she cried gayly. "Is that you, Edward? Lieutenant Sommers and I were just talking of you. He says you're a lucky dog."

The marriage of Frances Durant and Edward Pinckney had been so long anticipated by all who knew them that the announcement of their engagement would have been received with a feeling of general relief. In the minds of their friends it would have straightened out an awkward situation. Under present circumstances their friends did not know just how to take them. For more than a year it had been generally understood they would some time marry, but the members of the set in which they moved had waited anxiously, but in vain, for some definite sign. It was generally taken for granted that Mr. Durant did not object, and Mrs. Durant was openly in favor of the match.

Frances herself was the stumbling block. Time after time her intimates tried to find out, but each time, with perfect good humor, but with complete thoroughness, she blocked every attempt. Finally, their curiosity blocked, the solicitous friends had decided to take the situation for granted, and so they had with perfect faith spread the report that as soon as Frances had reached her majority the couple were to be married. Even the people about the steel works had come to look at the matter in the same light. The men understood that the general manager was some day going to marry the daughter of the boss, and that made them treat him with more respect, for not only was he the manager, with power greater than most supervising managers had, but he was also expected to own the works some day himself.

Pinckney, too, was particularly careful not to contradict the general impression. He knew the influence it gave him, and also he was so tremendously ambitious and so anxious to bring the marriage about that he really believed it would be. And even an enemy must have admitted there was every reason for him to hope. The son of a friend, George Durant, who had committed suicide after ruining himself on Wall street, Edward Pinckney when a mere boy had been taken into the household of the steel millionaire. Durant had sent the boy to the best schools in the country. Boy though he was, Pinckney had appreciated the opportunity given him. He had studied hard, finally graduating from one of the best institutions at the top of his class. Then his benefactor had placed him immediately in the works. Durant had no son, and to him Edward Pinckney, with his inborn tact, his aggressiveness and his splendid mind, seemed just the kind of son he would have liked to have.

CHAPTER II.

THE SCHEMER.

THE big steel man was too busy with his great enterprises and his various future schemes to really study the boy. Had he studied him he was too shrewd not to have found out that Pinckney's aggressiveness was not backed by downright courage and that his faithfulness to his studies and his loyalty to his family were due wholly to selfish ambitions and not at all to gratitude or love to his benefactor. As for Mrs. Durant, it had not been hard for Pinckney to fool her; good looking, manly in appearance and with his ingratiating manners, he had completely and easily won the heart of the woman. Like many other busy men, Durant depended to a great extent upon his wife's opinions of young people, so when she declared: "Edward is absolutely the finest boy I have ever known. He is just the sort of fellow that I should love to have Frances marry when she grows up," Durant had taken the boy's character for granted. As for Frances, it would have been hard for her to tell just what she did think of Edward Pinckney.

She was a baby when he first came to the house, so she could not remember the time when she had not known him. At first she had looked on him as sort of a big brother. Pinckney himself had been the one to undeceive her on this point. Even as a boy he had outlined his plan in life. His future was too obvious for him not to see the plain and easy way. He would enter the steel works, apply himself to business, earn the commendation and then the respect and confidence of his employer and so finally pave the way for marrying Frances and inheriting the business through her.

To the scheming boy this seemed a simple plan, especially as he had so easily and quickly won Mrs. Durant over to his side. Frances he did not look on as a serious obstacle, for he was shrewd enough to know that with his splendid start and opportunity for working on her sympathies he had everything in his favor. The big brother attitude he knew was fatal. She must not look on him in that light. He must be the confidant, the friend, the guide, but not the big brother in any sense. This attitude he had carefully established while she was yet a child. He was always ready to go to any lengths to please her, and at first, with the trustfulness of a young girl, she took everything he did at its face value. Her mother, too, worked perhaps unconsciously in Pinckney's favor. She made Frances believe that everything Edward did was right and spoke of the time when he should manage the Durant steel works as a matter of course. Frances from her father had inherited a strong mechanical bent, so there was that additional bond of sympathy between them.

So matters had drifted along through her school days and Pinckney's college course until, when he came back from college to take up his life's work in the steel plant, the train was all laid and the odds were 100 to 1 in favor of the schemer coming off victorious, marrying the daughter of his benefactor and settling down as the right hand man of the steel magnate and the ultimate owner of the great plant.

Frances was barely fourteen when he entered the works, and he at once began to make her confidant of his plans and aspirations for the good of her father's business. The eagerness and enthusiasm of the young man quite won the heart of the steel magnate.

"Edward is a wonder," he was accustomed to say. "Never saw such a hard worker. I thought I was a hustler, but that boy will sooner or later be showing me tricks."

How little the millionaire realized the truth of what he was saying so proudly! Such energy and enthusiasm as Pinckney displayed must have brought his advancement in any business, and when his benefactor was also his chief and he lived in the house success was necessarily rapid. In three years he had worked up from a place in the draughting room to the post of manager. In each new position he made good, and Durant more than ever congratulated himself on his foresight in taking up the orphan son of his friend.

But Pinckney's love affair had not progressed so rapidly. Frances was glad of his success, but somehow she had ceased to be so interested in the man as she had been when a girl. By the time she was seventeen all the glamour had worn off. Instead of taking him in a sentimental way she had begun in her own mind to look on him as a sort of big brother. Pinckney did not know this. He felt that he was not coming ahead as fast as he had hoped, but he felt that there was time, especially as his hold on the rest of the family increased daily.

Durant himself now looked forward to the time when his daughter and the protege whom he had come to regard as a son should decide to marry. He trusted Pinckney more than ever, and he rubbed his hands with satisfaction at the thought that some day both Frances and the Durant works would be well taken care of after he was gone.

Frances realized this and by the time she was nineteen had begun in a vague sort of way to accept the situation. Her friends teased her and then took the attachment for granted. She knew that she did not love Edward, but she did trust him, and she had met no one whom she could care for.

Edward had spoken to her mother and father, and both had agreed that whenever he chose to ask Frances he had their permission.

Then during the summer of Frances' nineteenth year her father went abroad, leaving the entire management of the big plant on Pinckney's hands. This had brought the man and the girl closer than ever together, and Pinckney was just debating how soon he should make his attempt when he received notice from the government that the Durant Steel works would have the task of casting a new cannon which a Lieutenant Sommers of the navy had invented and that Lieutenant Sommers had been detailed to stay at the steel plant until the work had been done. There was another gun, the "Rhinestrom gun," in which Pinckney had more than a casual interest, but business demanded that the government work be accepted promptly.

One week after the notice from Washington Lieutenant Sommers appeared, and then Pinckney's troubles really began.

Doctor Hale a Boy at 80.

An example of Edward Everett Hale's light-heartedness is told in Woman's Home Companion for August. One day when he was about 80 years old he and I boarded a surface-car in New York. The car was crowded, but a lad promptly arose and gave him his seat. "Thank you, my boy," said Hale with great heartiness. "I'll do as much for you some day when you are 80—if I'm around then."

Plainfield in . . . . The Olden Days.

Re-printed from The Weekly Constitutionalist

March 2, 1871.

Improvement still seems to be the order of the day in Plainfield. We noticed in our perambulations about town many new buildings in course of erection, of which we shall have more to say in a future issue. Plainfield is growing, and is bound to grow.

Personal—We notice the arrival home of our fellow townsman and friend, Alex Titsworth, who has for some months past been sojourning in the south, where a branch house of his business is located. He looks hale and hearty.

Tuesday evening last about 9 o'clock, a stove in the upper part of Lewis' butcher shop on Cherry street, was upset, occasioned by the jarring of the building consequent upon movements made below, and but for the timely discovery of the same, the building would have been consumed. Mr. McVoy, who occupies the room, happened to be in at the same time.

The Fire Department having recently purchased 500 feet of new leather hose, the same was tested by "No. 2" steamer last week, and we believe the test was satisfactory, the hose standing sufficient pressure.

We are indebted to our friends, Mr. Schermerhorn, operator at this station, and K. S. V. Randolph, of New York city, for the intelligence of the safe arrival of the Tennessee last week, which intelligence, we, with our usual go-aheadativeness, immediately gave to the public through our bulletins.

Geo. W. Bingay, Esq., will lecture on Tuesday evening, March 7th, in Assembly Hall, subject, "Work and Wit." This lecture abounds in wit, and humor; do not fail to hear it. The proceeds of the lecture will be used to propogate the principles of temperance in our city by Howell Division S. of T. Admittance 30 cents. Tickets can be procured at J. E. Parson's Book Store.

LITERARY

Much that is interesting and instructive is found within the covers of the October issue of Physical Culture. Bernarr Macfadden, who is noted for his original and striking ideas regarding the cause and cure of ill-health, has written a series of articles on "The Natural Treatment of Disease," the first installment of which appears in this number.

Rupert Hughes, well known as a dramatist and musical authority, contributes to The Red Book Magazine for October what might be called a love story in philosophy. Its title is "The Most Interesting Thing in The World."

It is now generally known that Scribner's Magazine is paying Theodore Roosevelt the highest price ever paid for any serial in any magazine for his forthcoming articles, which are to bear the general title, "African Games Trails: An Account of the African Wanderings of an American Hunter Naturalist." The editors already have five of these articles in manuscript, the first of which, "A Railroad Through the Pleistocene," will appear in the October Scribner. The yalso have a large amount of illustrative material from Kermit Roosevelt, the official photographer of the expedition, all systematically arranged and labelled, showing a marked aptitude for detail on the young man's part.

So many alluring books are brought out in the autumn that magazine publishers—wise ones—make extra efforts to improve their fall numbers in order to keep their share of the attention of the reading public. One of the October magazines gotten out by wise publishers is Lippincott's; which is sufficiently meritorious to hold its own with the most fascinating of the best sellers.

Writing in Munsey's Magazine for October, Walter Prichard Eaton declares, in the course of an article on "The Ministry as a Profession:" "The Protestant churches are alarmed over the dwindling number of students in their seminaries, and the increased difficulty of securing worthy recruits for the ministry. The minister's lot, if possible, is to be made easier; no less for practical considerations—even if these are not always confessed—than for ethical ones. We pay the workman $3 a day—or a little more—to build the church; and we pay the clergyman $2 a day—or a little less—to preach in it.

The most timely feature of the October Century is the Clermont chapter of "Fulton's Invention of the Steamboat," written by the inventor's great-granddaughter, Mrs. Alice Crary Sutcliffe. This second of two valuable historical articles is devoted to the Clermont's making, launching and history; and the narrative includes many of Fulton's own letters and manuscripts now published for the first time, in addition to autographic plans for the Clermont, recently discovered. Other timely articles of the number include Mr. A. Barton Hepburn's discussion of the question, "Is a Central Bank Desirable?" contrasting the rigidity of the United States currency with the flexibility of the currency of other nations; also two articles on the growing use of the "finger print" system of identification in governmental and business circles. Charles B. Brewer tells of their use in the United States navy and elsewhere.

The October number is the first issue of the larger and amplified American Magazine, containing additional pictures, new departments and forty pages extra of reading matter. A remarkable new series of articles begins in this issue, by John Kenneth Turner, entitled "Barbarous Mexico." Few people in the world realize that actual slavery is at present not only being carried on in Mexico, but is tacitly protected and encouraged by the government.

The Venturer is one who keeps his eye on the hedgerows and wayside groves and meadows while he travels the road to fortune. That is the difference between him and the adventurer. Eating the forbidden fruit was the best record ever made by a Venturer. Trying to prove that it happened is the highest work of the adventuresome. To be either is disturbing to the cosmogony of creation.—O. Henry in Everybody's Magazine.

What do you know of Robert Fulton's title to greatness as an inventor? Read "Busting the First Trust" and see what John L. Mathews' research has led him to say. Did you ever read a story which kept your fingers itching to turn over the next page and which left you breathless and thoughtful at the end. "Caught in the Current" is the first installment of such a story by Leroy Scott. It is called the "Shears of Destiny." See October Success.

A great project which has for a year attracted the widest attention is begun in Scribner's Magazine for October. Theodore Roosevelt's first article on his African trip more than carries out the promise of unusual entertainment and interest. It pictures a wild and semi-savage region as it strikes Mr. Roosevelt's unusually receptive and acute mind. He is having a wonderful experience and enjoying every minute of it; and in this article the reader is carried with him through the joy of new sensations and the perception of wild and grotesque animal life as it appears from time to time during his journey. The article combines the zest of the born hunter and naturalist with the wide experience of a man of great affairs.

Although appearing almost at the end of the number, the feature of the October Atlantic which will attract widespread attention is Congressman Samuel W. McCall's paper on "The Payne Tariff Law." In seven magazine pages Mr. McCall gives a trenchant and illuminating analysis of the bill as finally passed, and calls it "the best tariff bill since our first revenue law was signed by George Washington." The paper contains many shrewd observations and is illumined by flashes of genuine humor.

Myra Kelly, the most famous writer of East Side stories, gained her knowledge of the slums of New York while teaching in an East Side school. Now that she is married, she no longer teaches, but her supply of humor and charm has by no means given out, as is testified by her latest and funniest story "Games in Gardens" in the October Woman's Home Companion.

ENDEAVOR HOSPITALITY

Local Committee Arranges for Meals and Lodging for Delegates.

CONVENTION OCT. 6, 7 AND 8.

Hudson, Somerset, Union and Essex Plan to Send Big Delegations —1911 Convention at Atlantic City.

At a meeting of the State Endeavor convention committee, of the Plainfield Union, held at the Y. M. C. A. Thursday night, the president of the union was authorized to pledge the support of the committee in assisting the State union in preparing for the International convention to be held at Atlantic City in 1911. This expression of willingness to co-operate will be sent to State President J. T. Sproull in time to be read at the coming convention.

Mr. Sproull is already at work for the big convention which will be of unusual interest, because of its commemoration of the thirtieth anniversary of the organization of the C. E. movement. Among the items of information in the program for the Plainfield convention is a special notice of the gathering to be held in 1911. Another item of interest in the program is the information in regard to the serving of meals to the delegates. These may be obtained for a nominal sum in the Sunday-school rooms of Trinity Reformed church, and will be provided by Mrs. Lindsey of "The Hermitage." Tickets for meals can be secured at the literature booth in the convention church.

The attention of the Endeavor friends is called to the work of the entertainment committee which is now actively engaged in securing lodging for the delegates, who are coming from a distance and will remain over night. All that is required is lodging and breakfast for three days, October 6, 7 and 8. The noon and evening meals will be provided for as previously stated. In this connection especial emphasis is placed on the fact that delegates will not need to be entertained as their time will be fully occupied at the sessions of the convention. The chairman of the convention entertainment committee has received so many requests for lodging for delegates who will remain throughout the whole convention, that it is feared there will not be enough homes offered for their accommodations, and the appeal is renewed for hearty support in this matter.

Hudson, Somerset, Union and Essex counties are making special preparations for large delegations to attend the Friday night session, when "Father Endeavor" Clark will speak. William Russell, president of the Essex Endeavor Union, is arranging for a special train to leave Newark at 7 o'clock.

Percy W. Cannon, the blind man, will be in charge of the prayer-meeting to be held in the Rescue Mission tonight, when special prayers will be offered for the success of the convention.

Hungry Burglars.

Burglars at New Market last night got away with some fire arms and managed to eat a meal undisturbed. By forcing a catch on a window at the resndence of Dr. W. J. Nelson they gained entrance to the doctor's house and stole a couple of revolvers and some trinkets to the value of $100. Passing on from there they forced an entrance to Lewis Walker's house further along on New Market road and not finding any valuables lying around loose helped themselves to a dinner of cold fowl and other choice edibles and decamped.

Will Become Hotel Proprietor.

Nelson Peterson has given up his position as mail carrier on the rural free delivery route, No. 3, which extends to Watchung, Martinsville and that vicinity, and an examination will be held at the postoffice Saturday, November 6, to fill the position. Mr. Peterson has purchased Binz's Hotel at Mt. Bethel and will conduct that place in the future. Information about the civil service examination can be obtained from W. B. Sharp at the postoffice.

DeBrigard Pays All Creditors.

Louis DeBrigard has settled the claims of DeBrigard & Collier, who made an assignment to William G. DeMeza several days ago. Mr. DeBrigard paid one hundred cents on the dollar and has reopened the art and sporting goods store on Park avenue as its proprietor.

Announce Engagement.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Carson announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Edna Carson, to Harry Jaeger. The wedding will take place at the home of the bride, Tuesday night, October 26.

BURGLAR PROVED TO BE FRENCH POODLE DOG

The police were considerably startled to receive notice of attempted burglary and chicken stealing, over the telephone last night, but ever alert for just such emergencies, Roundsmen Higgins and O'Keefe and Patrolman McDonald were rushed to 622 East Seventh street determined to capture the intruders. The call for help came from George W. Ord, of the above address and the disturbance resembling burglarious work was across the street.

Sure enough there was something doing when the cops got there, but judging from the sounds issuing from the premises of Robert Everett chicken thieves were at work. Sleuthing up ever nearer and with bated breath the officers formed a cordon around the grounds making escape for the nightly marauders impossible. Drawing their lines closer and closer until not a chance remained for the thief to slip through, they closed in and made a capture.

The prisoner was not a bold burglar, just a little French poodle. But he had managed to do considerable damage, even if he was small. Six good-sized chickens lay prone upon the turf, victims of the poodle's prowess as a hunter. He merely had stepped out of his class. The pup is held a prisoner at police headquarters.

IMPORTANT RULING ON FRATERNAL INSURANCE

That life insurance policies in fraternal associations may be rendered void by the failure of the insured to pay a premium on time, to the proper officer, although the money was actually in the hands of an officer of a subordinate court who neglected to turn it over in time, was decided to be the law of this State on Wednesday in the Supreme Court in the case of Peterson against the Supreme Court of the Independent Order of Foresters. Samuel Kalisch, Jr., and Abner Kalisch, the attorneys of the plaintiff, made a vigorous contest for three days to maintain the validity of the policy, urging alleged custom, waiver, estoppel, the law's repugnance to forfeitures and other similar grounds.

Craig A. Marsh, the general counsel of the company, a Canadian corporation, relied on the terms of the policy and the constitutional provision that no officer has any power to waive any of its terms or conditions. He said that the question was of the greatest importance, not only to the defendant beneficial association, but to all similar corporations in the country, and the duty of the defendant to submit the question to the court was one that its chief officers had no right to shirk.

Judge Adams at the close of the argument, delivered an elaborate opinion sustaining the defense and granted a non-suit. He also sustained the other defense that no action could be brought at law without first exhausting the remedies by appeal within the order.

Funeral of Miss Lord.

The funeral of Miss Blanche Lord, stepdaughter of Dr. William C. Boone, took place this morning from St. Mary's church at 10:30 o'clock. Rev. Charles E. Boone, son of Dr. Boone, sang the requiem mass Father Bogan, of St. Mary's, and Father P. J. Smith, of St. Patrick's church, Jersey City, took part in the mass. The pallbearers were J. F. Boone, a cousin of the dead young woman, Max Moraler, James Lennon, A. C. Thompson, Lester Clark and W. H. Duncanson. The interment was in St. Mary's cemetery.

A Birthday Surprise.

An enjoyable surprise party was tendered Miss Mary Lannon, last evening at her home, 472 West Front street, in honor of her twenty-first birthday. The house was beautifully decorated with palms and cut flowers. Vocal and piano selections were a feature of the evening. Luncheon was served at midnight to the guests about sixty in number. An enjoyable evening was spent.

DECISION IS RESERVED

Mrs. Catherine Hone's Complaint Against Her Husband Aired in Court.

MISS HUFF A SOULMATE?

Countercharges of Drunkenness Made by Hone and His Daughter—Hone Released.

Judge Runyon reserved decision in the city court this morning in the action brought by Mrs. Catharine Hone to compel her husband to support her. Evidence was brought to show that Mr. and Mrs. Hone were married in Brooklyn nine years ago and that she had left her husband twice since that time, both times leaving him for the same reason. The reason claimed by Mrs. Hone is a Miss Jennie Huff, a former silk mill operative of Potstown, Pa.

Attorney J. Henry Crane appeared for Mrs. Hone and R. Newton Crane represented Mr. Hone. Miss Huff the alleged cause of the trouble between the couple was not in court, and Mrs. Hone had no other witness than herself. She said that she had left Pottstown to come to Plainfield last August and while she had been able to support herself until recently was now unable to work owing to poor health. She knew that her husband was here and sought him out finding him living at 317 Park avenue in a house owned by John Manley.

Crossexamined by R. N. Crane she said that she went to the house and was denied admission and when at last she managed to get in it was through the window. Elsie Hone locked the doors and telephoned for her father who, upon his arrival had the furniture removed from the room and Mrs. Hone was left locked in without even a chair to sit in. She finally got out into the hall where she passed the night.

Hone and his daughter claimed that Mrs. Hone was an habitual drinker and had been the means of causing all the disturbance which has afflicted the family in recent years. Mrs. Hone admitted that she had used liquor, but claimed that she had never been intoxicated, but all this testimony seemed to be far from the point at issue, whether Hone can be compelled to provide for his wife in this city.

Hone claims that his relations with Miss Huff were merely of a friendly nature and that there was nothing criminal in them. He admitted having borrowed five dollars from her one day when he wanted to go to Reading to look for work and explained her presence in his home in Plainfield by saying that he had secured employment for her here in the silk mill over the Marshall Laundry. Miss Hone, his daughter averred that Miss Huff was a boarder and slept with her.

Summed up the case is a peculiar one and involves points in law which Judge Runyon will give his consideration before rendering a verdict. Hone was released in the custody of his counsel.

CHARGED WITH FORGERY

FORGED A CHECK FOR $32.00.

Recently Released From Jail on a Charge of Stealing From Benefactor in August Last.

Fred Stilger, twenty-seven years old, of Dunellen, was gathered in by Patrolman McGinley last night and held for the Westfield authorities. He was taken to Westfield this morning by Policeman Caulfield and will be arraigned Monday morning on a charge of forging a check for $32 on which he obtained the money from one of the members of the firm who failed to scrutinize the check carefully.

According to the complaint the crime was committed in August last and Stilger made a clean getaway with the money and has been in hiding ever since. He made his appearance on the street here last night and was immediately taken into custody.

On March 30 last Stilger was arrested here on complaint of Harry Snyder for stealing money from his house at 216 Manson place. This crime was committed under cover of circumstances which warranted the severest of penalties. Stilger was acquainted with Mr. Snyder and was befriended by him when Stilger was out of work and applied to him for assistance, on the evening of March 29. Mr. Snyder took Stilger in and gave him shelter and food and kept him over Sunday. On the following Monday morning while Mr. Snyder, accompanied by Stillger was on the way to work Stilger excused himself saying he had left his watch in the house. He returned to Mr. Snyder's residence and ransacked the upper floors, stealing the money he had observed in one of Mr. Snyder's rooms. For this theft Stilger served six months at Rahway and has been out of jail only about a month.

A largely attended and enthusiastic meeting of Knights of Pythias, of District No. 20, including Plainfield, Bound Brook, Somerville, Neshanic and Flemington, was held in the rooms of Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, K. of P., last night.

There were about 150 members of the order present, including Grand Chancellor Henry A. Heinrichs, of Paterson; Grand Vice-Chancellor Louis Drucker, of Elizabeth; Grand Prelate Harry Keeler, of Newark; Grand Master-at-Arms William Quick, of Somerville; Grand Outer-Guard George H. There was class initiation, six members being received. The work was performed by the grand lodge officers in their usual impressive manner. After the meeting all adjourned to the banquet room, where supper was served. The entertainment committee comprised A. D. Pope, chairman; Thomas Caleen and J. B. Higgins.

The meeting was in charge of District Deputy Fred Sears, of this city, who presided. Considerable business of a private nature was discussed. The candidacy of B. J. Schreiner, of this city, for the position of grand outer-guard, was given support by the visiting Knights and he will doubtless be elected at the meeting to be held in December. It was generally considered that the meeting was one of the best held in recent years.

REPERTOIRE COMPANY COMING NEXT WEEK

Charles K. Champlin and his big stock company will open a week's engagement at the Plainfield theatre on next Monday afternoon. The play Monday evening is "The Powers That Be," one of the strongest dramas ever written. A play of intense heart interest and one interspersed with pathos, bright comedy and strong situations is "The Powers That Be." The scenes are all familiar, and there is no straining for unnatural effects. The action is brisk and rapid, the climaxes real and the secenry is true and typical to the environments wherein the story is supposed to have been told. In addition to the play, eight of the best vaudeville acts ever seen in repertoire will be produced. They include the famous Aerial Budds, who perform the most daring feats in the air ever introduced before the public; Dottie Green, champion buck and wing dancer, awarded first prize at the Madison Square Garden, New York, against eighty-four of the best dancers in the world; Jean J. Kennedy, the funny man with a budget of new songs and funny sayings; Lulu Morrison and her five Japanese girls in her new creation, "The Electrical Dance of the Skies;" Thomas Schaefer with his wonderful dissolving views of all parts of the world; Dot Kennedy, serio comic singer and dancer, and the very best illustrated songs.

THIS CHURCH BURNED BY THE WILL OF GOD

When the St. James Methodist church building in New Brunswick was badly damaged by fire several months ago a member of the church was heard to remark that it was "the will of the Lord." Yesterday morning George K. Parsell, an architect, remarked: "If you want to know why the Lord burned the St. James church, go and look at the rotten trusses which supported the roof."

The repairs now going on which will again fit the building for religious services are making astonishing revelations of a danger which threatened the destruction of this building for many months, and placed in jeopardy the lives of the entire congregation every time it occupied the building.

The trusses which supported the main roof over the body of the church, four in number, had originally a resting surface of twelve inches on the upright side walls of the building. That portion of the trusses resting on the walls had rotted away to such an extent that in one instance only one inch of semi-solid wood was left to support the great weight, and several other ends had become useless except from three to four inches. It seems that after the timbers were placed in position on the brick walls the masons built brick work around them so tightly that the air could not circulate, and dry rot resulted.

It is evident that for months before the destruction of the building by fire, the condition was such that an unusual jar, such as an explosion in the vicinity or a conjunction of unusually heavy passing trains on the elevation nearby, would have caused the collapse of the larger part of the building.

War of the Roses.

The members of the Y. W. C. A. have formed themselves into two squads for the purpose of conducting a membership contest. One side is known by the red roses worn, and the other by yellow roses. The side which gets the greatest number of new members will be declared the winner and will be given a supper by the losing side. Miss Florence Prior is captain of the "yellows" and Miss Olga Lockert of the "reds." The war ends on October 18.

MAYOR TOWNSEND'S VETO

The Borough's Mayor Does Not Believe in Extravagant Administration.

HIS REASONS ARE SOUND.

He Won't Sanction Improvements When the Taxpayers Cannot Stand the Expense.

Two important matters were disposed of at the meeting of the Borough Council last night; the first being the vetoing by Mayor Townsend of the resolution passed at the last regular meeting of the Council providing for improvements to Regent street.

The Mayor gave several reasons for his action, the principal ones being lack of available funds for the work; posible changes to be made when the sewer question is disposed of, and lack of information as to the cost of the propcsed work of macadamizing the street.

The other matter disposed of was the passing to a second and third reading and adoption of the ordinance providing for the laying, repairing and keeping in repair sidewalks on every street and road in the borough. This resolution was adopted without a dissenting voice, and without protest from any property holder. The new ordinance will go into effect October 16 next.

Bills amounting to $3,299.97 were ordered paid and the Council authorized the Mayor to borrow $2,500 to meet current expenses.

Two building permits were granted; one to C. W. McCutcheon for a garage on his property on the north side of Rockview avenue and another to Frank Mobus for a barn on Duer street above Greenbrook road. During September thirty-six arrests were made and $63, added to the borough funds for fines.

GET IDEAS ON SEWAGE DISPOSAL PLANT ABROAD

President L. . Woolston occupied his chair at the Borough Council meeting last night for the first time since the early summer and presented for the benefit of the Council a letter written by J. E. Wilkes, associate member of the Institute of Civil Engineers of Birmingham, England, in which the latest European system of sewer disposal was made plain. Mayor Townsend in commenting on this very interesting letter said it was a curious fact that the estimates of the cost of the work was very close to the home made estimates. Mr. Woolston took especial interest in the sewerage question while abroad and it was owing to his inquiries in Birmingham that the letter of Mr. Wilkes was written. It covers three pages of typwritten information of much value to the Council in making their plans.

Councilman Stahl was the only absentee at last night's meeting, which was brief and concluded at 9 o'clock.

MOTHER FINED FOR ASSAULT.

Newark Woman Admits Pushing School Attendance Officer.

Mrs. Ann Pendergast, of No. 366 High street, Newark, was fined $5 yesterday by Judge Hahn, in the First Criminal Court, after she had been found guilty of assaulting Miss Ann Spann, one of the attendance officers of the Board of Education. Miss Spann had found Mrs. Pendergast's seven-year-old daughter playing in the street, and led her to the Pendergast home to inquire why the girl was not attending school. She said Mrs. Pendergast shoved her out of the house and slammed the door in her face.

The defendant admitted that she had pushed Miss Spann from the hall way and closed the door, but claimed that she was vexed because the woman, who was a stranger to her had said: "When you mother's don't know how to take care of your children we step in."

Mrs. Pendergast paid the fine.

The Sooner the Better.

"How old are you, Madam?" asked the cross-examining lawyer. The woman blushed deeply, and stammeringly blurted out:

"I—I," and stopped short.

The attorney looked guilty. "Please, Madam, quickly," he urged in a gentle, kindly voice. "It's getting worse every minute, you know."

JOURNALISTIC OPINIONS

Store Order Liquor Sales.

In the Union County Court, before Judge Atwater yesterday, the agent of one of the largest of the New York department stores, was found guilty, after trial by jury, of selling liquors without a license. This is, as far as it goes, a victory for the local authorities in their efforts to enforce the liquor laws of this State, as against liquor dealers in other States.

In April last Justice Garrison charged the Camden grand jury against liquor selling in that county by the department stores of an adjacent State, and in May Supreme Court Justice Bergen charged the Union county grand jury on the same subject. In the Union county charge the act of Congress was cited, by the terms of which liquor transported into a State became subject to the latter's laws the same as if produced originally in the State. It was further charged that where orders were given in a store in another State and the goods were delivered in this State and paid for at the time of delivery, the transaction was indictable.

Several indictments were found, both in Camden and in Union, but trials were held up because of an appeal taken to the Federal court. The disposal of this appeal did not interfere with the trial of all of the indictments in Union county. The evidence was straightforward, the judge's charge was direct and explicit, and the jury agreed upon a verdict very shortly after leaving their seats.

This may possibly put an end to these particular cases. The department stores may pay the fines imposed on their agents rather than go to the expense of fighting the issue through the higher State courts and then in the Federal courts. But it will not put a stop to their selling liquors. It will merely cause them to change their method of selling. Instead of taking orders, delivering the goods and collecting pay at the purchaser's home, they will simply exact payment at the time the order is given. They will simply change their liquor business from the C. O. D. to the cash system.—Newark News.

Had Experience.

The animal trainer having been taken suddenly ill, his wife reported for duty in his stead.

"Have you had any experience of this kind?" asked the owner of the circus and menagerie, with some doubt.

"Not just exactly in this line," she said, "but my husband manages the beasts all right, doesn't he?"

"He certainly does."

"Well, you ought to see how easily I can manage him."—Tit-Bits.

His Fun Spoiled.

"Did you enjoy your ride in the taxicab?"

WANTS $20,000 FOR LOSS OF RIGHT HAND.

Trenton, Oct. 2.—Judges Cross and Reilstab heard in the United States Circuit Court yesterday the suit of Bartholomew Genashi, of Camden, against the Public Service Corporation, in which the plaintiff sues for $20,000 damages for the loss of his right hand in a trolley accident at Camden.

Gendashi was a passenger on a trolley car in July, 1907, when he fell beneath the wheels and his right hand was crushed. He charges that as he was about to get off the car it suddenly started, throwing him beneath the wheels.

Counsel for the defendant moved a non-suit on the ground that the plaintiff had not made out a case, but the motion was denied. The defense was that Gendashi's hat blew off and that he jumped to get it while the car was running rapidly, thus causing him to fall with his right arm under the rear wheels.

Joseph Edwards, who fell from a scaffold at the plant of the General Chemical Company in Camden Wednesday, died Thursday at Cooper Hospital his skull having been fractured. A strange woman, heavily veiled, went to the home of Edward Irvin, at Turnerville, Wednesday, and demanded of Mrs. Irvin a little daughter, Anna, saying she was more entitled to the child than Mrs. Irvin, saying the latter is only a stepmother. An unexplained disease is causing serious loss to oyster planters in the Maurice River Cove. A Cedarville planter examined his grounds in August and found the oysters in fine condition. He estimated the value of the plants at $6,000. Several days ago he discovered that practically all of the oysters were dead. Thus far the trouble has not been widespread.

Found giulty of holding up Charles White, a negro, and robbing him of $18 in the Eighth Ward swamps, Charles Nwyock and John Zameswki, Camden youths, were let off with fines of $100 and $75 respectively, by Judge Joline. With a third youth, who is a fugitive from justice, the boys, all masked, waylaid White at night. With their loot and $57, which they enticed a youngster to steal from his father, the young robbers fled to Pittsburg, where two of them were captured. The parents of the boys paid the fines.

NEW JERSEY FAIR.

Indications are that the opening day of the New Jersey Fair, which is to be held at Olympic Park, Newark, October 9 to 17, inclusive, will bring together as big and jolly a crowd as ever gathered at one time to enjoy the attractions of any fair in this part of the country.

Especial efforts will be put forth this year to have all the exhibits in place on the opening day and also to make the day just as successful and enjoyable as any of the others during the whole of the fair. For this purpose special features are being provided for the opening, including a flower show, at which dahlias are to be a specialty.

In the afternoon there will be a horse racing meet which promises to yield some very entertaining sport. The field in each class will be large, judging from entries already received, and some of the best amateur racing stock in this section of the country will take part.

In addition to the other attractions, there has been arranged for the evening of the opening day a grand display of fireworks. Numerous original designs will be shown and set pieces appropriate to the occasion.

MAN KILLED RESISTING A SQUAD OF POLICE.

Essex County Prosecutor Mott spent a large part of yesterday trying to find out who it was that reported to his deputy physician, Dr. M. Herbert Simmons, of Orange, that a tragedy in that town was a suicide, whereas the facts of the case were that a man who had fired at four policemen in resisting arrest, had been shot in return and so badly wounded that he died a little later in the Orange Memorial Hospital.

The victim was Albert E. Demarest, a carpenter, who had been drinking heavily for months. Demarest, it is alleged, had insulted Mrs. Marshall, with whom he boarded, and Marshall was upbraiding him for it when the first shot was fired. That happened on the front porch of the house. After that Demarest locked himself in his room, while Marshall went and swore out a warrant for his assailant's arrest. Roundsman McGuirk, with Patrolmen John McDonald, John McCormick and James Dignum, were trying to get the man to come out of his room when he opened the door and began firing at them.

A member of the police squad sent a bullet into Demarest's abdomen and one through his chest. Although the circumstances of the case seem clearly to justify the shooting, it is probable that the policeman who fired the shot will be formally arraigned and paroled for the action of the grand jury.

"MODEL" CONVICT FLEES BUT IS SOON RETAKEN.

John Martin, serving three years in the State prison at Trenton for breaking and entering in Essex county and regarded since his admittnce, January 13 last, as a model prisoner, escaped from the institution yesterday morning by walking away from the home of the head keeper, George Osborne, in which his previous good behaviour had given him an opportunity to work. His flight was soon discovered and prison keepers, agumented by police and a posse of citizens, started in pursuit, tracing him to the woods and meadows south of the city.

At one time the pursuers were close enough to shout for him to stop, but he yelled back that he would kill any one who approached, and while the party halted he again escaped by leaping a high fence. He was caught later in the afternoon by a policeman, who found him hiding in a cornfield.

The head keeper offered a reward of $50 from his own pocket for the capture of Martin and called in all of the prisoners allowed to work outside and prison walls.

LEARY, BEATEN, BUT WILL RUN ANYHOW.

In Elizabeth Councilman Jeremiah D. Leary has decided to run independently against his successful opponent, Jeremiah P. McNamara. Mr. Leary's action did not come as a surprise, in view of the fact that he was beaten for the Democratic nomination by only seven votes.

Several of the other defeated candidates are now talking of running independently, including some of the excise candidates. Many of these believe that they would be successful at a general election, and would get bigger support than some of those who won at the primaries. The big vote obtained by some of the successful candidates is due in a great measure to the heavy poll in the First and Third wards in that city, where there were contests.

In the other wards, where the defeated candidates had money supporters, there were no contests, hence the vote was light.

LEGISLATURE'S NOMINEES

Senators to be Elected in Eight Counties, Assemblymen in Twenty-one.

LIST OF THE CANDIDATES.

Judging from Interest Manifested the November Election Will Be a Lively One.

The list of nominees for the Legislature is the chief theme political among the leaders just now. There are comparatively few men in it now serving in the Legislature, and in some cases the nominees are men who have had little or no experience in public office.

At present there is the usual lull immediately following the primaries and the opening of the campaign. Judging from the interest manifested in both parties the strife for victory at the polls in November will be the liveliest one Jersey has seen in a decade.

While Senators will be elected only in eight counties, Assemblymen will be voted for in all the twenty-one counties of the State.

The list in full follows:

Mrs. Catherine Schuster, wife of Christian Schuster, of No. 79 Court street, Elizabeth, and three of her six children have been missing from their home here since Monday night. APPROVES STATE HIGHWAY

Shortens Route from North Jersey to South Jersey Resorts.

State Road Commissioner Frederick Gilkyson approved yesterday at Trenton the surveys for eighteen miles of improved roads from Beasley's Point to Cape May Court House, Cape May county.

This will shorten by twenty-eight miles the road from North Jersey to the South Jersey coast resorts. The improvement will include the building of a bridge across the mouth of the Great Egg Harbor river from Beasley's Point to Somers Point.

WARREN DIXON AND DETECTIVES SUED.

Four Elizabeth private detectives have been named as defendants to a suit brought by Thomas A. Aiton, of Elizabeth, to recover damages for injuries, which he alleged he received when they raided the home of Mrs. Eleanor Bentley S. Dixon, last May, in search for divorce evidence for Warren Dixon, corporation counsel of Jersey City, whose suit is now pending in the Court of Chancery. Aiton was arraigned after the raid and placed under bond for a hearing.

Sidney Eldridge and Alfred A. Stein are Aiton's counsel. The detectives' names are Thomas Carey, James Dowd, Edward S. Kenney and Christopher Van Pelt.

Two Jersey City detectives, William J. Thompson and Samuel Silkler, and Mr. Dixon himself are included in the list of defendants. Aiton places his damages at $25,000. The declaration is returnable at Trenton on October 7. Corporation Counsel Dixon and some of the detectives were served with the declaration yesterday. In it Mr. Aiton sets up that Mr. Dixon and the six detectives pummelled him and bore him to the ground. Mr. Aiton further claims that following this assault he was taken from 350 Clinton street to Elizabeth Police Headquarters, the route of which carried him through several public streets; that he was confined in a police cell for three and one-half hours, that no lawful complaint was made against him, and that as a result of all that happened he was held up to shame and ridicule, and was greatly humiliated and disgraced.

Aiton, it is rumored, after the raid, tried to have Mr. Dixon indicted by the Hudson County Grand Jury, but failed.

GOVERNOR TO REVIEW HOLY NAME PARADE.

Throughout Hudson county the members of the Holy Name Society are making elaborate preparations for the annual rally and parades which will take place on Sunday, October 10, when more than 60,000 men who have pledged themselves to abstain from and discourage the use of profanity will march through the streets and take part in open-air religious services.

Governor Fort has accepted an invitation to review the parade in West New York and deliver an address. Bishop John J. O'Connor will preside at the services in Jersey City.

The Bayonne branches, numbering six thousand men, will hold services at Columbia Park.

WIDOW GETS EQUAL SHARE.

Mrs. Marie Elizabeth Castles, widow of John W. Castles, whose will was admitted to probate in New York yesterday, lives at Morristown with her two children, Frances and John W. Castles, Jr. By the provisions of the will she and the children share in the estate equally.

Mr. Castles was president of the Union Trust Company, 80 Broadway, New York, at the time of his death.

CARD OF THANKS.

Mrs. Mary Seals and family wish to extend their most sincere thanks to the many friends and neighbors for their kindness in her latest bereavement.

"To Remind Ye!"

Mr. Seymour Eaton tells a story about "Pat" and "Dublin". Here it is in brief:—We visited one of the show places of Dublin, were given a guide and a pass. On the PASS was printed positive instructions that "tips" must not be given to employees.

Pat showed us around very nicely and when told that we were sorry the rules prevented our giving him a "tip" he said—

"Begorra, that printing is only to remind ye of it."

PIANO CONTEST FAKES EXPOSED!

IMPORTANT FACTS FOR HOLDERS OF GOLD BONDS, PIANO COUPONS AND DISCOUNT CERTIFICATES.

There are several Piano houses which have no prices for their goods except grossly inflated ones arranged expressly for fake discounts in connection with schemes of various kinds. These houses seem to find it impossible to dispose of their pianos in a legitimate, straightforward way, but instead resort to one scheme after another—catch-penny devices, so crude as to be positively insulting to the intelligence of the public. These schemes usually take the form of guessing contests, drawing puzzles and various feats of little skill. In all of them the object is identical to mislead the prospective buyer into the belief that he is getting something for nothing, while at the same time prices are arranged sufficiently high to off-set the allowance to which his prize certificate entitles him.

EVERYONE WHO MAKES A GUESS GETS A PRIZE!

If you have ever answered one of these ads you received a discount certificate. EVERYBODY DOES. It matters not whether the answer is good, bad or indifferent, from adult or child it draws a prize in the shape of a certificate or due bill (generally from $65.00 to $100.00) to apply on the purchase of a new Piano. Of course the price of the Piano is fixed accordingly and the purchaser pays a high price even after the amount of certificate is deducted, usually a much higher price than an instrument of similar quality could be secured for in any legitimate music store.

To test the value of one of these certificates present it in payment for something other than a new piano—say a low priced used piano, music cabinet or a bench, and see how quickly the dealer will turn you down. He will not even give you 50 cents worth of music for it. Try the experiment!

AT $185.00 WE WILL SELL A BETTER PIANO THAN THE SCHEME HOUSES ASK $325.00 TO $400.00 FOR! Such well known and high grade makes as Haines Bros., Brewster, the Genuine Mathushek and others too numerous to mention.

WOMEN CAN MAKE THEMSELVES ATTRACTIVE

Physical beauty is a gift of nature, but attractiveness lies largely within a woman's own power. There is scarcely a woman on earth who cannot make herself attractive unless she is handicapped by some terrible deformity such as happens to few of us.

The first secret of personal charm has to do with the way in which the body is held. It is with the general carriage of the entire body that we make our first impression, for good or bad. The woman who slinks into a room with drooping head, shoulders down and every sagging line of her figure expressing self-depreciation, will not make a convincing impression. Business women have learned this. The experienced working girl of nearly every grade has acquired a self confidence that lifts her head, straightens her shoulders and makes her step firm and buoyant.

When the head droops, lift it. A face can be transformed from mediocrity to attractiveness by the persistent lifting of the head to a good poise. The shapeless, sagging muscles at the throat gradually take on a smooth line of beauty that reevals visibly a growth in force of character and determination.

Take a handglass and look in the mirror at your profile when your chin rests in its usual slipshod position on top of your collar. Now lift the chin and see how that long, curved line of the throat acquires beauty and how it improves the entire face. You could not have a more forceful object lesson on the importance of cultivating a well-poised head and chin.

Next set a watch upon your chest. The habit of lifting your head will help you also to carry your chest up. The sunken chest means inefficient breathing, consequently poor health and no hope of attractiveness. Watch how you stand. Check yourself persistently from falling into slipshod attitudes. Pull yourself together and force yourself to stand with chest up, abdomen in, head well poised and feet lightly planted with the weight on the balls.

There are many books of exercises in the public libraries which will help you to acquire flexibility and grace of motion. But you can do much for yourself if you will remember to turn all kinds of bodily work into beneficial exercise by doing it as a pleasure and taking deep, long breaths as you do it.

Deep breathing, which is surely within the reach of everybody in any place, is of itself a good exercise, and will develop the chest and figure. Practise by drawing a few deep breaths as often during the day as you can think of it. On awakening in the morning stretch the entire body, as you have often seen infants do, and draw half a dozen long, deep breaths slowly, and you will feel like springing out of bed with energy.

No woman is too busy, either with household tasks or office work, to take ten minutes daily for a sponge bath of the whole body.

Another way in which the busiest woman can get exercise is in walking. She may not have time for the cross country tramps of her more leisurely sisters; but she can at least walk to to office, shop, market, and on all her errands. To walk with head up, chest up, breathing deeply as you go, is splendid exercise, within the reach of all.

Of course, if you can play tennis, row, swing a pair of lightweight Indian clubs, ride horseback or punch a medicine ball, so much the better for your figure and your complexion. You should do those things if you have the leisure and the opportunity. But if you have not, the situation is not hopeless, for by the very simple means suggested you can improve both your health and your personal appearance.

MISSING MAN HAD BEEN KILLED BY FALL.

The mystery as to the disappearance of Donald McDiarmid from his home in North avenue, near Euclid avenue, Westfield, last Monday morning was cleared up yesterday by the finding of his dead body. The corpse was discovered at the bottom of a shaft in a barn on the Wilbur Cory farm at Mountainside by Walter Snearowski, a brother-in-law of Mr. Cory. It appears to be evident that McDiarmid, who had been employed on the farm, had fallen down the shaft. One of his hands still clutched a lunch basket that he carried from his home when he left there the last time. His appearance at the farm last Monday had not been noticed by the occupants, and the place where the body was found was so dark that Snearowski did not see the body till he stumbled over it. The county physician certified that death was due to a fall. McDiarmid, who was forty-three years old, leaves a mother and sister. He was unmarried.

ENGAGEMENT RING HAS RIVAL IN BRACELET

Are engagement rings going out of fashion?

A few years ago such a question would have sounded absurd, but today the ring has a serious rival in the "betrothal bracelet," which seems to be becoming more and more popular.

The betrothal bracelet had its origin in a very pretty idea. It was first made in the form of a plain gold chain fastened by a tiny padlock, and this padlock was made with a small spring, which had to be pressed when the owner wished to remove the chain.

It occurred to some fond lover to have this spring filed away, so that when once the padlock had been closed it could never again be opened, but would hold the bracelet on the arm of the wearer forever.

The lock, which could never be undone, was to be a symbol of constancy.

That was the origin of the betrothal bracelet, and other lovers, with quick appreciation of such a pretty sentiment, have asked their respective fiancees to wear them instead of the conventional ring.

In the newest patterns jewelers are making the padlocks in the form of hearts similar to those sometimes worn as charms. The locking mechanism is, of course, quite out of reach, so that it is absolutely impossible to open the clasp when once it has been closed. Made thus, it is an emblem of unchanging affection.

Another idea is to have the heart-shaped padlock fitted with a minute key, which the fiance may wear on his watch chain after he has placed the bracelet upon the arm of his lady but this form is not likely to become so popular as the other, because the real charm of the betrothal bracelet seems to be lost if there is a possibility of removing it.

One young man had a tiny portrait of his fiancee set in a ring, and insisted upon having it covered by a large diamond, which had to be cut in the form of a beveled watch glass. Naturally, this cost a large sum, but the ring, when completed, was a work of art. He wore this diamond-covered portrait of his fiancee, who was an exceptional pretty girl, on the third finger of his left hand.

Men wear engagement rings much more now than formerly. As a rule, however, they are very simple. A signet or diamond ring is the most popular.

One very old design for an engagement ring has recently been reintroduced. This has no stones, but shows two hands clasped together. It is pretty and very simple.

Irish lovers are fond of a shamrock formed of emeralds.

One of the most elaborate engagement rings made recently in London was for a young Scotch lord who wanted his tartan represented in precious stones.

The work cost weeks of labor, for the stones had to be so minute that they were scarcely visible. When they were all set the tartan was perfectly represented, and the ring is probably one of the best examples of the jeweler's art ever made.

DIAMONDS PAY THEIR WAY INTO AMERICA.

"Very few diamonds are smuggled into this country now, whatever may have been the case in former days," declared the agent of a large jewelry house in this city, who makes a yearly trip to Europe to purchase precious stones. "The amount that is brought in without duty is so small as to have no effect on the market. Uncut diamonds are not taxed. The duty on cut stones is but 10 per cent. Amsterdam, Holland, is the great market for diamonds. Nearly all the New York dealers who import buy from that city. Eighty per cent of the diamond cutting for the world is done at Amsterdam. Few small diamonds are cut in New York city. There are almost no facilities here for doing the work. The experienced cutters at Amsterdam can turn out the work cheaper than it can be done on this side of the water even when the customs duty is added to the rates paid the Holland manufacturers. Large diamonds, above three-quarters of a carat, are cut here, but most of this work is recutting for the changes in styles of setting."

Satan Terrified.

There is as great genius displayed in advertising as in the higher branches of literature. No problem daunts the modern advertising man.

In the window of a little book store in Eighth avenue, New York, was recently heaped a great pile of Bibles, marked very low—never before were Bibles offered at such a bargain; and above them all, in big letters, was the inscription:

"Satin trembles when he sees Bibles sold as low as these."

Coals of Fire.

The druggist at the corner drug store had rolled back the woman's eyelid and relieved her of untold agony by removing several grains of sand that she had accumulated at the seashore. She smiled at him gratefully.

"What do I owe you?" she asked.

"Nothing at all," said she. "You buy nearly all your postage stamps here, you know."—New York Press.

From the moment of their first meeting Frances Durant and Lieutenant Sommers had seemed mutually drawn to each other. To each the other was an entirely new type. Frances had never met a man just like the young naval lieutenant. Up to that time her experience had been with men like Pinckney, who thought apparently only of business and getting ahead, or with young men of the opposite extreme, who went in entirely for society and dissipation of all kinds.

Sommers accordingly came as a new and very refreshing experience. He apparently had all the best qualities of the two kinds of men she had known before. He was young, good looking, brave, and that he had brains was proved by his invention of the Sommers gun, which the government had accepted provisionally and which was to be cast in the Durant steel works. Then, also, to the glamour of his uniform and his reputation the young naval officer brought the charm of a cultured man of the world. He had been everywhere and seen practically all there was for a man to see, and, unlike many men of his profession, he could talk about it, and talk well. So it was no wonder that the girl almost immediately felt herself drawn to him. They had so many interests in common. She knew machinery and knew all about the works, and he was up in that too. Then he drove, walked, played tennis, danced and golfed better than any one she knew in Pittsburg. So it was no wonder that from the time of Sommers' arrival Pinckney found himself put aside.

For a week the manager of the steel works did not notice the fast growing friendship. He was very busy and had little time for outside interests. Then, also, he felt so confident that he did not pay as much attention to Frances and what she was doing as he might have had he imagined there was the slightest chance of serious rivalry. That idea at first did not enter his head. Compared to his own position, he considered the post of a lieutenant in the navy insignificant. It was not until a week had gone by and he discovered that Frances had been out with the officer for several hours each day that he finally awoke to the danger of the situation from his point of view. Then his first move was foolish. He asked Frances to go to the theater with him that night.

"I am awfully sorry, Edward," she told him; "but, you see, Mr. Sommers and I are going tonight to that play. But I am sure he would be glad to have you come along. I'll get one of the girls, and we will make up a party."

"No, thanks," the man retorted shortly. "I don't care anything for the theater, you know. I only asked because I thought you might wish to see the play."

She smiled on him sweetly.

"I know how self sacrificing you are, Edward, about the theater; but, you see, you need not bother while Mr. Sommers is here. You have been awfully good to me about it, but now you can have a long rest, because, you see, he is devoted to it, and he says he gets ashore so seldom that he likes to go at every opportunity. Isn't that nice for you?"

"Of course that is all right, Frances," he agreed stiffly, "but any time you do wish to go it will be a great pleasure for me to take you. If I were you I would not go out too much with this naval whippersnapper. You know how people talk, and you don't want to get the gossips wagging their tongues about you and a penniless naval lieutenant. It's easy to start gossip in Pittsburg, you know."

The girl's head came up sharply, and her smile was dangerously bright as she replied:

"That is awfully sweet of you, Edward, to warn me about penniless naval officers, but don't you think that a man who can invent a new gun is quite as good as a man who can merely make one? And then, Edward, dear, even you might be practically penniless if father had not started you."

And, smiling, she left him with his jaw set tight and every nerve muscle quivering with anger.

"Penniless," he muttered at last. "A man who invents guns as good as a man who merely makes them. I am a puddler or a mechanic, I suppose, in her eyes. Might be penniless but for her father. Well, we will see."

He whirled away from the house where they had been talking and hurried down to the works. Upon reaching them he immediately sent for William Marsh, the head draughtsman.

William Marsh had been with the Durant works since early manhood. His whole life was wrapped up in the place. Unceasing application had raised him to his present responsible and arduous position; but, like many another man who gives his life unreservedly to one concern, he had come to find himself in the end ill repaid. To make matters worse his only child, a bright, promising young fellow of twenty, had died as the result of a terrible accident in the chemical room, and the father could not help believing that had Pinckney used proper discretion in selecting the boss of the work the accident might not have occurred.

All this had tended toward a breach between them, only Pinckney was one who cared little for breaches with his employees. He was born to rule and since becoming manager had ridden roughshod over all opposition. Particularly Marsh, fifty years old, spare, physically weak and essentially a dreamer, in love with his own work, was little fitted to cope with the iron-willed manager.

Pinckney was still fuming when the head draughtsman arrived.

"Marsh," he said shortly, "I have decided definitely to push the Rhinestrom gun. I believe it's a great gun and will prove very effective."

"It's all of that," returned the draughtsman shortly.

"I think so," agreed the manager, "and we must hurry the work along as fast as possible. By the way, what do you think of this new gun—the Sommers gun that this dandified naval lieutenant is here to have cast?"

Marsh did not know how eagerly the manager was listening for his reply. He paused judicially a moment, then said hesitatingly:

"I'm sorry, Mr. Pinckney, but from what I can make out it will make a pretty good weapon. The fellow has hit on something new, and it may prove a wonder. Either very good or rotten, that is the way I size it up."

"You mean from the principle on which it is constructed it will either prove a winner or burst and kill a lot of people?" questioned the manager cautiously.

"Exactly," agreed Marsh, "and it will have to be very carefully made or it will burst for sure. We don't want that."

"Then you do not think it is as good a gun as the Rhinestrom gun?" suggested Pinckney.

A dull flush rose in Marsh's pale cheeks. His whole body quivered. It was the anger of a parent whose child had been attacked.

"There isn't any gun as good as the Rhinestrom gun," he cried hotly. "I invented it and I know, and, what's more, while we are on the subject, I want to tell you that I think you are doing me a dirty injustice. I have put the best part of my life on that gun, and you have patented it and put a Dutch name on it, and I don't get a cent or any credit."

Pinckney jumped from his chair, his own face red with anger.

"Look here, Marsh," he cried, "just a little more like that and I'll fire you out of these works! Who do you think you are? Don't you know that we have been paying you a salary for years for your time and your brains! We did not pay you for your looks. I'll put the name Rhinestrom on that gun or any name I please, and if you don't like it you can get out. There are plenty of men who would be glad to have your job."

But for once the weaker man would not be cowed.

"All right," he cried, "I'll get out! There are other places to work, and all my ideas have not gone yet. And,

"You let my boy be killed."

what's more, as soon as Mr. Durant gets back from Europe I'll go to him and lay the case before him. I was a fool not to tell him my plans in the first place instead of coming to you. I ought to have known what I would get from you. You"—the old man's voice broke against his will—"you let my boy be killed by your carelessness and lack of judgment in selecting men for the chemical room, and now you would rob me of all the credit and the money for my life's work. We'll see about this."

He stepped up close, savagely confronting the big manager.

Pinckney hesitated. His inclination was to throw Marsh out, but an idea, born of a girl's taunting, was in his mind, and he felt he must temporize. It was bitter to surrender to an employee, but Pinckney was a man who would submit to any number of minor defeats for a big end.

So he forced the best smile he could and held out his hand.

"Forgive me, Marsh," he said. "I am hot tempered, you know, and I have had a great deal to worry me. You have always had a wrong idea of me ever since that unfortunate accident in the chemical room. But every one makes mistakes, Marsh. You know that."

The old man forced down the lump which the mention of "that accident" brought in his throat.

"Mistakes," he said bitterly, "but you don't know how I feel. You can't know. If you'd had a boy who meant to you what that boy meant to me, if he was about all you had to live for and he was blinded as my boy was in an accident caused by the carelessness of a man I had put in charge, then I guess perhaps you'd know. You ask Miss Durant. She was with him when he died—God bless her! Ask her how he suffered. She could understand. Now you know one reason why I am bitter."

CHAPTER III.

MR. DURANT COMES HOME.

PINCKNEY saw his chance.

"I think I can understand, Marsh," he said, kindly laying his hand on the draughtsman's arm. "And, really, I am your friend. I have not told you before, but I have a scheme, and if you trust me it will go through and everything will end right. You don't know anything about business, do you?"

"No," agreed Marsh. "I don't."

"And you have not consulted a lawyer or anybody about this gun business?" persisted the manager.

The mention of business and lawyers was having its effect. Marsh looked puzzled.

"No," he confessed. "I have said nothing to anybody."

Pinckney smiled his superior smile.

"Well, Marsh, if you had you would realize better what a fool you might have made of yourself. You have worked for this company, and we pay you for your time and your brains. Everything that you do belongs to us. Any lawyer would have told you that. It is legally correct, but not morally right. Now, I want to rectify that. I am going to try to get you something on this gun. Therefore I have patented it under the name of Rhinestrom. Mr. Durant would never consent to pay you any royalty. But he would be willing to pay royalty to a man who does not work for him. Now, if you will trust me I will see if I cannot get a royalty for Rhinestrom and pay it over to you."

A great hope had dawned on Marsh's face.

"You mean you will do that square?" he asked.

"Of course," answered Pinckney, "if we can arrange it. I will draw the royalty for Rhinestrom and pay it over to you. The business must, of course, all be done through me or nothing will come of it. You must trust me."

"How much will the royalty be?" asked Marsh.

The manager hesitated.

"Well," he said firmly, "I think I can get you $600 for every six inch gun and under and $100 an inch for every gun over six inches turned out at the factory. It will be a competence for you, man, and you can quit your drudgery and work for the rest of your life as you please on your inventions. Now, I have proved myself fair!"

Marsh nodded apologetically.

"I wronged you, Mr. Pinckney," he said at last. "I see you intend to do the fair thing. All right. I won't say anything more."

"But, remember," said Pinckney warningly, "the least word and the contract would be off. You must trust me. And another thing"—he hesitated a moment, then spoke meaningly—"the contract will be no good on earth should the Sommers gun turn out to be better than the Rhinestrom gun."

Marsh nodded with the confidence of the inventor in his own work.

"That is a chance we have to take, but I think we will come out all right. The Rhinestrom gun is a winner."

After the head draughtsman was gone Pinckney pondered a long time. Finally he called in his stenographer and dictated to her a contract between the Durant Steel company and Wilhelm Rhinestrom by which the Durant Steel company agreed to take over the Rhinestrom patents and pay the inventor $6,000 royalty on every gun six inches or under and $1,000 an inch for every additional inch above six. The contract he signed as manager of the steel company. Then he sent a long cable explaining what he had done to Durant, although he knew Durant was on the ocean and would not receive it.

That night in his own room the manager figured just what he would make—on every gun six inches and under $5,400 and $900 for every additional inch above six.

"And at that," he said to himself with a sneer, "everybody will be happy. That fool Marsh will make his $600 and his $100. That is enough for him, and Durant can stand the price. It means wealth and that girl, too"—he paused, and a sinister light came into his eyes—"if only that Sommers gun is a failure. I wonder"—

* * * * * * *

"George, I was ashamed of you—positively ashamed of you. Your first night home and you sit up at the table and talk nothing but steel and artillery and croop guns and that sort of thing, and when we have a guest here too! I don't know what Lieutenant Sommers thought of you."

Mrs. Durant spoke irritably, but her husband, who knew her ideas on business matters from long experience, merely smiled with toleration.

It was the first night after his return from a trip abroad on business, and Sommers and Pinckney had both been to dinner with the family.

"Now, now, my dear," the steel man protested. "I'm sure this naval chap is interested in what I have to say. If he invents guns himself he ought to be interested, and he certainly paid attention."

Mrs. Durant's lip curled.

"Paid attention!" she sniffed. "I guess he paid attention because you are Frances' father, not for any other reason."

Durant pricked up his ears at once.

"Frances' father?" he asked. "How should that interest this fellow?"

The father was plainly put out. He had too long held the idea that the name of Durant in the steel world would be perpetuated by the marriage of Frances and his protege, Edward Pinckney, for him to hear with equanimity that a penniless naval officer was paying her any attention.

"Now, look here, George Durant," exclaimed his wife indignantly, "don't you dare to pretend yourself that Frances is not attractive!"

"I never pretended any such thing," he protested.

"You did!" she declared insistently.

"But, my dear"—

"Didn't you say you were surprised that this naval man was paying her attention? That's the same thing as saying she's not attractive, and I want to tell you that Frances is the prettiest girl in Pittsburg, even if she is your daughter."

George Durant smiled placidly.

"Well, my dear, you see, she's bound to be pretty. Think of her mother."

"Now, don't try to soft soap me just because I'm your wife, George. Remember I've had twenty years of your blarney and I recognize it."

"All right, my dear," he agreed. "We'll let it go at that. Let the naval man pay attention to her. It won't do him any good."

"I should hope not!" exclaimed his wife piously. "The idea of any girl marrying a man who couldn't come home nights more than one-tenth of the time!"

Edward Pinckney entered from the library, where he had been to arrange some business matters for his chief.

"Your stenographer is ready, sir, whenever you want her," he said.

Mrs. Durant threw up her hands in horror.

"Good gracious, George, you are not going to work on your first night home?"

He looked at her in an apologetic, guilty fashion.

"Well, my dear, you see," he hesitated, "the work has to be done some way, and I just wanted to get a start. I have to go over some matters with Edward about this Rhinestrom gun and also about this gun invented by Sommers which we are casting for the government. It won't be much work, and I have my stenographer and secretary all ready."

Before the wife could protest further Frances and Sommers entered the drawing room. The old steel man did not give his wife a chance to argue.

"Ah, Sommers," he exclaimed genially, "I was just hoping you'd come in. I owe you an apology, my wife says, and I wanted to deliver it."

"Apology! For what?" exclaimed the lieutenant, mystified.

Durant winked at him.

"Why, Lieutenant Sommers," he said, with assumed seriousness, "I thought I owed you an apology for my conversation at dinner discussing the truck gun work and steel and gun making generally—those subjects in which you have no interest and could not understand."

Sommers, catching the spirit of the scene, bowed seriously.

"Your apology is accepted, Mr. Durant," he said. "I thought myself it was rather strange that you should choose a subject on a thing neither one of us knew anything about; but, of course, as you were host I chipped in and did the best I could. I hope my remarks on the subject weren't altogether foolish."

Durant turned to his wife.

"There, my dear. You see I've done everything you asked. I've apologized. But really we only talked on that subject because we both thought it was the one thing you were interested in, so we'll have forgiveness all the way round. And now I must get to work."

"George," she pleaded.

He paused for one second, his hand on the door.

"Only a little while. You'll all excuse me?"

Sommers and Pinckney bowed, but Frances laughed out loud.

"Dear old dad, what difference would it make whether we excuse you or not? We know you'll go anyway."

"Well, I won't be long," he protested; "really I won't."

When the door had closed behind him Mrs. Durant drew a long breath; then she brought her foot down with emphasis that was almost a stamp.

"I'm going into that study," she declared, "and stay there until I get him out. The idea of his beginning business on the first night home! He won't stay long after I come in!"

"Indeed he won't," agreed Frances. "You know," she went on, with a laughing explanation to Sommers, "whenever mother decides that father simply shall not work she goes into the room, takes a seat where he is bound to see her and just sits there staring at him reproachfully. She calls it moral suasion."

"But does it work?" asked Sommers.

"SOUSE" LIST BREEDS TROUBLE

Soon Waldwick's Only Righteous Ones Will Be Its Protectors.

Bergen county has a Board of Protectors at last. It is doing business at Waldwick, and the first list of drunkards contains eighteen names. Now the town is all excited, and libel suits are threatened on all sides. The citizen was put on by mistake, and he has already engaged counsel. Today it was said that thirty more names are soon to be added to the list, and as Waldwick is a small place the Board of Protectors will be the only ones likely to escape publicity. The Board is composed of Dr. S. E. Robinson, chairman; Arthur Elliott, secretary, and Frederick W. MacKeown.

SALOME JANE TONIGHT.

One of the present season's most notable offerings at the Plainfield theatre will occur tonight when A. G. Delamater and William Norris present their massive scenic production of "Salomy Jane," the famous western romance, that enjoyed a run of one solid year at the Liberty theatre, New York, where it proved to be the absolute dramatic triumph of a decade.

WE WANT SOUTH AMERICA'S TRADE.

The people of this country do not understand the enormous value of the commerce of South America. If they did there would be such a clamor at the doors of Congress in favor of subsidizing a South American steamship line that it would compel immediate attention. A former President of Peru, the Hon. Jose Pardo, who recently arrived in New York, said, with a tinge of sarcasm, that "if the people of the United States would turn aside from sentimental platitudes about the closeness of relations between this and South American republics, and do something practical in the way of actually shortening the physical distance between them, the whole of the Western Continent would benefit." Mr. Pardo said that one of the last acts of his official life was to bring about the passage of a bill to create a new steamship company, which will shorten the time between Peru and the United States by nine days. He added, "if a poor country like Peru can give a subsidy of $100,000 a year to bring us nearer to the United States, it is time for the United States to do something of the same kind to make it possible to reach Panama more quickly." Our wisest statesmen are beginning to realize that, with the opening of the Panama Canal, the United States will enjoy a great advantage over its competitors in competing for the business of South America. It is for this reason that Presidents Roosevelt and Taft both urged upon Congress the passage of a subsidy bill to encourage American shipping. Mr. Root, as Secretary of State, was also impressed with the urgent necessity of such legislation, and now on the floor of the Senate will, we believe, be able to champion it to a successful conclusion. — Leslie's Weekly.

600-FOOT WIRELESS STATION FOR THE NAVY.

The United States navy department will soon let out bids for the erection of the tallest wireless telegraph station in the world. It will be located near Washington, and will be one of the most modern and powerful stations in the country. Shooting up into the air to a distance of 600 feet, forty-five feet taller than the Washington monument, and only shorter than Eiffel tower, in Paris, and two structures in New York city, the new tower will indeed be a marvel in construction and wireless communication. The tower will be of concrete, according to a prominent naval officer.

At the apex will be a long slender wooden pole, not unlike a flagpole. From the top of this pole, a wire or steel umbrella-shaped frame will be erected for the purpose of attaching wires which will run to the station on the ground floor of the tower. When once the work is started it will take more than six months to complete it.

The most powerful wireless machinery in the world will be installed in the tower. This machinery will cost in the neighborhood of $160,000.—Popular Mechanics.

RALLY DAY EXERCISES

Sunday School Pupils' Programs at Several Local Protestant Churches.

PASTORS MAKE ADDRESSES.

Elaborate Services at the Park Avenue Church and Hope Memorial Chapel.

Rally Day at the Park Avenue Baptist church was observed yesterday afternoon by a program of marked interest. Rev. Dr. E. G. Reed, formerly of Somerville, but now of Plainfield, delivered the rally day address. The exercises were opened with a selection by the Sunday-school orchestra, consisting of Arthur S. Mosher, Miss Arline Brown, and Miss Marjorie Brown, violins; Whitney Frazee, cornet; Elmer P. Wheeler, flute, and Miss Mary E. Clark at the piano.

Prayer by Rev. A. E. Finn was responded to with "Come Unto Me," by the Sunday-school quartette, consisting of Miss Cora R. Brokaw, Miss Arline Brown, R. Coles Treadwell, and Charles VanWinkle. Miss Nora Schenck rendered two admirable solos. Dr. Reed spoke upon the importance of reading and studying the Bible earnestly. He urged upon the school the value of committing to memory various portions of the Bible, not parrot fashion, but intelligently, prayerfully. The address throughout was exceedingly interesting and profitable."

The exercise included a roll call of every officer, teacher and pupil of the school; a feature of which was the reading of a letter from the superintendent, George S. Hall, dated Los Angeles, Sept. 23. Mr. Hall wrote that he and Mrs. Hall had visited Seattle, Tacoma, Portland and San Francisco, and were preparing to visit Salt Lake City and Denver, after which they will start for home. They found everything to be on a grand scale in the West—the greatest fields of grain, the loftiest mountains, the tallest trees, and the largest yields of fruit in the country.

The Sunday school room, always pleasant and cheerful, was made especially attractive by the pretty floral decorations arranged by Mrs. Chas. VanWinkle, while several large American flags added greatly to the pleasing effect.

Another feature of the program was the beautiful blackboard work of Charles VanWinkle, who by the use of several colored crayons, extended a cordial "welcome" to every one present.

Rally day was observed at Hope chapel yesterday at the three services, with appropriate exercises, addresses and a special musical program. At the morning service the pastor, Rev. L. R. Howard gave a talk to the children. The exercises were attended by 415 Sunday-school pupils. Several recitations were given by members of the beginners and primary classes. The choir assisted the school in singing.

The main feature of the afternoon was the stereopticon lecture, "Making Americans," by the superintendent, G. Herbert Condict. He showed scenes about Ellis Island.

Rev. L. R. Howard read the Scriptures and offered prayer and Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, pastor of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, made a short address. He referred to the day as marking the eighth anniversary of Mr. Howard's pastorate.

A special musical service was held in the church in the evening, there being a large congregation present. A short address on "Praise," was made by Rev. L. R. Howard and a duet was sung by the Misses Edna and Eunice Eckert. The postlude was rendered on organ and violin. Martin A. Korff, the leader of the Y. M. C. A. orchestra, accompanied the organ with the violin.

"SUNDAY AT CLOVELLY" BY REV. MR. GOODRICH.

Rev. Charles L. Goodrich, pastor of the Congregational church, gave the first of a series of addresses on "Sundays in England" last night before a large congregation. His topic was "Sunday at Clovelly" and was a beautiful word picture of a village made famous by Kingsley. The address will be printed in full in tomorrow's Daily Press.

The music last night was under the leadership of the young people of the church. The Congregational boys and girls will gather at the corner of East Seventh street and Crescent avenue next Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock to join in the parade of the Christian Endeavor societies.

THE WEATHER.

Fair tonight and Tuesday; continued cool. Maximum, 66; minimum, 52.

MRS. WM. PALMER SMITH DIES AT HOLLAND HOUSE

Mrs. Georgiana Hoadley Smith, wife of William Palmer Smith, and daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. George Hoadley, who resided at West Seventh street and Arlington avenue, for many years, died Saturday at the Holland House, New York, following a long illness. She underwent two operations in the hope of saving her life, but without avail.

Mrs. Smith resided on Belvidere avenue for a number of years. Prior to her illness, she was actively engaged in church and charitable work, first at St. Stephen's church and later at Grace church. She was married twice, her first husband being William Smalley, a New York broker. During her first marriage she resided at East Ninth street and First place. Mr. Smalley died about six years after his marriage.

Her second husband is a member of the Breese & Smith, bankers and brokers at 96 Broadway, New York. Besides the husband, Mrs. Smith leaves three sons and three daughters. The funeral service will be held from the late home at 4 o'clock tomorrow afternoon.

WEALTHY MAN'S BODY IN A POTTER'S FIELD

The remains of Philip Jahn, the wealthy Cranford painter, were found on Saturday afternoon buried in the Potter's field in New York city. Jahn mysteriously disappeared from his home on August 31, and a large reward had just been offered for any information that would lead to finding him. On Saturday Miss Mary Singer, a relative of his, identified at the coroner's office, in New York, a watch and memorandum book found in the effects of an aged man who died at the Glen Island Hotel, 90 Cortlandt street, New York, as the property of Philip Jahn.

Jahn's body had been interred in the Potter's field as he had no money in his effects when the body was found. He had registered at the hotel as K. Miller, and it was under that name he was buried. Through accident Miss Singer learned from a Elizabeth woman that had seen a body resembling Jahn's description when the woman had visited the morgue in search of a relative who had also disappeared. That led to Miss Singer visiting the coroner's office and identifying the effects of the dead contractor. The body has been removed to Cranford for burial.

Jahn was over seventy years old, and leaves a family. His estate is estimated to be valued at $100,000.

PLAINFIELD ELKS TO ATTEND BENEFIT GAME FOR SAM CRANE

A delegation of Plainfield Elks will attend the benefit ball game for Sam Crane, the veteran baseball writer and National League player, at American League Park, New York, on Wednesday afternoon when the Highlanders and Detroit champions will clash in an exhibition game. The New York lodge of Elks is promoting the benefit and the indications are that it will be a huge success.

Mr. Crane is in failing health and it is planned to send him and his family to Denver for the winter. As an attraction for the contest "Iron Man" Joe McGinnity, formerly of the Giants, will pitch for the Tigers and Hughey Jennings will be at shortstop. "Christy" Mathewson will twirl a part of the game for the Yanks against Detroit.

ANNOUNCE WEDDING OF MISS MAY DOOLEY.

Announcement is made of the wedding of Miss May Dooley, of East 137th street, New York city, and Frank P. Burke, of West Third street, the ceremony having taken place Wednesday afternoon at St. Jerome's R. C. church, New York, by Father Keoghn, pastor of the church. Miss Irene McKeever, of New York, was the maid-of-honor, and Thomas Flatley, of Orange was the best man.

After the ceremony the couple left on a honeymoon, which included Albany, N. Y., and several other points of interest. The couple has returned to this city and have taken up their residence at 835 West Third street.

Will Hold Ratification Meeting.

"The Circles on the Square," will meet at Binz's Hotel, Mt. Bethel, tomorrow night, when addresses will be delivered by W. W. Smalley and Newton B. Smalley. William Jeffery will sing several topical songs.

PAVLIK JUMPS HIS BAIL; IS SOUGHT BY SCHRAGER

Felix Pavlik, the North Plainfield tailor, who was put under bonds to appear before City Judge Runyon on a charge of obtaining money under false pretences, failed to appear in court this morning and it is said has disappeared. Lawyer John P. Owens appeared this morning in behalf of Pavlik, and was rather chagrined that his client was not on hand to be defended.

Pavlik, it is alleged, received from Arthur Morris $13 in part payment for a suit of clothes which Pavlik was to make for him. The suit was not made and Pavlik refused to return the money. He was arrested at Westfield last Tuesday and put under bond of $100 to appear this morning. Isaac Schraer, his bondsman has been notified and must have Pavlik in court Saturday morning or forfeit the amount of the bond.

STONY HILL MISSION COMES TO A CLOSE

The attendance at the closing exercises on Saturday night and yesterday afternoon of the Mission at St. Mary's church, Stony Hill, was such that notwithstanding the isolated situation of the church, its capacity was taxed to the limit, every available space being occupied.

Saturday night the exercises consisted of the consecration of the parish to the Mother of God with a stirring sermon on the topic, "Why We Catholics Honor the Blessed Virgin,' followed with the benediction and the Blessed Sacrament. Yesterday morning the usual masses and instructions were held. At the first mass the Holy Name Society received Holy Communion in a body.

The Mission closed at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon with one of the most impressive services in the history of the church. There was a sermon by Rev. Raymond Walsh, the missionary, and among other things thanked his audience for the zeal and many sacrifices they had made, and admonished them to persevere in their promises made during the Mission. The renewal of the Baptismal vows by the assembled audience, each one holding a lighted candle, was impressive. Four little girls, ranging in age from six to eight years, all dressed in white, were sponsors for the congregation.

Then followed the procession with the Blessed Sacrament on the church grounds and the cemetery, lead by the Holy Name Society, and those in charge of the Mission, all bearing lighted candles. There were 250 persons in line. The Mission closed with the benediction of the Blessed Sacrament and the Papal blessing.

Athletic Managers Appointed.

At the last meeting of the athletic board of the Plainfield High School Athletic Association Thomas Ricketts was appointed manager for the basketball team. Many letters have come in already from various schools seeking games. Howard Runyon was appointed baseball manager for next season. Runyon is well equipped for the position and he should make a schedule as good as the one arranged by Manager Robins last season.

"HARVEST HOME" AT SALVATION ARMY HALL.

The Salvation Army hall was crowded to the door last night at the special harvest home meeting. This service was in charge of Mrs. Adjutant Straubel and was almost entirely one of song. The hall was beautifully decorated to represent the harvest time. The background consisted of shrubbery and sheaves from the harvest field. Fruits, vegetables and flowers decked the platform.

The service opened with the congregation singing "Bringing in the Sheaves." This was followed by a program of song: Solo by Miss Dean, duet by the Misses Bock and Marcrom, selection by the Elita Mandolin club, song by the children, by Adjutant Straubell, song by the Misses Bock and Marcrom and Straubell representing the weary, careless and the laden gleaner; solo by Ernest Straubel; selection by Elita Mandolin club; solo by Miss Straubel; scripture reading by Adjutant Straubel.

APPLEJACK REMEDY FOR HIS LAME LEG.

Jeremiah Smith, colored, and James E. Sullivan, white, had an interesting dialogue after being landed in cells at police headquarters Saturday night, in which they complimented their respective ancestors until sleep put an end to their volubility. They were both arraigned before City Judge Runyon this morning. Smith protested his innocence of the charge of disorderly conduct but admitted the fact of having drunk some beer.

Sullivan acknowledged that five drinks of applejack was the cause of his downfall, but said he took it as medicine for a lame leg. After an apology had been offered on suggestion of the judge both men were allowed to go because of previous good records.

VESPER SERVICES AT THE Y. W. C. A. YESTERDAY.

The new assembly room of the Young Women's Christian Association was filled to the utmost at the 4 o'clock vesper service yesterday. Miss Corbett, student secretary of the Eastern Territorial Board, gave a brief vesper talk on "The Power of the Christian Life." She pointed out that today all people desire power in one form or another. Two solos, sung by Miss Louise Andrews, added much to the vesper service.

Tomorrow evening the association house, well lighted and adorned, will hold open house to the general public, afternoon and evening. On Monday, October 18, the classes will be opened.

Mr. Lefferts is connected with the firm of Jacobs & Berger and is well known in the market."

SCOTCH PLAINS' NEEDS AS SEEN BY A PASTOR

An auspicious Rally Day meet was held yesterday at the Scotch Plains Baptist church. At the morning session the Rev. Franklin K. Mathews called for a larger and more enthusiastic attendance and deplored the delinquency that obtained among the members.

At the afternoon vesper service Rev. Mr. Mathiews spoke on "Things Needed in Scotch Plains." He remarked upon the number of licensed saloons, and said that the great need of the town was a Y. M. C. A. or similar association to look particularly after the moral welfare of the young men. An organization of this order, he predicted, was certain to win out in a fight with the liquor interests.

Mr. Lingus, the well known Brooklyn baritone, rendered several solos that found universal praise.

TO ARRANGE DETAILS FOR BIG CONVENTION

The final meeting of the committee of arrangements for the State Christian Endeavor convention will be held in the First Presbyterian church, tonight at 7:30 o'clock. There will also be a meeting of the finance committee at the same place and the chorus choir of fifty voices will rehearse the new convention music under the direction of Charles L. Lewis and Clifford A. Braider, organist. Mr. Braider will preside at the organ during the entire convention.

Alexander Galloway, chairman of the entertainment committee, reports that an unprecedented number of delegates will be on hand at the opening session of the convention, Wednesday morning. In previous years the attendance at that session has usually been small. Those who are willing to entertain and have not yet made known their intention are requested to confer with Mr. Galloway.

Charles F. Windham, secretary, on behalf of the general committee, has sent a notice to all the Protestant churches in Plainfield and vicinity, inviting them to attend the convention. This notice states that on Friday night the meeting for the public will be held at Trinity Reformed church, as the large number of delegates are expected to fill the convention church. The speaker for that evening, Dr. Francis E. Clark, founder of the Christian Endeavor movement, will speak first at Trinity church and at the First Presbyterian church afterward.

SEVEN CRAP PLAYERS APPEAR IN CITY COURT

Playing craps and the noise incidental to that amusement was the cause of the appearance in court this morning of a party of youthful Sabbath breakers before Judge Runyon. They did not appear to take the matter at all seriously when brought before the magistrate, and one of them, James Deady became so impudent when turned over to Probation Officer C. W. Irwin that he was relegated to a cell to think it over. He was released after becoming properly repentant. Crap shooting by this particular bunch will probably cease.

Chief Weiss, of the borough police, gave the information on which the boys were arrested, Chief Kiely conducting the raid in person. These are the would-be gamblers: James Powers, James Deady, William Knight, James McGrath, William Russ, William Doyle and Galbraith. They were arrested near the dividing line in a lot on Watchung. They tried hard to ge away all of them getting a wetting trying to escape across the brook.

PLAN TO ERECT MORE STORES ON PARK AVENUE

David C. Smalley and Frank Mobus, who are owners of a tract of land adjoining that of the railroad property near the Eastbound station of the New Jersey Central, are about ready to begin operations for the improvement of the tract. The changes call for the removal of Miss A. E. Lincoln's building, the old police station and the brick building formerly used as a pumping station by the railroad company.

Messrs. Smalley and Mobus will lay a ten-foot sidewalk from Park avenue to the corner of their property near the station, after the driveway is widened and will then erect a number of fine stores there, each about thirty-five feet deep. They will be of the most modern style, fully equipped with all conveniences and will be a big improvement to the property.

John Manley has made an offer to Miss Lincoln, whereby she will have an opportunity to remove her building to his property, adjoining his house. He has suggested that the "L" shaped portion of the house be torn down, which will permit of sufficient room for the building. Miss Lincoln has not yet decided what she will do in the matter.

BLUE STOCKING SOCIAL OF SEVENTH-DAY BAPTISTS.

Under the auspices of the Women's Society for Christian Work of the Seventh-Day Baptist church, a "Blue Stocking Socail," was held in the church parlors yesterday afternoon. The affair was largely attended and a great success. The plan was for each person to bring a tiny stocking, containing a sum of money to equal the size of stocking worn by them. In this way a large sum was realized.

During the afternoon there was an informal program, beginning with a piano duet by Mrs. F. J. Hubbard and Mrs. W. C. Hubbard. Miss Margaret Kimball gave a recitation, Miss Iva Palmer sang a solo and Miss Ruth Potter Maxson read an original story.

The numerous blue stockings were then received and placed in a larger stocking after which the contents were counted. During a social hour refreshments, consisting of tea and wafers were served. The committee in charge comprised Mrs. W. C. Hubbard, chairman; Mrs. Asa F. Randolph, Mrs. N. O. Moore, Jr., Mrs. J. E. Kimball and Miss Ruth Potter Maxson.

The repertoire company is considered one of the best on the road this season, and has played to big business every week. There will be a matinee this afternoon, Wednesday and Saturday.

ATTEND VESPER SERVICE

Knights of Columbus Gather at Rahway for Annual Observance.

NEW JERSEY CHAPTER, NO. ONE.

Business Meeting, Parade and Service—Watchung Council Takes Part in the Program.

Twenty-five members of Watchung Council, Knights of Columbus, of Plainfield, attended the annual vesper services of the order at St. Mary's church, Rahway, yesterday.

New Jersey Chapter No. 1, Knights of Columbus, composed of councils from Newark, Harrison, Kearny, Bloomfield, Montclair, Summit, Orange, Elizabeth, Plainfield and Rahway, near 1,000 in all, were present.

In the afternoon at a meeting held in St. Mary's Hall, Rahway, when State Deputy J. J. Hickey exemplified the major degree on forty candidates. He was assisted by National Warden Thomas J. McLaughlin and his degree team.

A special feature of the services was the attendance of Colonel Day, of Brooklyn, who was accompanied by his uniform corps of fourth degree knights, with the boys' band of St. Vincent's Home, Brooklyn. They arrived in Rahway about 5 o'clock and went at once to the Columbian Club rooms, where all the visiting councils assembled.

At 7:30 the councils formed in line, headed by the uniform corps and band, and paraded down Main street to Milton avenue, to Irving street, to Central avenue, to St. Mary's church. Mayor C. B. Holmes and members of Common Council attended as special guests.

Among distinguished officers present were: State Deputy J. J. Hickey, National Warden Thomas J. McLaughlin, National Secretary Cornelius A. McGlennon, Mayor of East Newark, and the following district deputies: Dr. Thomas D. Keegan and J. F. O'Neill, of Jersey City; F. A. O'Connor, of West Orange; E. J. O'Brien, of New Brunswick; Arthur B. Seymour, Mayor of Orange; Thos. F. Mackessy, of Elizabeth, and H. J. Hughes, president of the United Wireless Company of New York.

At the church the Rev. Henry G. Coyne, of St. Vincent de Paul's church, Bayonne, preached the sermon, using as his theme, "Knighthood." The vespers were said by the Rev. George Brown, pastor of St. Mary's church, with the Rev. Leo Bleier as deason and the Rev. James Smith as sub-deason. The church was well crowded long before 8 o'clock, when the services commenced, the Knights occupying the centre of the church. The uniformed degree corps had charge of the floor work as the vespers, and the part they took was very impressive. Previous to Father Coyne preaching the sermon an escort brought him down the side aisle and led him up the centrle aisle under the crossed swords of the degree corps.

About 500 local Knights were at the services. The officers of the chapter are: Edward E. McKeon, chairman, of Kearny Council; Dominic A. Walsh, vice-chairman, of Belleville Council; Peter A. Smith, treasurer, of Star of Bethlehem Council; Cornelius J. Lynch, financial secretary, Kearny Council; John M. Mullin, recording secretary, Summit Council, and the Rev. M. P. Corcoran, chaplain, of Olive Branch Council, Newark.

FORTY DAYS FOR HER IF SHE WON'T BEHAVE.

Mrs. Fannie Turner, colored, was the complainant this morning in the city court against Mrs. Melinda Jackson, also colored, both living on Muhlenberg place. Mrs. Turner complained that Mrs. Jackson had struck her little son and had threatened to do her bodily injury from which she was prevented by the interference of a Mr. Ross, a neighbor of the Jackson and Turner women.

Judge Runyon listened to the stories of the two women and decided to give Mrs. Jackson a chance to behave herself, saying that another offense will bring a sentence of forty days in jail.

POWDER BOY ECLIPSES HIS OWN PACING RECORD.

Powder Boy, the crack Jersey pacer, broke the track record at the Rahway and Woodbridge Driving Club matinee Saturday by reeling off the third heat in the 2:25 pace in 2:17 1-5. This performance eclipses by two and one-fifth seconds the former track record made by the same horse three weeks ago. Powder Boy had little difficulty in taking three heats in a row from Byron Girl. The other three events on the program were all well-contested. Little Jim, driven by J. Watson, ran three good races in the 2:40 trot and pace, defeating Branon by short margins in each heat. The summary:

FAIR ATTENDANCE, 135,000.

Trenton, Oct. 4.—The paid attendance at the interstate fair, which closed Friday, was 123,815, not including the hundreds who went to the grounds daily on gate passes. It is estimated that the attendance all told for the week was 135,000.

Secretary Margerum announced Friday that the fair association is making plans for expenditure of about $50,000 for improvements for next year's exhibition. One of the improvements will be the erection of a magnificent building for the agricultural and horticultural display. No. 3 building will then be used for displays of a trade character. The fair has grown so large that more space is needed. A new concrete floor will take the place of the wooden floor in No. 3 building.

Mayor Charles Ebert, of Roselle Park, has announced that he would not attend the dedication ceremonies of the new $68,000 school next Friday night because the Board of Education had failed to invite the members of the Borough Council.

He added that he had met a member of the Board of Education on the street and had been invited in an informal manner to speak. Nothing was said about the Council, he declared.

This is the Square Pot of the

that saves fuel and dollars and will heat the whole of a house. In every great engine and under every big boiler you'll find a square fire box. Ever noticed it? Well—we have adapted that principle to our furnaces. A square pot gives a clean, hot, clinkerless fire without waste of fuel. It requires the least attention and responds instantly. BOYNTON furnaces only have square fire-pots. It is our patent. There are other improvements. A square ash pit that improves the draft and makes removal of ashes easier. A pure air supply—for health's sake. A dust flue that saves the rooms above.

Look up the BOYNTON dealer in your town and talk it over.

There are BOYNTON heating plants of all kinds. Ask about our Round or Sectional Boilers for Steam or Hot Water. Also Ranges.

SPAIN PURSUED BY DISASTER.

This sudden appearance of a very serious evil leads us to reflect upon the hidden causes which have silently brought about the present state of affairs. Since the loss of her colonies Spain has been for ten years trying to profit by the terrible lessons of Cavire and Santiago, and partly by means of a natural evolution, partly through the agency of the governmental parties, was beginning to awake to life. The present disturbances afford us an opportunity of making a brief study of the social conditions through which Spain is passing. We shall endeavor, both in our censure and in our praise, not to be influenced by prejudice. Although "to aid in the disheartenment of the mother-country is in truth an impious work," to present her defects "without jeers, or insults, or contempt" is almost always salutary, for with the clear conscience of one's sins may come a stimulus to betterment.

Three events of the utmost gravity and importance have just taken place at the same time, damaging still further the already impaired credit of the country and not leaving unscathed its institutions—the outbreak of the Riffian tribes, the death of Don Carlos, and the abortive revolutionary movement of Barcelona. We must not, of course, consider these events as mere accidents without consequence. Whether they were the result of long and studied preparation or due to chance, they took place almost in unison, and their united weight fell upon a mass of people very ready, after so many disasters, to seek safety wherever it might be found.—American Review of Reviews.

WIDOWS' FUND.

The Widowed Mothers' Fund has been organized in New York to study and develop a new method of dealing with poor women, with families, whose husbands are dead. Careful survey of the field before them shows many complications. The families where illness has seized several members of the household, others where there is a grandmother to support, too, or a sick son in a sanatorium, or even an insane husband who thus is out of the bread-winning class, all offer peculiar problems. The Widowed Mothers' Fund proposes to establish a standard of living in accordance with which per-capita provision can be made until the children are of such ages as to be contributors. At present the fund is attempting to work with the United Hebrew Charities of New York.—Belle L. Israels, in the Survey for September.

MISSING WIFE SENDS POSTALS TO CHILDREN

Mrs. Catherine Schuster, wife of Christian Schuster, of 79½ Court street, Elizabeth, who mysteriously disappeared from her home on Monday night last, has sent word from Montreal. She wrote postal cards to each of the three children whom she left. The other three are with her. She said nothing on the cards except to ask for the address of a brother, William Grauff, who lives at Stony Plain, Alberta, Canada. She did not address a card to her husband.

Mr. Schuster said today that he believes his wife will go to the home of her brother. He was undecided he said, as to whether he would try to bring her back to this city or allow her to remain there. He said he would send a telegram today to the Montreal police.

He is satisfied that his wife is of unsound mind and for this reason he is caused all the more worry. He says that he missed his wife when he returned from his work in the Singer plant Monday night. He made inquiries and learned that she had been wandering about the street in the pouring rain carrying in her arms a six-weeks-old child.

He went to the station house and told Captain John O'Leary of his plight. The latter advised him to make a complaint against his wife in the City Criminal Court and have her committed to the county jail to be examined as to her sanity. Schuster said he would and left the station house to search for his family.

The fact that the woman had $150 in her possession led the police to believe that she might have boarded a train and taken the children hundreds of miles away from home. She could go to some Western city and with the money she would have left after paying her fare she could easily keep herself and children for several weeks.

Neighbors of the Schusters declared that their home life was very happy. Mrs. Schuster, they say, was a hard working woman and a crank on cleanliness. It is said that for fear of bringing dirt into her living rooms she would keep the doors locked and prevent anyone from entering except when there was absolute necessity. Mrs. Schuster is the mother of six children. Her husband recently purchased the four-family house at 79 and 79½ Court street.

At the regular meeting of Somerset Council, No. 104, Jr. O. U. A. M., Friday night, H. B. Evans, Edmund Stewart and James F. Pearsall were initiated. The members are preparing for a big time next Friday night, when they are to entertain a delegation of about forty members from George A. Halsey Council, No. 192, of Newark. A fine program is being arranged by the good and welfare committee.

The Men's Association of Warren chapel held its first fall meeting Friday night, but owing to the fact that many of the members were in New York attending the celebration, little business was trasacted. Another meeting will be held soon to plan for the winter's work.

—Mr. and Mrs. Augustus V. Heely will remove this week from Willow avenue to Central avenue and West Sixth street.

ESCAPED CONVICT IS CAUGHT IN CORNFIELD

Trenton, Oct. 4.—After a chase of seven hours John Martin, a convict who escaped from the State prison Friday was captured Friday night in a cornfield near Bordentown by a posse of policemen and armed prison deputies. Martin probably would have made good his escape had he not been forced to rest through exhaustion. His feet were badly blistered and he was bleeding as a result of coming into contact with heavy brush while fleeing through dense woods in the southern section of the city.

Martin, who was sentenced from Essex county for three years for breaking and entering, began his prison term January 13. His behavior was so good that lately he was allowed to work for several hours each day about the house of Headkeeper George O. Osborne, adjoining the prison. Early Friday Mrs. Osborne saw him rushing down the railroad, and notified several keepers. A posse immediately pursued Martin, who yelled he would kill the first to approach. This threat caused a halt, and gave the convict an opportunity to leap a high fence and disappear for a time.

Patrolman Walsh went on duty at 3 o'clock Friday afternoon and immediately decided to not only look over his post thoroughly, but also go off his beat and search for the criminal. The officer had been on duty about an hour when he decided to look over the Lalor farm, situated in the rear of St. John's cemetery on Lalor street. While he was looking through the rows of late corn about a half mile below the cemetery, two boys joined him.

Walsh peeped through each long row of corn and he told the youngsters to keep their eyes open. While he was searching he came near to several stacks of cornstalks. He told the lads to see if there was a hole in any of the stacks while he continued looking in the open, where a man might have an easier way of escaping.

The boys walked around the piles of cornstalks and suddenly Martin dashed out of a hole and ran toward the officer. The lads were badly frightened and they stood by to see what was going to happen.

Martin was coatless, but wore an old black slouch hat. He pulled from the pocket of his trousers a knife similar to one used in the prison shops. He made a dash at the policeman, but the latter drew his club and struck the prisoner on the arms. Martin held fast to his knife and tried his best to stab the officer. Walsh rained blow after blow on the head of the convict before he would drop the weapon and surrender. The policeman then marched his prisoner to the waiting room of the Trenton and New Brunswick railroad, Liberty and Adeline streets, where he telephoned for the patrol wagon.

The prisoner was taken to the Second District police station, where Sergeant Schanck notified Mr. Osborne of the capture. Martin was taken back to prison, where his injured head was attended to and he was afterwards placed in the dungeon. He will remain there for six days and live on a diet of bread and water. At the end of the sixth day he will be given hard work in one of the shops and no more liberties will be allowed him.

According to Captain Carroll, of the Newark detective bureau, Martin is the same person, who, under the name of Charles Boan, was sentenced to ten years for robbing the home of Peter Hauck in Harrrison a number of years ago. After he was released, Carroll said, Boan was arrested for robbing a house in Broad street, Newark, and was given five years for that job. Boan is doing his present term of imprisonmen for breaking into a house in the Fourth Precinct. When he was slated at the Fourt Precinct he said his name was John Martin, but he was then recognized as Boan.

DEFEATED BIDDER FAILS TO APPEAL TO COURT.

Trenton, Oct. 4.—Justice Reed has filed in the Supreme Court a memorandum deciding against Contractors B. F. Sweenen & Sons, of Atlantic City, in their suit for a writ of certiorari to set aside a contract of the Atlantic County Board of Freeholders for the construction of a new road from Absecon to Somers Point. The contract involved about $196,000.

Sweenen & Sons were lowest bidders, but the contract was awarded to a rival bidder on the ground that the Sweenen bid was irregular. The Supreme Court holds there was no merit in the claim of the plaintiffs that the contract should be set aside.

Divided Affection.

"Keep looking young, don't you, old man. It must be fine to be married, like you are. Here I am, an old bach, with not a single woman I can say loves me, while you have a beautiful wife all to yourself—one who concentrates all her love and affection on you!"

"Hold on, old fellow. I know I'm married to a woman with beauty and full of love and affection; but you want to remember she has two pet poodles besides me.—Judge's Library.

HERE AND THERE.

D. J. Carney says: "It will not be amiss at this time to relate the fact that during the month of June, in 1876, a baloon left the Centennial grounds in Philadelphia one afternoon and sailed about the southern and central part of New Jersey during the night. Shortly after seven o'clock the next day the balloon containing four of five persons, was hovering about Vail's spring on the mountain, where the Baby Camp is located, just above the residence of Mr. Hyde, where a colored workman employed by the late Wallace Vail was cleaning up the brushwood, which was to be burned o nthe third of July night. The party in the balloon called down to the colored man asking him what place it was. That was enough for him. He left his team and ran for his life to town. The balloon then took a course via Netherwood and landed in the swamp near Woodbridge about noon. The colored man finally was convinced that his time was extended to work among the cedars and he went back to his hors s accompanied by o hers. The large pile of underbrush and cedars were lighted on the evening of July third, 1876, and the illuminated the ehavens for a long whil.

SIZE OF BUT LITTLE MOMENT

The Most Deadly and Destructive Foes of Mankind Are of Minute Proportion.

In one of Herbert Wells' brilliant stories the terribly scientific and practically invincible Martians who have invaded the earth and conquered England are stopped in the midst of their victories and utterly destroyed by the attacks of microscopic foes. Infinitely small organisms, germs of diseases to which man has become in some degree immune, slay the wonderful warriors of a planet never invaded by these earth foes. What the greatest battleships and the heaviest guns could not do the unseen and unknown living seeds of death accomplish.

More clearly every day the world understands that in the life and affairs of mankind the most deadly and destructive foes are extremely small. All of the fierce mammals and poisonous serpents of Africa do not kill as many human beings in ten years as the tsetse fly slays in one. The tigers and cobras of India kill their thousands every year, but the rats which spread the germs of the bubonic plague destroy their tens of thousands. In this country the common house fly undoubtedly causes more deaths than all the venomous snakes, wild beasts, mad dogs, runaway horses and all-tempered bulls, ten times over. The actual proportion is probably much higher than ten to one.

TROUBLE FOR BOYISH KNIGHT

Unfeeling Police Officer Arrested Youth in the Act of Kissing Away Sweetheart's Tears.

It's a pity a boy can't kiss away his sweetheart's tears without a big, unsympathetic policeman taking them both to the children's court, the New York Evening Telegram says.

Any fellow would have acted just as Jacob Kinsler did, especially if he was as fond of his sweetheart as Jacob is of Susie Stahl. Jacob is a manly little chap of 15 and Susie, two years his junior, is one of the prettiest little girls on the east side.

"We wasn't regular kissing," explained Jacob. "I'll tell you how it was. A boy nearly twice as big as I am came along and slapped Susie and she began to cry."

"Why didn't you tackle him?" asked the court.

"He was too big for me to lick, and I let him go. But I did the next best thing. Susie was crying somepin fierce, and I just grabbed her and was kissing away her tears when the cop came along and said I was violating the law. I didn't know what he meant, and as Susie kept on crying I kept on kissing. Then the cop stepped up."

"You and Susie may go now," said the court to Jacob. "The next time she cries give her your handkerchief—when you see a cop coming."

A Quaint Tract.

A quaint tract entitled "Woe to Drunkards," being a sermon by Samuel Waid, preacher, of Ipswich, was printed in London in 1627. The preacher based his remarks upon Proverbs xxiii., 29-32 ("Look not thou upon the wine when it is red," etc.), and illustrated his arguments by examples from various parts of the kingdom of "God's judgments on drunkards." Among other instances he quotes the following one from Tenby: "At Tenby, in Pembrokeshire, a drunkard being exceedingly drunke broke himself all to pieces off an high and steep rock in most fearefull manner, and yet the occasion and circumstances of his fall so ridiculous as I thinke not fit to relate, lest in so serious a judgement I should move laughter of the Reader."

The Backwoods School.

Poor old schoolhouse, long since become scattered ashes! Poor little backwoods academicians, driven in about sunrise, driven out toward dusk! Poor little tired backs with nothing to lean against! Poor little bare feet that could never reach the floor! Poor little droop-headed figures, so sleepy in the long summer days, so afraid to fall asleep! Long, long since, little children of the past, your backs have become straight enough, measured on the same cool bed; sooner or later your feet, wherever wandering, have found their resting places in the soft earth; and all your drooping heads have gone to slep on the same dreamless pillow, and there are sleeping.—James Lane Allen.

Accounting for It.

Outgoing heads of the government departments sometimes make a few "personal" promotions upon the eve of their departure, and a clerk in the department of agriculture, believing that Secretary Wilson would go the way of the rest of the Roosevelt cabinet, ventured to approach him with a little plea for special recognition.

"I have been in the department since the time you were first made secretary, sir—" the clerk began.

"I know it—I know it," the secretary said, waving him away. "Every one knows I am a very patient and considerate man."—Harper's Weekly.

Expelled for Cause.

Mrs. Dorcas—Why did you expel her from the Women's club?

Mrs. Learned—She proposed a motion that, instead of engaging a professor of Hindu philosophy, we should hire some one to teach us how to get into a cab, how to sharpen a pencil and how to carry an umbrella in a crowd.

Woodhull & Martin Co.

SMALL RIVER THAT IS MADE TO WORK HARD.

The hardest working river, the one most thoroughly harnessed to the millwhels of labor in the United States, probably in the world, is the Blackstone. It is not a large river, either. Its drainage area is only about 458 square miles and in its power-producing section it is only forty-three miles long; a very Tom Thumb of a river as rivers go in America, says The Technical World Magazine. Yet the doughty little stream produces 23,000 horsepower, fifty for every square mile of its drainage area.

If you will figure out this amount of horsepower in terms of coal you will find that the busy little stream represents a capitalization of about $25,000,000. This is twice the developed horsepower of any other important river.

Almost a hundred mills, catching with their whirling turbines its water almost from the very source in the city of Worcester, Massachusetts, line its banks and grow in size and importance till in Woonsocket and Pawtucket, R. I., you have some of the largest of their kind in the country.

UNDER-ARM TRIMMING.

This autumn will see the fashion for elaborate trimming under the arm in full swing. No one can prophesy these days how long it or any other fashion will remain in style.

All one can hope for these days is that styles won't go hopelessly out of fashion before one can wear the garment they are having made. A dressmaker should really go home with every gown to alter it on its arrival.

But this under-arm adornment may be taken off quite easily if style demands it. It is pretty and gives a coat or a gown other lines from those which we have been adopting.

It is a change from that ever-recurring line down middle front and back. Braid, either soutache or the new lace weave, is the most used of all the other trimmings. Floral designs are not especially popular. All the so-called Egyptian ones are.

In separate, sleeveless coats which are still popular, the arm hole is decidedly pear shaped, and the trimming which surrounds it extends to the hem.

Princess frocks, which are even more fashionable than ever, have fantasies of trimming under the arm, narrowing as they go toward the hem. Lace is used, silver and gold braid, insertions of another material, and applied leaves of metal tissues or panne velvet.

This trimming is a mediaeval idea that join hands cordially with all the other ideas we are borrowing from far-gone centuries.

SO EARLY!

The fashion leaders have never before talked of fur and feathers, satin and velvet, beaver and boas at this time of the year. We simply would not do it if it were an advance winter fashion, but it's a present fad in Paris.

America can't adopt it; the weather conditions are unfavorable for such scorching "toys." Paris has had a remarkably cool season, which has resulted in chiffon scarfs, fur-edged; velvet toques with fur around them, colored satin turbans with black velvet facings and glossy beaver hats adorned with plumes.

Now, Paris cannot be silly enough to make necessary such a degree of warmth, but she likes to be peculiar.

Think of the waste! She will, by this untimely venture, cast aside a whole line of fashions and call forth a second output by the time the autumn season sets in. A rare opportunity for the shops and the makers.

FOR A BABY.

In these days when a baby is out doors practically all the time his mother wants to be assured of his safety and comfort. One of the big shops is showing a canvas pen made with a strong framework of wood, with sides enough to prevent the baby from climbing out unless he is particularly acrobatic.

The pen is so arranged with ropes at each corner that it may be raised off the floor of the porch or room to keep the baby entirely out of a draught. The canvas floor has enough spring to it to be entirely comfortable to sleep on, and is big enough to allow the baby plenty of room to creep about in.

Equipped with such an arrangement a mother would be spared many hours of fretting with a small child, not to speak of the unnecessary handling the baby would be spared.

JOHN HAY'S SENSE OF HUMOR

Statesman Was Exceptionally Gifted in This Respect, According to Biographer.

Few of our public men have had a more delicate or delicious humor, coupled in an unusual way with a keen and cutting wit. We are fortunate in the preservation of so many of his addresses. Speaking of his frequent opportunities for talking in England, Mr. Hay wrote to a friend: "You never saw a people so willing and eager to be bored as these blessed John Bulls. If I were of the Neronic type, which takes delight in human anguish, I could make a speech every night the year round. But I refrain—being merciful and lazy."

Of a candidiate for the presidency, he said: "There seems no limit to his eager credulousness. . . . He seems able to believe anything—all he asks is that it shall be incredible." The man's party he characterizes as a "fortuitous concourse of unrelated prejudices."

Describing a collection of sacred relics gathered by Philip II, he playfully writes: "With the exception, perhays of Cuvier, Philip could see more in a bone than any man who ever lived. In his long life of osseous enthusiasm he collected 7,421 genuine relics—whole skeletons, odd shins, teeth, toe-nails and skulls of martyrs—sometimes by a miracle of special grace, getting duplicate skeletons of the same saint."—"Castilian Days," Charles C. Moores, in Putnam's Magazine.

MEDICAL MEN IN BIG SUPPLY

America Is Credited with Almost Twice the Number That Supplies European Wants.

One of the medical journals recently announced that the number of physicians was decreasing. It admitted that there was no immediate prospect of a noticeable dearth of doctors, but it suggested, to put it plainly, that there was danger of young men being scared off the medical field "by the constantly increasing requirements for admission to the medical schools."

Now comes another lot of statistics which shows that the doctors in the United States numbered 154,000 in 1910, versus 132,000 by the United States census of 1900, giving, with the increased population, an increased clientele a doctor from 572 to 594. In Europe, says the Post-Graduate, experience has shown that one physician can care for 1,000 of the general population, and it is estimated that, even with more stringent requirements to diminish their ranks, it will be past 1949 before a proportion is reached which is there deemed normal. We are over 35 years in advance of the natural requirements, which means not only individual average suffering for the profession, but also a serious economic problem for the country.

Duties of Oldtime Carvers.

At the formal banquet of the sixteenth century the man who carved the meat was bound with the red tape of precedent. When carving for distinguished guests he had to remember that certain parts of the birds or meat must be set aside. In carving for his lord and lady he was expected to exercise great discretion in the size of the pieces he sent around, "for ladies will be soon angry and their thoughts soon changed, and some lords are soon pleased and some not, as they be of complexion." He was expected to have the rules both of the kitchen and the peerage at his knife's end. A pike, for instance, must be dished up whole for a lord, and in slices for commoner folk. The rank of his diners, too, determined whether a pig was to be served up whole, sliced, plain or with gold leaf, or whether new bread or bread three days old should be eaten.

Suez Once a Natural Channel.

There is every reason to believe that some 3,000 years ago, in the time of King Solomon, there was an open channel through Suez, by which the light draft vessels of the Phoenicians passed through on their voyages to Asia and to the gold regions of Ophir, which are now known to be in Africa, and reached from the east coast of that continent. In the course of time the two seas (the Mediterranean and the Red), by action of the waves, filled up the connecting channel, and so it remained until it was opened by the French under De Lesseps for traffic November 17, 1869, at a cost of about $85,000,000. It was subsequently enlarged at moderate cost.

His Dilemma.

Customer (nervoutly)—I want a beefsteak to take home to dinner. Unexpected guest, you know. Wife telephoned me to get the steak. Jane always buys the meat herself, you see, and she's aw'fly particular. What have you got?

The Butcher (encouragingly)—Well, wot do you say to a nice juicy porterhouse, cut thick; or maybe you'd prefer a couple o' cuts of tenderloin?

Customer (still more nervously)—Well, I'm blest if I know which. Say, you couldn't lemme have a couple o' samples to take home an' show her, could you? It's only a half dozen blocks from here.

Confidence of Genius.

"You say your dirigible balloon is a success?"

"Yes," answered the inventor.

"But it came down to the earth with a terrible bump."

"True. But it hit very close to the spot I was aiming at."

William Jeffery.

Worked Himself Out of a Job.

"Will you have a face massage, sir?" queried the barber, cocking his weather ear close to the customer's face, after making the last swipe with the razor.

"I've just had one," grunted the man with the large pie belt.

"Beg pardon?" said the barber, suspiciously.

"I say, I've just had one," repeated the customer.

"I—I don't understand, sir," said the barber, a puzzled look spreading over his waxy features.

"Well," said the man, wearily, "if you had timed yourself you would have noticed that your scoured my face for about fifteen minutes before you began to shave. That's massage enough for one sitting."—Boston Herald.

Cultivates a Graceful Walk.

Very few girls walk gracefully nowadays, in spite of the craze for physical culture. The most generally noticeable faults are a forward droop of the head, sticking out the elbows and scraping the feet.

The girl who walks with a forward stoop accentuates all these faults and lays herself open to various diseases as well.

Because, if you slouch forward, you compress the lungs, and prevent proper expansion of the chest. Consequently, the lungs are insufficiently supplied with fresh air, and the body does not get enough oxygen for the requirements of health.

Artistic Jargon.

They were the little daughters of an artist—Edith and Ethel.

"You don't look so very much alike," remarked a visitor.

"Oh, no!" answered Ethel, who was the younger. "I'm in mamma's later manner."—St. Louis Republic.

PIANO CONTEST FAKES EXPOSED!

There are several Piano houses which have no prices for their goods except grossly inflated ones arranged expressly for fake discounts in connection with schemes of various kinds. These houses seem to find it impossible to dispose of their pianos in a legitimate, straightforward way, but instead resort to one scheme after another—catch-penny devices, so crude as to be positively insulting to the intelligence of the public. These schemes usually take the form of guessing contests, drawing puzzles and various feats of little skill. In all of them the object is identical to mislead the prospective buyer into the belief that he is getting something for nothing, while at the same time prices are arranged sufficiently high to off-set the allowance to which his prize certificate entitles him.

EVERYONE WHO MAKES A GUESS GETS A PRIZE!

If you have ever answered one of these ads you received a discount certificate. EVERYBODY DOES. It matters not whether the answer is good, bad or indifferent, from adult or child it draws a prize in the shape of a certificate or due bill (generally from $65.00 to $100.00) to apply on the purchase of a new Piano. Of course the price of the Piano is fixed accordingly and the purchaser pays a high price even after the amount of certificate is deducted, usually a much higher price than an instrument of similar quality could be secured for in any legitimate music store.

To test the value of one of these certificates present it in payment for something other than a new piano—say a low priced used piano, music cabinet or a bench, and see how quickly the dealer will turn you down. He will not even give you 50 cents worth of music for it. Try the experiment!

AT $185.00 WE WILL SELL A BETTER PIANO THAN THE SCHEME HOUSES ASK $325.00 TO $400.00 FOR! Such well known and high grade makes as Haines Bros., Brewster, the Genuine Mathushek and others too numerous to mention.

HIGH ROYAL TITLES

LITTLE MODESTY SHOWN BY OCCUPIERS OF THRONES.

One Sovereign of Insignificant Empire Rejoiced in the Appellation "Great Thief"—Many Others Equally Ludicrous.

If, as reported, the czar of Russia intends to abandon his title, "autocrat of all the Russias," he will sacrifice the most exalted of his many dignities, a mere recital of which would fill half a column and which are certainly numerous enough to equip a score of reasonable potentates.

But even the czar's proud array of titles cuts a poor figure beside that of the sultan of Turkey, who in a Turkish newspaper was described not long ago in these extravagant terms:

"The finest pearl of the age and the esteemed center of the universe, at whose portals stand the camels of justice and mercy, and to whom the eyes of the kings and people in the west have been drawn, the rulers there finding an example of political prowess and the classes a model of mercy and kindness; our lord and master the sultan of two shores and the high king of the two seas, the crown of ages and the pride of all countries, the greatest of all khalifs, the shadow of God on earth, the successor of the apostle of the lord of the universe, the victorious conqueror (Al-Ghazi) Sultan Abdul-Hamid Khan."

There have been several sovereigns who have actually claimed to be divine; among them the kings of Ava and of Ceylon, each of whom was called "God."

His majesty of Ava in his letters to his fellow sovereigns spoke of himself as "King of kings, whom all others must obey, as he is the cause of preservation of all animals, the regulator of the seasons, the absolute master of the ebb and flow of the sea, brother to the sun and king of the four-and-twenty umbrellas."

The Kandyan monarch, equally lacking in humility, described himself as "the protector of religion, whose fame is infinite and of surpassing excellence, exceeding the moon, the unexpanded jessamine buds, and the stars, whose feet are as fragrant to the noses of other kings as flowers to bees, most noble patron and God by custom," etc.

The shah of Persia has an amazing array of titles, ranging from shah-in-shah (king of kings) to such poetical attributes as "the rose of delight," "the branch of honor" and "the mirror of virtue;" while his majesty of Arracan used to be proclaimed as "emperor of Arracan, possessor of the white elephant and the two earrings, and in virtue of this possession legitimate heir of Pegu and Brama; lord of the 12 provinces of Bengal and of the 12 kings who place their heads under his feet."

The king of Achem boasted almost as many high dignities as there are days in a year; among them "the sovereign of the universe, whose body is luminous as the sun; whom God created to be as accomplished as the moon at her plenitude; whose eye glitters like the northern star; a king as spiritual as a ball is round, who, when he rises, shades all his people, and from under whose feet a sweet odor is wafted."

But perhaps the most remarkable title any monarch was ever proud to own was one borne by the king of Monomotapa, whose praises were sung by his court poets and musicians as "lord of the sun and moon, great magician and great thief."

Genoa, the "Superb."

Genoa when seen from the sea richly deserves the title it has acquired of "the Superb," for most of the town, being built on the lower hills of the Ligurian Alps, there is an unparalleled opportunity for the display of architectural magnificence. Besides being celebrated for its churches, palaces, and pictures, Genoa can boast of having been the cradle of the banking business of the world, and even now more money matters are transacted there than in any other town in Italy. And to many of us, if we know nothing else about it, Genoa calls up pleasing memories of a cake, as beautiful Bath suggests a bun.—London Chronicle.

Founding of Weather Bureau.

Congress deserves the credit of founding the weather bureau. On February 9, 1870, a bill was passed which provided for the establishment of a national weather bureau. Under the provisions of this measure the department was in the jurisdiction of the army, its direction being placed in the hands of the United States signal corps.

A second bill was passed by congress on October 1, 1890, whereby the direction of the weather bureau was taken away from the signal corps and transferred to the department of agriculture.

Harsh.

The Actor (a terrible bore)—Awfully bad arrangements at Sloshport—played "Hamlet" there last week. Somebody yelled "fire!" and it took the audience 20 minutes to get out.

The Victim—I s'pose the poor beggar was lame. What!—The Sketch.

A Business Formula.

"I must say he was very businesslike with his proposal."

"As to how, my dear?"

"Told me to 'consider myself engaged.'"—Pittsburg Post.

Swans on the Thames.

More than 200 cygnets have been reared on the Thames between Southwark bridge and Marsh lock, Heney, during the last season. The largest brood, says the London Evening Standard, was one of nine cygnets at Halliford. The black swans at Goring which are owned by the Vintners Company, have also multiplied.

Altogether there are about 500 swans on the Thames between the places indicated, the King being the owner of the greatest number and the remainder being the property of the Dyers and Vintners companies.

ECHO THAT BEAT THEM ALL.

Man That Tole of It Had Not Traveled Far, But Surely Could "Go Some."

"Echoes," remarked the Great Traveler, "are queer things. They're queer for two reasons—their cause and the vast difference in their sounds. Science has explained why there are echoes, but it can't tell why one should reverberate with bass tones in response to a shrill tenor yell, while another reverses this, or responds naturally."

"I reck'n you've heerd a number o' echoes," said the man, whose furthest trip from home was a distance of 41½ miles.

"Rather. I recall one in Switzerland; the echo rolled for just four seconds, no more, no less. Then there's one in the Pyrrenees that jumps six times, first loud and harsh, then low and soft, then loud again, and so on. There's one in the western part of Germany that holds a full sentence of seven words before releasing a sound, thus rivaling a certain echo in Afghanistan, which doesn't repeat until a minute and a half have elapsed."

"I'd like to listen to a few of 'em," suggested the home-staying man, with a suspicion of distrust in the tones of his voice.

"Of course, you would," responded the traveler. "There's nothing in the world like a good echo."

"You're right," said the other. "I ain't never been but a few miles frum hum, but I've heerd one of the strangest echoes that can be. Beats any of yours all to shucks. Up in the little range of hills 20 miles yonder is a ravine. If you stand at one end of that ravine an' yell 'Jones,' what echo spose'll come?"

"I have no idea," said the traveler.

"Well, sir, it says, kind o' questionin' like, 'Jones? Jones? What Jones?'"

"After all," mused the great traveler, "it's hard to stump a homebody."

Reward of Honesty.

One day recently a teacher in Bolton school picked up in the street a chamois bag, and, peering inside, saw some diamonds. Advertisements telling of the loss of $2,000 worth of diamonds led the school teacher to the residence of the owner, the wife of a down town merchant. Incidentally a reward was offered, but the woman who found them is of character too high to make a reward a thing to be considered in such a case. She carried the diamonds to the woman who had lost them, and the latter seized them with all the joy that a woman could possibly show on the recovery of her jewels.

"And now," said the woman, "you shall have a reward of $10 if you take it out in trade in my husband's shop."

The school teacher's sense of humor prevented her from showing any disgust, and she told the owner that she could not think of taking a reward for common honesty, and was only too glad to find the owner. During the conversation the woman was counting the diamonds and she suddenly broke out with:

"One of them is missing! One of them is missing! What are you going to do about that?"

"The best I can do about that," replied the school teacher, "is to wish that more were missing. Good day."—Cleveland Press.

In Milk Street, Boston.

A young man who was in such a hurry to get out of the Milk street subway station that he forgot to exercise ordinary politeness, very nearly caused a serious accident yesterday about one o'clock. As he raced up the exit stairway through the crowd he brought his heel back into the face of an elderly lady close behind him. She gave a shriek of pain and fright and staggered backward. A man behind her was jostled and, losing his balance, also staggered backward. For a moment it looked as if a whole row would go down like ninepins, when a big man near the foot of the flight stretched out his stout arms and stayed the human avalanche. The indignant ones looked for the young man that they might fall upon and smite him, but he had disappeared.—Boston Post.

Law of Attraction.

The attractions of men to women and women to men are full of the most perplexing inconstancies and contradictions imaginable. It is, for instance, a physical law that magnetism is not simple attraction of one thing for another, but the difference of two opposing forces of attraction and repulsion, of which the former is the greater. The same law holds in relation to the attraction of men and women for each other, in which, as a rule, the masculine is the superior force.

A Studied Explanation.

"Will you be able to explain your attitude on the tariff?"

"Yes," answered Senator Sorghum. "I'll have my explanation ready when the time comes. But I'll wait till my constituents are interested in other things and will carefully make it a little hard to understand."—Washington Star.

Helpful Literature.

"What books have helped you most?" asked the serious young woman.

"I don't remember their names," answered Senator Sorghum. "But they're the government publications I am permitted to present to my admiring constituents."

A Missionary Appropriation

BY EDITH MORGAN WILLETT

(Copyright, by J. B. Lippincott Co.)

The New York Express thundered into the trim little station at Wheatley on Saturday night just as the clock in the waiting room struck nine.

Clang went the brakes, out flew the mail bags and finally down the steps of the end car came the passengers.

There were five in cadet uniforms and the Burglar.

No one, however, who was not personally acquainted with this last individual would have suspected an artist of his profession in the spare, dapper, overcoated figure, carrying a suit case, who walked briskly up the platform.

Past the waiting room he sped with hurrying feet, for there was a house in the neighborhood to "pull off" within the next two hours and no time to lose.

He had just let himself quickly out of the station door and was hastening down the steps, grateful for their obscurity, when there came heavy footfalls behind him and a hand was suddenly clapped on his shoulder.

"Well! Well!" said a loud, cherry voice, "here you are! I thought I was never going to catch you!"

The Burglar faced about like a shot, eyeing, with growing alarm, the burly individual in the fur overcoat.

"Detective" flashed through his mind as he began stiffly: "I think you have the advantage of me, sir!"

"Of course I have!" laughed the genial stranger, taking him warmly by both hands. "My dear sir, let me assure you that you are a very well-known character here and that Wheatley is delighted to get hold of you at last."

Icy shivers crept clear down to the Burglar's shoe laces at this ominous declaration, while for a moment near prospects of jail and hand-cuffs obscured his mental vision. Yet he pulled himself together and, with a last feeble attempt at dignity:

"Look here!" he blustered, "you've made a mistake; let me go, please; I'm in a hurry; a friend is expecting me."

But the other only smiled knowingly.

"That's all right," he said, "just let me explain, sir. Dr. Delano hoped to meet you himself at the train to take you to the rectory, but circumstances—that is to say, measles in the family—made it impossible, so I am to have the privilege of entertaining you during your stay here. My name is Boyleston—Josiah P. Boyleston—senior warden of 'All Angels.' Now, Mr. Swift," taking his bewildered victim firmly by the arm, "just step this way, sir, my team's waiting right around the corner."

"Mr. Swift!" At this magic word a sudden light dawned in the Burglar's troubled brain. "Old party's spotted the wrong cove," he told himself between gasps as he was hurried breathlessly along the platform. "Takes me for a pal; now how'm I going to get out of this without a fuss?"

At the corner of the station a smart mail phaeton was drawn up and a groom in livery stood at the horses' heads.

"Here, Smithers," Mr. Boyleston called to that functionary, "take this gentleman's grip—well, sir," with a genial smile, "won't you step on board?" His supposed guest hesitated a moment.

"And, indeed, why not?" he argued with himself with lightning rapidity. An explanation would undoubtedly be risky at this late hour, while—after all—the Davidge house could just as well be operated on another night. Besides, since the real Mr. Swift was not on hand to be entertained, why should not he, the Burglar, take advantage of this tempting invitation?

So with almost instant decision he stepped nimbly into the trap and allowed himself to be covered by the buffalo robe. His host took the lines. The groom swung himself up behind. They were off at a spanking trot. Before them stretched a broad, asphalt avenue. The lights of pretentious residences gleamed through the trees on either side.

"My house ain't a block from the church," Mr. Boyleston informed his guest smilingly, "right handy for you, sir."

A bit mystified by this announcement, the Burglar nevertheless acquiesced, eyeing the good man beside him critically from his astrakhan overcoat to the jolly red face surmounting it.

"Plain sort of customer," was his mental summing up. "Not much on polish, made his own pile—and a pretty sizable one, I guess."

"Well! Well! Here we are already."

The Burglar peered sharply round as the trap swung up a pebbled drive, drawing up with a flourish beneath a gigantic porte-cochete. Within, all was a blaze of lights, and the strange guest, as he stumbled up the wide marble steps, had a foggy impression of a red plush hall adorned with palms, and then of a stout lady in black silk and jet, who rushed towards him with outstretched hands. "I'm real glad to see you, sir," she said heartily, "and I assure you it's an honor to welcome you to our house."

"Thank you, madam," he responded appropriately. "My stay with you promises to be one not only of pleasure, but er—" his voice shook, "doubtless of profit to me!"

"My man will show you to your room, sir," went on Mrs. Boyleston, much impressed by her visitor's manners.

"Dinner's over, but we'll have a little bite of something, Mr. Swift, as soon as you're ready, sir!"

When the Burglar at length found himself alone in the magnificent guest chamber his repressed mirth broke forth over the delicious irony of the situation.

"Me a missionary," he chuckled, as he carefully examined the silver articles on the dressing table. "If that ain't the limit! Well! Well! I've shammed butler and even valet many a time for the sake of a haul, and by gosh! I'm willing to enter the church if necessary to get the 'orntray' of a house like this!"

Fifteen minutes later in the gorgeous peacock-blue and Nile-green dining room "Mr. Swift" sat the guest of honor at a well-laden board, facing a buffet the contents of which made his professional eye glitter, while his host plied him with delicacies.

"You know," Mrs. Boyleston informed him earnestly as she stuffed his plate with chicken salad, "I've always had the greatest respect for a man in your walk of life. It seems to me, Mr. Swift, that yours is the noblest calling in the world."

The Burglar merely smiled modestly, as he raised his well-laden fork to his mouth.

"It is a beautiful thought," his hostess pursued, with increased enthusiasm, "of how you go from place to place just helping people."

Her guest choked uncomfortably over his chocolate, reflecting that his business, as it happened, consisted solely in helping himself.

Misplaced admiration is rather disconcerting, and in some confusion the Burglar turned to his host. "I say!" he began with a hasty glance around the room, "that's a handsome piece of bronze over there; genuine Satsuri, isn't it?"

"Is it?" Mr. Boyleston inquired, gazing at the Mandarin opposite with pleased surprise. "Well, you don't say. I know it cost me a cool two hundred, but I don't pretend to be anything of a connyseer."

"Conne-sure, pa," prompted Mrs. Boyleston reprovingly. "My husband just got the house chuck full of expensive classic ornaments!" she informed her guest loftily.

"I'm a bit of a collector myself," the Burglar observed with considerable truth. "You see, in the course of my travels I've picked up a lot of that sort of things, as well as er—pictures, and even silver and jewelry."

He had not overshot the mark.

"Now, that's good," ejaculated his host with manifest delight. "I'd just like to show you a sapphire necklace I gave Malvina on Christmas. It's in a safe upstairs, for the fact is, there's been a good deal of alarm about burglars lately, and one has to be careful—" "Well, sir," he continued, breaking off as the butler entered the room, "I'm going to take you round the house after tea and get your opinion on a lot of our truck."

Mr. Boyleston was as good as his word, and it was a delightful and unusual experience for the Burglar to have a wealthy householder lead him from room to room pointing out each object of value, with much useful information.

The wonderful evening was concluded by an inspiring peep into his host's safe—the mechanism of which that open-hearted gentleman carefully explained to his interested guest.

"It's been a great pleasure, showing my things to such an appreciative man," he said warmly when he at length conducted the Burglar to his own room. "Well, good-night, sir; I suppose you've got to work up your sermon now for to-morrow. That's right, go ahead and plead the cause of the heathen. There's plenty of us rich fellows in the neighborhood, and I give you full leave to get as much out of me as you can."

Cheered by this liberal permission the Burglar prepared to carry out his host's injunctions to the letter—as soon as the house should have quieted down.

ROBBERY IN HIGH LIFE.
FIFTY THOUSAND DOLLARS GONE IN A NIGHT.

Then, below in diminishing print:

"The handsome residence of Mr. Josiah P. Boyleston, on Fairlawn avenue, was entered last night, the thief, who is believed to be a well-known New York crook, making off with silver, jewelry and other valuables to the amount, it is estimated, of $50,000.

"Mr. Boyleston declined to discuss the robbery this morning, merely stating that the case had been reported at once to the police, who were doing their utmost to trace the fugitive."

Custom of the Middle Ages.

It was in the middle ages that covers were first put over dishes; that was to prevent poisoning. The servants had to taste the viands before the guests partook of them, to insure the safety of the latter, and it was a sign of inferiority of position to eat of any viand which had not first been tasted. The person who did that was practically assuming the status of a servant.

Great Industry of Marseilles.

Marseilles produces much oil besides olive oil. Its 45 mills crush about 465,000 tons of seed each year. Peanuts, sesame, copra, linseed, cotton seed, colzas, poppy seed and castor seed are crushed there. About 400,000 barrels of olive oil and about 150,000 barrels of cotton-seed oil are bonded annually. Most of the cotton-seed oil is mixed with other oils and sold as table oil.

WHAT IT COSTS THIS COUNTRY TO FEED RATS.

In an article on the rat pest in the October number of Popular Mechanics, the following interesting statement is made:

The brown rat is practically omnivorous. Its bill of fare includes seeds and grains of all kinds, flour, meal and food products made from them; fruits and garden vegetables, mushrooms, bark of growing trees, bulbs, roots, stems, leaves and flowers of herbaceous plants, eggs, chicks, ducklings, young pigeons, young rabbits, milk, butter, cheese, fresh meat, carrion, mice, fish, frogs and mussels. This great variety of food explains the ease with which rats adapt themselves to almost any environment.

Experiments show that the average quantity of grain consumed by a full-grown rat is fully two ounces a day, and a half-grown rat eats about as much as an adult. Fed on grain a rat eats forty-five to fifty pounds a year, worth about sixty cents if wheat, or $1.80 if oatmeal. Fed on beefsteaks worth twenty-five cents a pound, or on chicks or squabs with a much higher prospective value, the cost of maintaining a rat is proportionately increased. Granted that more than half the food of rats is waste, the average cost of keeping one rat is still upward of twenty-five cents a year.

If an accurate census of the rats of the United States were possible, a reasonably correct calculation of the minimum cost of feeding them could be made from the above data. If the number of rats supported by the people throughout the United States were no more than equal to the number of domestic animals on the farms—horses, cattle, sheep and hogs—the minimum cost of feeding them would be upward of $100,000,000 a year. To some such enormous total every farmer, and every householder who has rats upon his premises, contributes a share.

DRAWINGS OF TIME.

Make Them Requires Great Care as to Details.

In apportioning the amount of material for each detail of a piece of machinery great care is taken, in advance, to determine just how small an amount will safely and certainly satisfy the demands which are to be made upon it. But why should not the time for performing each operation on these details also be determined, in advance, and with equal care?

In purchasing the raw material great care is taken, in advance, to purchase only just such quantities and individual pieces as will allow of conversion into detail with the least waste. Why should not the quantity of productive time represented by different types of men, machinery or apparatus also be determined, in advance, and with equal care?

As regards material great care is used in determining, in advance, the necessary clearances between parts, either because some of them are movable or to facilitate construction, and so as to follow just enough and no more. Why should not the clearances between the successive different operations on the same piece of material, and also between successive similar operations on similar parts of different contracts or orders, be determined in advance, and with equal care?

It is just as possible and as vitally necessary to draw, to represent with lines, to make a graphic record, of the results of the observation, thought and calculation whereby the time which should be, not the time which is, consumed in the performance of each individual operation is determined, as to draw the part itself.—Engineering Magazine.

A BIOLOGICAL PROBLEM.

Physical Characteristics of Mulatto Practically Unstudied.

The anatomy of the Amreican negro is not well known, and, notwithstanding the oft-repeated assertions regarding the hereditary inferiority of the mulatto, we know hardly anything on this subject. If this vitality is lower than that of the full-blooded negro, this may be as much due to social causes as to hereditary causes. Owing to the very large number of mulattoes in our country, it would not be a difficult matter to investigate the biological aspects of this question thoroughly, and the importance of the problem demands that this should be done. Looking into a distant future, it seems reasonably certain that with the increasing mobility of the negro, the number of full-bloods will rapidly decrease, and since there is no introduction of new negro blood, there can not be the slightest doubt that the ultimate effect of the contact between the two races must necessarily be a continued increase of the amount of white blood in the negro community.—Professor Franz Boas, in Science.

Right Under Her Nose.

The Teacher—I was so confused that I don't remember how many times he kissed me.

The Pupil—What! With the thing going on right under your nose!—Cuts.

A Social Distinction.

Certificates cannot be applied on any purchase made previous to Oct. 7, 1909. Only one certificate may be applied on the purchase of one piano.

THE JUDGING—Disinterested judges will be chosen who will select the winner, and the decision of the judges will be final. All prize winners will be notified. Judges' names will be announced.

SIMPLE DIRECTIONS—Cut out the pieces and paste together, thus making the two well known American generals. Write the names of the general under each picture. The neatest correct answer will be awarded first prize, others in accordance to their worth.

In case the judges find two or more answers of equal merit, duplicates of the prize offered will be given to each. All answers must be in before 12 P. M., Oct. 7, 1909. Copies of this advertisement will be furnished free on application at this office.

M'NULTYS TEAM WINS IN A "PRETTY" GAME

McNulty Brothers' club, of New York, won a close game from the locals Saturday, putting two runs over the pan in the fourth inning and blanking Plainfield for eight consecutive innings. In the ninth Randolph got around on a hit and two sacrifices. Luck played an important part in the scoring, but the way luck broke for the home team was heat-breaking. In three innings Plainfield had the bases full with but one out but could not score. The home team played far and away the better game but they could not get a lead on the hoodoo that works so hard when they are playing against a team like the McNultys.

Barnes and Emery were there with the stick, making five hits between them. Yesterday Plainfield journeyed to New York for a return game with the same team and lost by the score of 4 to 1. Saturday's score:

SCOTCH PLAINS, FIVE; NEWARK GIANTS, ONE

The Newark Colored Giants met defeat in the game at Scotch Plains, yesterday afternoon, the home club winning by a score of 5 to 1. The contest was an interesting one. Mitchell, who was in the box for the Giants, had the right sign on the Plains batters, allowing them but three hits and fanning thirteen men. MacLaughlin allowed but five scattering hits and struck out six men. The Plains won the game by bunching hits and Mitchell's wildness at times. Following is the lineup and score by innings:

NETHERWOOD FINISHES SEASON WITH VICTORY

The Netherwood A. C. played its last game of the season with the Plainfield A. C., defeating the latter by a score of 7 to 0. The Netherwoods outclassed their opponents all through the contest, Dufford being found for thirteen hits. Frederickson's curves kept the Plainfielders guessing from start to finish.

The Netherwoods have an average of .750 for the season, winning twenty-one out of twenty-eight games played. Frederickson pitched twenty-six games and lost five. M. Terry caught every contest played by the club and proved a tower of strength with the stick. J. Kiely, the star left fielder, and Harry Wall, in centre, played great ball all season, Kiely making only two errors. Lamberson, Brick and Peterson with V. Terry on short, took good care of the infield. Score by innings of Saturday's game.

NEWARK PROVIDENCES ARE DEFEATED HERE

The Providence A. C., of Newark, met defeat at the hands of the Plainfield Association football club, on the Clinton avenue grounds, Saturday afternoon by a score of 2 to 1. The contest was one of the best of the season and the Plainfield aggregation is elated over its victory.

The game was called at 3:30 with the Plainfield boys playing against a strong sun. The Newarkers had a clever run down the field, but it was lost by the ball going over the bar. During the first half the play was pretty even, but the local club was seen to be a little in the lead as regards play. Half time was called with no scoring.

On starting the second half the home team rushed down the field, and scored a pretty goal by Hosie, during the first two minutes play. On re-starting they again rushed the visitors' goal, but the ball went over. This aroused the Newarkers a little, and they made great attempts to score, but scarcely got over half field. After a half-hour of play they made a fine rush down-field and in a close scrimmage, secured an equalizing goal.

The home team then took a fresh hold on the game and made a perfect target of the visitors' goal. During a scrimmage, a goal was secured by the ball being kicked against a Newark man, making the score 2 to 1 in favor of Plainfield. The home team was playing great football, and put it all over the visitors. No more scoring was done and the game ended in favor of the home club.

The five forward men of the Plainfield team did great work, assisted by their half-back line, and the playing of the local backs was so close that McNeice only kicked the ball about three times in the second half. The Newark goal-keeper played as fine football as has ever been witnessed here, making marvelous saves. It was altogether a great game, and was well patronized. The Plainfielders have not lost a game this season, all three contests being victories for them. The lineups of the two teams follow:

P.H.S. FOOTBALL TEAM BEGINS SCHEDULE, OCT. 9

Manager James Mauger, of the P. H. S. football team, has announced that the first game will be played Saturday, October 9 at Cranford. The team has been putting in some hard work recently and will doubtless make a good showing in its first game. Principal Best, who is coaching the boys, is pleased with the available material.

The following is a list of those trying for positions: Doane and J. Ricketts, left-end; Carpenter and Carr, left tackle; Ramsey and Berse, left guard; Bellows and Moy, centre; Widowson and Tompson, righ guard; H. VanZandt, right tackle; Phillips and E. VanZandt, right end; Rifferts and Clark, quarterback. Those trying for fullback are Overton, Nash and Widowson. The last named does not know which position he likes better, guard or one of the backs. Two new balls have been purchased and its worth a walk out to Union street to see the Welshman kick them.

The football schedule as it is up today is as follows: Cranford, Oct. 9; Westfield, Oct. 13; Rahway, Oct. 16; Rutgers Prep, Oct. 30; Bound Brook, Nov. 6 and 25; N. P. H. S., Nov. 20. Games are pending with the High School of Commerce, New York, Battin High, Pingry and Wilson Military Academy.

"Does it work?" interpolated Pinckney. "If you'd ever seen it you'd understand it would work."

"Yes, indeed," exclaimed Frances. "Father will struggle along for five or ten or even fifteen minutes, but at last that steady stare gets too much for his nerves. He'll begin to make mistakes in his dictating; and at last he'll jump out of his chair and stare, and then mother will heave a long sigh and say: 'George, dear, I know you are tired. Don't you think you'd better stop awhile?' And he stops."

"What a splendid system!" laughed Sommers. "And what do you do, Miss Durant, when you want to manage him?"

The girl smiled.

"Oh, that's a secret," she said. "I have my own way of doing it, but it works, doesn't it, Edward?"

"You're right there," agreed Pinckney. "I won't forget in a hurry how you handled him on the wireless telegraphy scheme."

"Wireless telegraphy!" exclaimed the naval man. "Do you mean to tell me that you understand wireless telegraphy too?"

"Not very much," confessed the girl, "but I do know something about it. Edward taught me the rudiments, and then I went to work myself. I got some of the men up from the shops, and they rigged up a station for me at the top of the house. Father did not know a thing about it until one day I brought him up there and showed him. He didn't think it was very nice for a girl, but what could he do?"

"Oh," said Sommers, "I see your system. You do what you please and then make him agree."

"Don't you think it a good one?" inquired the girl innocently.

The man smiled and shrugged his shoulders.

"Good for little things, but how would it work for a big one?"

The question was lightly put, and all three were smiling. The smiles on the men's faces were just a bit set, for behind that question both knew there was a great deal left unsaid.

Frances tossed her head lightly, but the tone of her answer was vital with disfavor.

"And on the big ones, too, Mr. Sommers. I do always what seems best to me."

Pinckney turned away sharply, while the smile in the face of the naval officer became more natural and a little broader.

"You know I'd like to see this wireless room," he said. "It must be a bully place."

"Oh, it's a workroom," the girl insisted—"nothing foolish about it. I'm not as good yet as Edward at sending and taking, but then I have more time to practice, and if he doesn't hustle I'll beat him."

"You flatter me," said Pinckney. "Really, Mr. Sommers, she can beat me, I think, but we do have great fun working over it."

"Yes; Edward and I are more or less partners—in this," agreed Frances.

"Partners?"

Sommers tried to keep his tone lightly unpersonal, but a little hardness had to creep in. The two men were so naturally antagonistic that probably they must have taken opposite sides on anything, and the feeling of each for the girl only tended to bring out more keenly their inborn antipathy. Since the afternoon when Pinckney interrupted the practical love scene between Frances and Sommers on the hill above the works the tension had been greater than ever between the men. Each treated the other with elaborate courtesy, but it needed only a word on either side to bring about real trouble. The more impulsive and domineering Pinckney had been close to the limit of endurance several times, and on each occasion the cool courtesy, the splendid self control and the good breeding of the naval officer had prevented an outbreak. Sommers realized his position. He knew that Pinckney was the manager of the works where his gun was to be cast. He knew also that Pinckney probably in the end would marry the girl they both loved, and in many respects he had the right of way. All this had made the naval man circumspect in his dealings. He could not afford to have an open break with Pinckney.

An open fight between a naval officer on duty, as Sommers practically was, and a manager of a big gun works must result in a court martial and the possible disgrace of the officer, and unless the provocation were great it would mean bringing the uniform into disgrace by conduct which might be construed as unbecoming an officer and a gentleman. Pinckney had no one except Mr. Durant to whom he must account, and Sommers knew that a man as clever and as unscrupulous as he believed Pinckney in some ways to be would not hesitate to do anything that might put a rival in an embarrassing position. However, the naval man could not imagine for a moment that the manager could be guilty of any conduct that might injure his work. He considered the matter between them entirely a personal fight, and he believed that Pinckney's ill will would not go further than some petty spite to injure him or supplant him with Miss Durant. The thought that Pinckney and the girl were partners in a wireless telegraph scheme against his will irritated the lieutenant.

"Couldn't I see the room?" he asked. "Though it does seem rather queer your having a workroom instead of a music room or a studio."

"Or a dressing room," laughed Frances.

"Yes, or a dressing room," he agreed. "That's the sort of thing we might expect our young women of today to have."

The girl tilted her chin proudly.

"Well, Mr. Doubter, if you will just come with me I'll show you it's a real workroom."

"Indeed I will," he agreed eagerly.

The girl arose.

"Come on, then."

They had almost reached the door when she remembered that Pinckney had not been included in her invitation. He was standing over by the mantel, both hands stuffed in his pockets, and was grimly looking into the fire.

"Oh, I forgot!" she exclaimed. "You want to come too, Edward? If you do, come ahead."

For a second he seemed about to accept her invitation. Then she added quickly:

"But, then, it would bore you. You can come up any time."

The manager shrugged his shoulders with elaborate carelessness.

"Yes; I have something to do," he confessed.

Then, after they had gone, he turned back to the fire angrily with a muttered exclamation:

"I'll fix that young cub!"

CHAPTER IV.

A DESPERATE GAME.

LIEUTENANT SOMMERS looked around at the complete little workshop in amazement. Besides the wireless outfit, he saw tools, models, sharps, a drawing table, a little workbench—everything, in fact, that it seemed to him a mechanical inventor would really need.

"You use all these!" he exclaimed.

"Why, of course!" she said. "This is my fun. I work up here on dark days, and we have plenty of those in Pittsburg, you know."

The man could not have controlled his astonishment. He examined several of the models. They were on improvements in wireless telegraphy, various mechanical devices and on even the model of a little gun.

"Oh. I've patented them all!" exclaimed Frances. "I don't know that any of them amounts to much, but I patented them just the same. You see, you're not the only gun inventor, Mr. Sommers."

"Then the Sommers gun has to compete with the Frances Durant gun?" he asked quizzically.

She shook her head, smiling.

"No; I'll tell you a secret. I wouldn't let them make a gun of mine if I could patent it, but that is just a little model of the Rhinestrom gun, which Edward has great faith in. Marsh made the model for me."

"Oh, the Rhinestrom gun!" said Sommers, with lifted eyebrows. "I've heard something of that around the

"Then the Sommers gun has to compete with the Frances Durant gun?"

works. Your man Marsh seems to have great faith in it. Who is this Rhinestrom?"

Frances shook her head.

"I don't know. Think he must be some German. Edward just told me that we had bought the patents and controlled them. But that doesn't affect your gun any, does it?"

Sommers looked up from the model he had been studying.

"Frankly," he said, "if this model is correct it won't affect my gun. The Sommers gun has the good points of this one and a new principle which I expect will partly revolutionize things for whoever manufactures it.

"It all depends on the forging. If my gun is forged right and properly tempered, well"—he paused, then went on with a confident smile—"I don't want to brag, but honestly I am not afraid of any gun that ever was cast. It will all be in the forging, and tomorrow will tell that. We'll put it through tomorrow night."

"Oh, I hope it goes through all right!" cried the girl. "It must go through! It would be terrible to think of a failure."

"Yes," he said grimly, "it would."

"It would mean," she asked, "the blasting of your hope?"

He shrugged his shoulders.

"That would be a minor consideration. It would mean death to the men who are handling the gun and court martial and disgrace for me. You see why I'm interested."

"But there's no chance of a failure," she exclaimed, her eyes big with alarm.

Sommers laughed.

"Not of the Durant works, I think," he said. "That's why I was glad when the government decided to have a gun cast here. Your father's plant there has a reputation for the highest class, most careful work, so I feel safe, even if you do own patents on the Rhinestrom gun."

"You'll be here for the forging?" she asked.

"Of course," he replied. "I'll be down in the works superintending as much as I can."

"And I," murmured the girl, half to herself, "will be up here waiting eagerly, anxiously, watching for you to come with the news that everything has gone right. Oh, what a pity it is that you should invent this gun and not get anything for your brains and your labor!"

He shook his head, smiling.

"No," he said; "it's right. That's part of the contract I made with Uncle Sam when he took me in at Annapolis. He educated me, gave me the chance to work, and I promised to devote my life to him.

"We're all merely cogs in the big machine, Miss Durant, we fellows from Annapolis and West Point, cogs in the machine that makes the flag, and the flag's the biggest thing to us, you know. It's hard sometimes, fearfully hard. We have to give up a lot. But it's duty, and duty is what we must think of."

The girl had been looking at him, admiration and just a hint of something more showing in her face.

"Yes," she said at last; "after all, you men of the navy and the army are the real patriots working for your country. You seem to be about the only ones who do any real sacrificing." Then her voice became more earnest. "But I don't see why you should sacrifice everything."

The man laughed somewhat grimly.

"That's just it, you see," he said. "We try not to sacrifice everything. We always try not to sacrifice our self respect, I think."

"Self respect, fiddlesticks! It isn't self respect men won't sacrifice," she snapped. "It's generally selfishness. Oh, how you men do love to fool yourselves! You step back and stand on your dignity, so proud and hard and rigid, and you pretend you're suffering, that you are heroes who won't sacrifice self respect, and in reality you are nothing of the kind. You are simply stupid self deceivers who are willing to sacrifice your future, happiness, everything, on the altar of your own selfishness—really sacrifice yourselves and sometimes"—

She paused suddenly, aghast at what she was about to say.

"And sometimes?" the man questioned unsteadily.

"And sometimes girls talk more than they should," she ended sharply. Then she looked at him with a sudden smile and quick change of mood that baffled him completely. "I think it's time we went back to wireless telegraphy, don't you?"

Baffled, but still somewhat relieved at being saved from himself, Sommers turned to the wireless instrument.

"You can send and take well?" he asked.

"Of course," she answered. "Edward taught me originally, but I've learned a lot since. He's quite an adept too. I learned really because I wanted to have a wireless plant placed on father's yacht. Perhaps some time when I'm cruising on the yacht I may pick you up when you are on your battleship and have a little chat with you. Do you think you'd be glad to hear from me?"

"I'd be glad to hear from you no matter where I was," he exclaimed eagerly, "and I'd recognize you, too, whether the message was directed to me or not."

"I will send it to you," she said, with meaning, "and you must recognize it."

"I will; you may be sure of that," he agreed earnestly. "And now I think I must be going. It's late."

He turned within the door and then started back to the drawing room.

Meantime down in the drawing room Edward Pinckney had been having an uncomfortable quarter of an hour. Marsh had come up from the works determined to see Mr. Durant.

Pinckney had not told the master draughtsman of the contract which he had signed, and Marsh, thoroughly imbittered with the prospect of losing everything he had done, hurried up to the house determined to lay bare the whole matter before the owner of the works, throw himself on Durant's mercy and beg that at least he be given credit for the invention of the Rhinestrom gun.

Fortunately Pinckney had been in the drawing room when the butler brought in Marsh's name and so had been able to intercept the man before he got to Durant.

"I don't want to talk to you," exclaimed the inventor when he entered and found it was Pinckney and not Durant he had been shown in to see. "I don't want any more of your soft talk. You talk and promise, but you don't do anything. I ought to have known better than to trust you the other day when you fooled me down at the works with all that stuff about giving me a chance. I felt in my heart you weren't going to do it; but, like a fool, I trusted you, and this is what I get for it. You haven't made any contract. You haven't done anything but run ahead and perfect the patents, and now I am entirely at your mercy. I'm going to fool you. I'm going to put it up to the old man. He's on the level anyhow. He'll give me a chance and a little reputation even if he doesn't give me the money. I'm going to see him, I tell you. I'm going to stay here till I do."

The voice of the man had risen until he was fairly shouting at the general manager.

"Don't yell like that," protested Pinckney.

"I don't wonder you want me to keep quiet," sneered the inventor. "You ought to want me to keep quiet."

Pinckney had regained his wits now. He saw it was the time for diplomacy, not force, so he put on his blandest, most ingratiating smile.

"Now, listen to me, Marsh," he pleaded. "You're up in the air with this because you've got an entirely wrong idea of me. Ever since that accident you've acted as if I were to blame."

"I don't want to talk about that," exclaimed the inventor. "You can't sidetrack me with any talk like that."

"But I want you to get a square deal," protested Pinckney. "I'm going to see that you do."

Marsh looked at him with a sneer.

"You call it a square deal to give the credit for all my work to another?"

"Of course it wouldn't be!" exclaimed the manager. "That's just it. I'm going to put it through for you if you'll only give me a chance."

"After what you said the other day?" sneered the other.

"And I've done it," snapped Pinckney.

"You've done it?"

The general manager nodded.

"Exactly," he said. "The contract between Wilhelm Rhinestrom and the Durant steel works has been drawn up, signed by Rhinestrom and by me for the Durant steel works, but only waits for the approval of Mr. Durant, and I'll get that tonight."

"Rhinestrom signed it!" gasped Marsh. "How could Rhinestrom sign it when there isn't any Rhinestrom?"

Pinckney looked at him pityingly.

"What do you care who signed it for Rhinestrom if you get the money?" he said. "The name on the contract is Wilhelm Rhinestrom."

"You forged that name!" gasped Marsh.

"Shut up!" snapped the other. "Don't be a fool! You can't forge a man's name if the man doesn't exist. Now take your money and be satisfied. Leave it to me. I'm your friend. I'm proving myself your friend, and here you go ahead and kick up a fuss and risk the whole thing. I've taken a little risk myself to put this thing through and give you a square deal, and this is what you do in the way of gratitude. Now, aren't you ashamed of yourself?"

Marsh looked at the manager apologetically.

"I'm sorry, Mr. Pinckney," he said. "I'm always playing the fool, it seems. You've been a good friend of mine, sir, and I want to thank you for helping me out. I'll be grateful. I won't make any trouble. I'll shut up."

Pinckney slapped the old man on the back almost affectionately.

"That's all right, Marsh," he said. "I realize you don't know anything in the world about business, realize that thoroughly, and I'm acting in this manner for the good of all. Now, you trust me. With this order we have from the government—it ought to keep us busy for a year—you'll be rich. You'll have a fortune, but if it were known who was the inventor we'd get nothing. You see that?"

Marsh nodded.

"I understand, sir."

"All right, Marsh. Then be good," advised the manager. "Now you'd better go."

The little man had got almost to the door when he paused and turned back.

"Just one thing more, Mr. Pinckney."

"Well?" said Pinckney impatiently.

"It's about the casting of the Sommers gun tomorrow."

"What about it?" asked the manager sharply.

Marsh hesitated.

"It's just this, sir. I understand that you're going to put Smith in charge of the works. You know what sort of a fellow Smith is?"

"Smith is a good man," said Pinckney sternly. "Don't criticise fellow employees, Marsh. I am responsible, and I know what I'm doing."

Still the little man, honest at heart, felt compelled to protest.

"Smith has been drinking for several days, sir, and he's already ugly. The last time he was charged with important work he ruined the gun and cost us a lot of money, besides throwing and hurting one of the men.

"Now, Sommers, I understand, intends to be down at the works to superintend forging these guns. If he and Smith get together there'll be trouble and the gun may be ruined, and that will cost us a lot more money."

Pinckney looked at him with a sneer.

"Seems to me, Marsh," he said, "that the inventor of the Rhinestrom gun is taking an awful interest in the gun of his rival. What do you want to do—manage the business yourself and spoil Sommers' gun?"

"Mr. Pinckney," exclaimed Marsh indignantly, "you haven't any right to talk that way to me. I was telling you something for your own good and the good of the works."

"Look here, Marsh"—Pinckney's manner had grown suddenly stern—"I am the general manager of the Durant works, and I don't propose to take any interference from you or any other employee. I have ordered Smith in charge of that work, and he's going to be in charge and he's going to do it right.

"If there's any danger of Sommers coming down there and raising a row, we will simply slap the gun in a few hours ahead of the schedule, and it'll all be over before he gets there. Now, you go attend to your own business and keep your mouth shut. Good night."

INCREASING WORKK OF THE U. S. COURTS.

"The United States Courts," by Orin Judson Field, chief clerk of the Department in Washington, D. C., is the title of a striking article in the July number of the North American Review, showing the immense amount of business transacted by the United States courts. He begins:

"That a rapidly increasing amount of litigation of national importance is becoming the subject matter of suits in the Federal courts; that earnest and successful efforts are being made to enforce our national laws, particularly those of recent enactment, such as the pure food and drugs act, the safety appliance act, the anti-trust and interstate commerce laws; and that the government is watchful of the commercial interests of its citizens through the operations of the Federal bankruptcy law of 1898 is shown by recent official statistics, which disclose that, during the year ended June 30, 1908 there were 28,250 suits and prosecutions commenced in the United States courts and 16,838 petitions in bnkruptcy filed. The aggregate judgments obtained and fines imposed amounted to $55,178,016. In bankruptcy cases the total liabilities were $122,621,509, while the assets realized were only $23,066,085."

TRICK THAT PUZZLED ROYALTY

I remember Queen Alexandra was greatly mystified by some of the tricks which I have had the honor of performing before her Majestey on various occasions, says a writer in the Strand Magazine. When I was giving a performance at which both the King and Queen were present, much interest was aroused by a trick which is one of the most difficult feats in my repertoire. It is performed with a piece of ribbon, a pack of cards, and a double-cased gold watch. Here is the trick:

I ask one of the audience to select a card from the pack (which is a new one), and to put the card in his pocket without looking at it. I should add here that while the card is being chosen my eyes are bandaged. Then I give him one end of the ribbon to hold and hand the other to somebody in the audience, whom I also ask to hold the gold watch.

I ask the person in whose pocket is the unknown card to concentrate all his atention on the card, and then I turn to the person holding the other end of the ribbon and ask him to open and look at the polished case of the gold watch, in which he at first sees a reflection of his own image; but this gradually fades away, and he sees instead the reflection of a playing-card. I then ask the person who has the card in his pocket to produce it, when it is seen to be the same as the one reflected in the case of the gold watch.

When I performed this trick at Marlborough House the Queen held one end of the ribbon and the gold watch, whilst the Prince of Wales held the other end of the ribbon and selected the card, which on that occasion was the three of clubs.

IMPORTING TROPICAL PLANTS.

During the past year the department of agriculture has brought into the United States more than 2,000 carefully selected plants from various parts of the world, with a view to diversifying the products of the soil in this country. Especial regard has been paid to the introduction of plants that will grow in sections in which either the drought or the severe cold has made it nearly impossible to obtain crops of any kind. These plants have been placed in the hands of private experimenters and official plant breeders. The results thus far obtained in domesticating them has been very encouraging.

Some of the most important of the plants have been gathered from arid portions of China, and it is believed they can be adapted to the dry States of the Southwest. Among these is a Chinese date palm, that it is said resists drought and produces a valuable fruit. New seedless persimmons have been brought here, pears, apricots and cherries of especial value being among other importations.

A new clover from the Himalaya Mountains can be grown in the hottest portions of the Southwest. Bamboo from the Orient has been planted in the Gulf States, and it is believed its cultivation will prove successful. Tropical plants hitherto unknown to the soil of the United States are being domesticated in the South.

Officials of the department declare that only the imagination can foresee what will be the result of this policy of the introduction of adaptable plants from every quarter of the globe.

Presence of Mind.

Mr. Phan (roaring from the top of the stairs)—Mildred! What is that young man doing down there so late?

Mildred (sweetly)—He's just doping out how the teams will finish for the pennant.

Mr. Phan (mollified)—All right. Tell him to take his time, not overlooking past performances and the possibility of a slump, and when he gets done he can compare with my list behind the clock on the bookcase.—Puck.

All men have a working knowledge of duty. A savage is a man who hasn't cultivated the art of making a great deal of talk about it.—Puck.

THE WATERSHED.

Black mountains pricked with pointed pine
A melancholy sky.
Outdistanced was the German vine;
The sterile fields lay high.
Through swarthy Alps I journey forth
Aloft; it was the North, the North;
Bound for the Noon was I.

I seemed to breast the streams that day;
I met, opposed, withstood
The Northward rivers on their way,
My heart against the flood—
My heart that strove to rise and reach,
And felt that love of altering speech,
Of frontiers, in its blood.

But oh, the unfolding South; the burst
Of summer! Oh to see
Of all the Southward brooks the first!
The traveling heart went free
With endless streams; tthat strif was stopped,
And down a thousand vales I dropped,
I flowed to Italy.

HOW QUILTINGS ARE MADE.

Among the finest and most distinctive varieties of textile fabrics are the cloths technically known as "quiltings," which, however, have nothing to do with bed quilts, but include such fabrics as piques, diamonds, matlongs and materials for gentlemen's light waistcoats.

The important processes in the manufacture of quiltings are zealously guarded as trade secrets, says the London Illustrated News. They represent the finest achievements in cotton cloth.

The extreme delicacy of their manufacture may be gathered from the fact that down even to twenty-five years ago they were still largely made on the hand-loom, the work being done not in mills, but given out to the workers in their own homes. By constant experiment and after many failures a quilting loom was constructed which could be driven by power, though its production was only slightly faster than the hand-loom. During the last twenty years great improvements have been introduced, especially at Bury, England, which claims to be the centre for the making of quiltings.

SOME SKIN SIGNS.

The skin is a sort of barometer of one's physical condition and the woman who would keep well learns to read it.

A blotchy or muddy skin frequently indicates a run down nervous condition or a bad stomach. It may also mean poor circulation.

A yellow skin is the hallmark of a torpid liver. Get that troublesome organ in good condition and your fair tints will return.

A florid skin usually bespeaks too great fondness for your food or unwise indulgence in heating liquids.

Gray skin may arise from poor circulation, anaemia or bad digestion.

Coarse, perous skin means not enough attention to keeping the pores in good condition. Pure soap and a scrubbing brush are in order.

Puffy skin practicaly around the eyes, may be flabbiness from lack of massage or may mean kidney complications.

Unnatural color, flushes of heat and eruption may be caused by internal disorder, poor circulation or over-tight clothing.

THE RUSSIAN CAFTAN.

One of the newest and most practical of fashions that are being adopted to the Russian ceftan, is a coat-like garment which is similar to that worn by Tolstoy, the great Russian author, in pictures with which we are familiar. The coat has a round or square neck, a slightly bloused bodice part and a straight bottom edge that ends just above the knees. It is confined at the waist by a satin belt; or, to make it more realistic, a silk coard. The sleeves are round and without fullness, ending above the elbow. The edges of the coat are bound with satin; for winter garments bands of fur will be used. The fastening is of ornamental or perfectly plain buttons and satin cord or braided buttonholes.

This style may be developed to the extreme, but in its simpler form is more dignified. It is best adapted for woolen material, linen and worsteds, although other fabrics will be used for coats made after this model. The style promises to be popular for smart fall and winter costumes.

A Soft Snap.

"Gee!" said the observing small boy, "when I grow up I'm going after a political job."

"What for?" asked the man.

"So's I can go to the ball games every afternoon," he replied.

HE EXPLAINED SOCIALISM

John Spargo Delivered Instructive Talk Before Monday Afternoon Club.

THE CREED AND OBJECTS.

The Socialists Demand Simply an Equal Opportunity Says the Distinguished Author.

The opening lecture of the Monday Afternoon club, by John Spargo, the socialistic author and lecturer, attracted a large and representative audience to the Hartridge School auditorium, yesterday afternoon. His subject was "What Socialism Really Is," and was treated with an earnestness so tempered with moderation that he held the close attention.

Mr. Spargo's definition of socialism, the social ownership of all means of production, distribution and exchange, he admitted must not be taken too literally and had a different meaning twenty years ago. The speaker said that the socialistic movement is making universal progress and he considered it in a threefold aspect, first a philosophy of hu- and third, as a political movement, and thidr, as a political movement.

Mr. Spargo said the socialist believes things are as they are, not by wickedness, but from changes in economic conditions. He did not believe Rockfellow and Harriman were worse than others. They were the product of the economic conditions of the times. Under the second head, Mr. Spargo said that modern soialism was not a scheme, but a spirit and principle of action. As a political movement, Mr. Spargo spoke of socialism as a baby, but the baby of a giant with such power and spiritual strength beyond the material progress that it were well to heed the Hebrew plea, as he called it, "Come let us reason together." Mrs. Eugene H. Hatch, elected president in May, presided at the meeting.

UNION COUNTY COURTS WERE OPENED TODAY

The October term of the Union County Courts was opened this morning at Elizabeth, with Justice James J. Bergen on the bench. There was a notable absence of many of the leading lawyers in the county.

Justice Bergen charged the Grand Jury, calling attention to the four murder cases to be tried; also to the fact that it is the duty of the members to ascertain facts and not decide cases. There was nothing else of special importance contained in the charge.

The Plainfield members of the Grand Jury are Joseph Harrigan, Frank W. Morse, John W. Johnson and Augustus G. Jenkins. Mayor Mravlag, of Elizabeth, is the foreman.

In the list of causes set for trial there are none of interest to Plainfield, a noteworthy fact, as it is the first instance in a log time that this has occurred.

It was announced that Judge Benjamin A. Vail would begin the trial of causes next Monday, but he cannot remain at Elizabeth long, because he is due at Somerville in about two weeks.

BOARD BILL BORED BILL; NOW IT BORES DUNELLEN

A new wrinkle in civic questions was raised before the Dunellen Common Council at yesterday's monthly meeting when Mrs. Elizabeth Schenck, a boarding house keeper, presented the board bill of former Marshal William R. Sliney to the Council for payment. The bill amounted to $16 and as it was contracted while Sliney was in the borough's employ Mrs. Schenck thought that Dunellen ought to pay it. Finally, the bill was ordered filed.

Then Constable R. L. Pierce came along with a writ of attachment for the board and costs on the salary due Sliney as marshal. Lastly Mayor Swackhamer appointed James Benson acting marshal for October at a monthly recompense of $20.

Fire Damage Trifling.

An overturned lamp set fire to the carpet and a bureau in Lawrence Conway's hotel on Rock avenue last night at 8 o'clock. An alarm was turned in but the blaze was extinguished before the firemen arrived on the scene. The members of the fire committee of the Common Council also attended the fire and complimented the department on their promptness in responding to the alarm. The damage was trifling.

DESPITE BIG PETITION WON'T ALLOW REFERENDUM

In a lengthy petition, containing thirty-eight foolscap pages of signatures of citizens, the patrolmen asked the Common Council at its October meeting, last night, to re-consider the question of allowing the people to vote for or against the adoption of a police pension bill. It was argued that a vote of the community is a fair way of ascertaining the sentiment either for or against a proposition and the patrolmen asked that the question be put to a vote at the November election.

Mr. Buxton's motion that the petition be laid on the table for the present, was carried, but after a recess, Councilman Clay moved to refer the matter to the committees on police and laws and ordinances. Mr. Clay explained that he did not want to be considered as opposing the idea, but he was not sure that the act under which the Council was requested to take advantage of is the best one. He called attention to the fact that in case the question failed to pass the first time, the Council would be required to again submit it to the people three years later.

Mr. Clay called attention to another feature which he considered undesirable and that is that while the present Council is asked to appropriate four per cent. of the police appropriation, there would be nothing to prevent future Councils from increasing the percentage. Mr. Clay then moved that the matter be referred to the police and laws and ordinance committees, which was done. It is the general belief that the question will not be submitted to a vote this year.

HEBREW CHARTER DANCE A BRILLIANT SUCCESS

The charter dance given last night at the Plainfield Dancing Academy by the Hebrew Ladies' Benevolent Society was an auspicious success and realized its projectors a handsome amount for the charity work the society carries on. About 200 were in attendance. Green and white, the colors of the society, were in evidence all over the hall. Special stage coaches from Perth Amboy, New Brunswick and Metuchen brought guests to the academy.

The winners of the prize waltz were the Misses Wyckoff and Maltey, of this city; Jesse Boylan and Joseph Marcus, of New Brunswick.

Several non-members present became interested in the society and made application for membership during the evening. The society boasts 45 members today, which is just double the number of last year's membership.

The officers of the society are Mrs. K. Rothberg, president; Mrs. L. Steigman, vice-president; Mrs. S. Miller, secretary; Mrs. A. Kunzman, treasurer; Mrs. J. Cohen, Mrs. O. Victorsen and Mrs. J. Shlaren, trustees. The arrangements for the dance were looked after by a committee consisting of Mrs. R. Rothberg, Mrs. O. Victorsen, Mrs. S. Miller, Mrs. J. Gernsman, Mrs. S. Hirsch, Mrs. J. Cohen and Mrs. L. Steigman. A. H. Richards, floor manager, was assisted by Abraham Victorsen and Samuel Rothberg

BEGIN SEASON'S WORK AT THE LOCAL Y. M. C. A.

An auspicious attendance marked the fall opening of the Young Men's Christian Association yesterday. General Secretary Parker found that the association was many members stronger than on the opening day last year.

G. L. Listman, the physical director, reported increased enthusiasm in his field of endeavor. The various classes and clubs have started upon the new term with full ranks. Three of the night classes are altogether new. The basketball team will hold its first practice game Friday evening. The boys' gymnasium class has its initial session at 4 o'clock this afternoon, and the men's class starts off at 8:15 o'clock this evening.

Bagagemaster Hurt.

While helping couple a car, David Shannock, a baggagemaster on the Jersey Central, was caught between cars this afternoon at Dunellen station and badly injured about the head. He was taken to Dr. Thomas H. Platt's office and given prompt treatment. He was not seriously hurt.

Surprised Miss Edmonds.

Miss Emma Edmonds, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lambert R. Edmonds, of West Front street, was given a surprise party last night in honor of the sixteenth anniversary of her birthday. Miss Edmonds received a number of gifts.

NOT CRIMINAL ASSAULT

Domenico Roberzio Released from Serious Charge in City Court.

MISS RUBBA'S STORY ERRATIC.

Simple Assault Complaint Suggested by Judge William N. Runyon Not Pressed Today.

Judge Runyon dismissed the complaint made against Domenico Roberzio in the city court this morning after hearing the complaining witness tell her story.

Roberzio, an Italian, escaped from this city about the middle of August after a complaint had been made against him of attmepted criminal assault on Josephine Rubba. He was arrested yesterday by the police and brought before Judge William Runyon in the city court this morning. Miss Rubba told her story through an interpreter and said that after her father had been arrested upon a minor complaint on August 15, Roberzio told her that she would have to accompany him to the office of a judge or a lawyer so that she could obtain the release of her father.

While on the way and in a place she could not remember she said that Roberzio attempted to assault her and threatened to kill her because she was the original cause of her father's arrest. According to her own story no attempt of a criminal nature was made by Roberzio but he did threaten her and did her some bodily injury. She also declared that she struggled with him for an hour or more in an effort to get away from him, but she could not or would not remember that her assailant had attempted to overpower with criminal intent.

She also said he only desisted from his attack when two women were seen approaching. She could not scream because he had her nose between his fingers.

In dismissing the complaint Judge Runyon said that the case had not been proven as to the first charge, but that he would entertain a charge of simple assault if the complainant decided to press it. Evidently some understanding was arrived at between the parties as the complaint was withdrawn altogether.

PRAISE FOR TRAVELL GIVEN BY THE BOARD

At the meeting of the Board of Education last night all the members except James F. Buckle were present and the regular routine business was despatched. Bills to the amount of $6,321.28 were ordered paid and the board was authorized to borrow $11,000 to meet current salary and other expenses. It was decided to hold a special meeting of the board on Monday, October 25, to open bids for the new schoolhouse to be erected on Dunellen avenue.

The formal acceptance of the resignation of former Principal Ira W. Travell was read and ordered engrossed. The engossed copy will be fowarded to Mr. Travell as soon as completed. The text follows:

"Resolved, That this board accepts the resignation of Mr. Ira W. Travell as principal of the Plainfield High School with sincere regret, and heartfelt appreciation of his sixteen years of valuable service as successful teacher, wise administrator, and devoted friend of his pupils, his fellow teachers, and his fellow citizens; that we express to him our gratitude for his long and faithful labors for the schools of the city of Plainfield, and our high esteem for his character of a Christian gentleman, which have so splendidly deserved the advancement of the larger fields of usefulness into which he has been called, and into which go with him our congratulations and best wishes for long continued and ever greater opportunity, service and reward."

This resolution was drawn by W. S. Tyler and will be signed by the entire board.

Released on Bail.

Young Charles Shirley, of the borough, was released from custody this morning when Frank Drake went on his bond for 1$50. Shirley is the boy who was accused, with Fred Conklin, of stealing a wagon from Charles Gear. It appeared for a time that Conklin was really Shirley's accomplice in the theft; but the latter denied it.

Charles W. Irwin Probation Officer.

Judge E. S. Atwater, in the Union County Court, this morning, appointed Charles W. Irwin, of Elizabeth, county probation officer, to succed Mrs. Emily Williamson, who held the office for a great many years.

CRUSADE OF TEMPERANCE

Scotch Plains Folk Object to Licensed Saloons in That Village.

COURT HEARING ON OCTOBER 8.

Counsellor George Ball Appears for the Remonstrants in Plains and Fanwood.

That it is the intention of the temperance people in Fanwood and Scotch Plains to prevent if possible the granting of any liquor licenses there, was shown at the opening of the October term of the Union county courts, this morning, at Elizabeth. At that time Lawyer George Ball appeared and protested against the granting of the applications of William Deegan, William Lee and Lynus F. Walpole. Mr. Deegan was represented by W. A. Coddington; Mr. Lee by W. L. Hetfield and Mr. Walpole by Judge William Newcorn.

In each instance counsel for the applicant urged favorable action, claiming that Mr. Ball was the single objector and that there were no great number of people protesting. However, the court listened to Mr. Ball and laid all applications over to Friday, October 8, when it is expected that a large delegation of residents from Fanwood and Scotch Plains will be present in court.

It was understood that Bernard Walsh, of Fanwood, intended making an application for a liquor license in a new place, but pu to 2 o'clock he had not done so. W. R. Codington, of this city, is his counsel. The possibility of Fanwood and Scotch Plains going "dry" and has stirred tme liquor interests and every effort will be made to prevent such action.

SILVER ANNIVERSARY OF MIANTONOMO TRIBE

Miantonomo Tribe, No. 118, Improved Order Red Men, will celebrate its twenty-first anniversary tomorrow night. Invitations have been sent to all the tribes on the reservation, including Perth Amboy. One of the principal features of the evening will be the working of the adoption degree on several palefaces by members of the team. As Miantonomo has one of the best degree teams in the State, the work will be well worth seeing.

The committee of arrangements comprises Thomas Parsons, chairman; Charles Halliwell, David Allen, John Ludgate and Peter Sheridan, and they have arranged for a repast to be held in the banquet room after the entertainment.

ISSUE $43,000 BONDS FOR SEWER EXTENSION

A resolution providing the issue of $43,000 worth of sewer bonds, which later was incorporated in an ordinance, was offered by Councilman Buxton, chairman of the finance committee, at the October meeting of the Common Council, last night. The bond issue is to cover the city's cost of installing the southside sanitary sewer, exclusive of the amount assessed on property-owners.

The resolution was adopted and the ordinance was passed on first and second readings and ordered advertised. The bonds are to bear four per cent. interest and be payable semi-annually and sold for not less than par. The bonds are to date from November 1, 1909, and are to be in denomination of $1,000 each. Six of them are to be retired on the first of November in each year from 1936 to 1941 and seven on November 1, 1942.

FORGED SMALL CHECKS

USED FRENCH'S SIGNATURE.

Crook Twice Makes Trifling Purchase and Successfully Offers Checks in Payment.

Forging checks and passing them on some unsuspecting storekeeper, the work of one "C. Strong," came to light this morning when two checks each for the sum of ten dollars and signed "Elston M. French, Personal Account," were returned marked forgeries to the people who had cashed them. The writing in the bodies of the checks is identical with that of the signature, which, of course, is not that of Mr. French.

Both checks were passed on Saturday and in each instance the forger made a purchase of some small article offering the check in payment and receiving the change from his victim. Albert Brooks, a bird dealer, of Watchung avenue, was the first one to show up with a check marked "forgery." It was drawn on the First National Bank and purported to come from the office of Mr. French as the rubber stamp on the end bore this legend: "Real Estate, 171 North avenue." Being a neighbor of Mr. French, though not being familiar with his signature, Mr. Brooks did not hesitate to cash the check after the stranger had bought a bird cage valued at one dollar.

Winzel Rayshavy, 220 West Front street, was the next to come out shy in his attempt to collect the check given to him in payment for a whip butt. His check was almost identical with the one given to Mr. Brooks, the difference being that it was taken from what is known as a pocket check book, while the other was one of the bank's regular books. There may be others yet to be heard from and Mr. French has made formal complaint to the police asking them to apprehend the slick young man who is apparently working his private mine at the expense of the too credulous merchants of this city.

The descriptions of the fellow are so meagre that the police are unable to say anything about the size of the man or his manner of dress excepting that he is well appareled and is affable and courteous. Mr. French is absolutely in the dark as to how the forger obtained the rubber stamp which he is using with such splendid financial results and cannot think of anyone who has recently been in his office that might have stole the stamp from his desk, nor are there any rubber stamps missing, so far as could be ascertained this morning. It is believed that the forger is an old hand at the game and that other checks will shortly come to light.

STATE C. E. CONVENTION WILL BEGIN TOMORROW

The final meeting of the general committee of the State Christian Endeavor convention was held at the First Presbyterian church last night. All the committee chairmen were present. Their reports were most favorable and indicate that everything is ready for the convention which will begin at 9 o'clock tomorrow morning.

The response to the invitation of Frank Stewart, chairman of the music committee, was most gratifying and the music will doubtless be a feature of the convention. A number of hymns used at the recent revival meetings at Boston will be sung.

The convention will open at 9 o'clock tomorrow morning at the First Presbyterian church.

Young People's Bible Class.

The Young People's Association of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church will resume its meetings Friday ynight. Classes in Bible study will be begun to last until Christmas. Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie will lead a class for the older members in the study of "Philippians." E. E. Parvin will teach a class for boys. His subject will be "Studies from the Life of Paul." All the young people of the church are urged to attend these classes. Meetings will be held each Friday night at 8 o'clock.

DOWNS MADE MANAGER OF PLAINFIELD THEATRE

Proctor & Sanderson, lessees of the Plainfield theatre, announced yesterday that Emery Newell Downs, who has been associated with Mr. Sanderson at Proctor's theatre here, has been appointed manager of the West Second street playhouse to succeed the late Harry Calvert Egerton, whose death occurred here a week ago. The change is effective at once. When Proctor & Sanderson leased the Plainfield theatre, Mr. Egerton, who had been manager of the Princess theatre, Montreal, Can., was engaged to fill a similar position here. He was not in the best of health and his death occurred about a week ago from neurasthenia.

Mr. Downs is a native of Brooklyn, and prior to four years ago, when he entered the employ of Keith & Proctor at their Twenty-third street house, New York, was engaged in the real estate business. When Mr. Sanderson opened Proctor's theatre on West Front street he brought Mr. Downs here to be his right-hand man in the management of the playhouse. Mrs. Downs, who was then in charge of the music at Proctor's theatre, Elizabeth, was also brought here in the same capacity.

During the year that Mr. Downs has been here he has made many friends among the Plainfield people and it is a recognition of his ability and faithful service that he has been put in charge of the Plainfield theatre. The same policy which has made the Proctor theatres throughout the country famous as centres of amusement will be continued here and it will be the constant aim of Proctor & Sanderson to give the people of Plainfield and vicinity the best possible in the way of amusements.

MRS. J. P. KIRCH SUES FOR ABSOLUTE DIVORCE

An unpleasant sequel to a romantic courtship and marriage is mirrored in an application which has been made in the Court of Chancery by Mrs. Emma Messler Kirch, of this city, for a divorce from John Phillip Kirch, formerly a resident of this city, but now engaged in business in New York. Mrs. Kirch predicates her petition on a charge of desertion. She declares that her husband has not lived with her nor contributed to her support since April 26, 1906.

The couple were married at Norwich, Conn., the home of the bride, on October 25, 1904, Kirch then being engaged in the retail and wholesale tobacco business in Plainfield. The ceremony followed a courtship dating from the summer of 1903 when Kirch was stricken with typhoid fever and Mrs. Kirch, who was then Miss Emma Sprague Messler, engaged to care for him as a trained nurse. The couple were unacquainted until they met in the sickroom as nurse and patient. A fondness for one another developed which later ripened into a love match and proposal of marriage by Kirch after he had recovered his health.

Previous to the alleged date of desertion, Kirch failed in business, following which he went to New York and secured employment. Mrs. Kirch resumed her profession of a trained nurse and is understood to have supported herself by this means since that time. She resides at 219 East Fifth street.

Judge William N. Runyon is counsel for Mrs. Kirch.

MISS ALICE V. SCRIBNER BRIDE OF G. W. FANVER.

UNUSUAL BILL FOR CITY

Common Council Hears Mayor Gave Verbal Order for Meals for Police.

THE CITY MUST PAY $350.00.

Police and Detectives at Taxpayers' Expense During Charter Day Celebration.

The first echo of expense in connection with the Charter Day celebration here July 5, 6 and 7, was heard at the October meeting of the Common Council, last night, when Councilman Herbert Buxton, chairman of the finance committee, presented Thomas Timbo's bill for $350 for furnishing meals to the police and their friends during the three-day affair.

Mr. Buxton explained that Mayor Charles J. Fisk had made arrangements with Mr. Timbo to feed the police and their friends, so that the members of the department would not be obliged to go home to meals and thus be ready for duty promptly and without loss of time. He further explained that the arrangement was merely a verbal one. No definite arrangement was made as to the number of men to be fed or the number of meals to be served.

The finance committee chairman stated further that the matter had been investigated by Chief Kiely, Mayor Fisk and himself and had been discussed at some length. He admitted in response to a question, however, that the bill had not been before the finance committee, and it was referred to that committee on motion of Councilman Clay.

Later it was learned that the number of people fed daily for three days included 25 special policemen, 27 regulars and 10 detectives. Three meals were served each day, making a total of 548, which at seventy cents each would total $384.60, but Timbo presented a bill for $350. In view of the fact that the Common Council appropriated $1,000 for the celebration some of the members believe that that amount should cover the expense.

During an hour's recess the Common Council summoned Thomas Timbo before them and further discussed the bill. It is understood that Mayor Fisk has not yet approved the bill and in view of this the members are not willing to pay it until he does and the finance committee makes its report.

"DEACON" CONWAY LOSES; OTHER CASES IN COURT

The City Court room was filled this morning when Judge William Runyon took his seat and five cases were disposed of in record time. Charles Hardaway, colored, complained that "Deacon" Spencer Conway was withholding some of his household goods illegally. The deacon promised to meet Hardaway at noon and deliver the goods and both went away smiling.

Joseph Darmito, thirteen years old, appeared to press a complaint against his little neighbor, Minnie Paraiso, for striking his younger brother. Upon the advice of Judge Runyon, they agreed to leave each other alone in the future and peace was temporarily restored.

Arthur Gray, an employee of W. E. Van Court, has decamped from Mr. Van Court's home in Oak Tree, where he has been employed for the past two years, leaving Mr. Van Court to pay a balance of thirty dollars on a bicycle purchased from Jack Horner, for which Mr. Van Court was security. It is presumed that young Gray has gone South for the winter.

Joseph Wilson, a stranger in town, who was arrested last night on complaint of Edward Cowles for assault, was released as no one appeared to press the complaint.

The police were notified of a burglary committed last night some time after 10 o'clock at the residence of Frank Lawson, 672 West Seventh street. The burglar gained entrance to Mr. Lawson's house through a third story window, stealing a pair of trousers containing about seven dollars in money and without arousing anybody. There are no clues.

NATIONAL GUARDSMEN TO WEAR DRAB UNIFORM

The members of Co. K will no longer be attired as boys in blue. They will wear the regulation uniform of olive drab, worn by all of the regular troops. The change in the uniforms has been expected for more than a year, but was not made certain until a few days ago when the new outfits were received here, having been shipped by the quartermaster's department of the State.

With the advent of the new uniforms the local companies and all of the Second Regiment, to which they are attached, will be as fully equipped as any body of regulars. Under the Dick Militia bill, which went into effect a year or two ago, the State troops become a part of the regular army. They are subject to the call of the President of the United States and are known as the second army of defense. The equipment is as near like the regular army as possible.

The blue uniforms will be worn hereafter only for dress. The new olive drab which is made for service will be worn on all other occasions. Aside from these two uniforms the troops are equipped with the khaki. The khaki will be worn for fatigue in the summer by the soldiers on the march or when on the rifle range.

locally on Monday night, October 11, at the Plainfield theatre, when the big musical gaiety success is seen. One of the spectacular effects of the production is an electric see-saw said to surpass for sensational effect any prior device achieved through enchantment of stage pictures. This giant see-saw of a score or more planks, some of them forty feet in length, carrying a lot of romping college girls, is covered with a thousand miniature electric bulbs of many colors, and as the boards swing up and down to the music of the song "Life is A See Saw," the effect is said to be a revelation of the possibilities of electricity in modern stage pictures.

FOUGHT ASSAILANT WITH A LONG HATPIN

On complaint of Mira V. Veghte, eighteen years old, Harry Christenson, the village blacksmith, of Post Town, is in the Somerset county jail. Miss Veghte accuses him of attempting an attack upon her near Belle Mead, Thursday night.

She declares that she defended herself with a hatpin with such good effect that she put him to flight. She exhibits a badly bent hatpin about ten inches in length and also an ugly wound on her arm which she says was accidentally self-inflicted with the weapon during her struggle with Christenson.

Miss Veghte is employed in New York city and is a commuter. She arrives at the Belle Mead station at 7 o'clock in the evening, and then makes a journey of a mile and a half to her father's farm which lies between Belle Meade and Post Town near the foot of the Sourland Mountains. Christenson denies the charge and states that he can prove an alibi. County Detective Totten made a thorough examination of Christenson last night in the county jail and failed to find any wound on his body that had been inflicted by a hatpin or any similar weapon.

All contests scheduled for yesterday were played Saturday, the season closing with Sunday's games.

Pittsburg and Detroit are to fight it out for the premier honors of baseball, teams which, while both have won more than one pennant in their own leagues, have never met with success in a post-season series. Detroit accomplished the feat of winning a third successive championship in the American League race last week, when Chicago put the quietus to the hopes of the Athletics, a green team which has made a remarkable fight and more than justified an oft expressed confidence in the ability and acumen of that baseball wizard, Connie Mack. Pittsburg's path has been an easier one to follow, and for many weeks it has been almost a foregone conclusion that the Pirates would add the 1909 pennant to those for 1901, 1902 and 1903. Now the champions must meet Detroit with the memory of defeats last year and the year before that at the hands of the Cubs, Pittsburg in the hope of taking revenge on an American League team for the defeat suffered from the Boston team in 1903.

It is always hard to forecast the result of a series such as the one that will open in Pittsburg on Friday. Surprises are the rule rather than the exception, and the man who will wager much on such a contest must have a great deal of confidence in his own judgment. One can analyze the teams, player for player, and still be little the wiser. This analysis, in this case, leaves the impression that the teams are about even, as far as individuals go, and that the batteries will play a big part. Thus Adstein, of Pittsburg, and Tom Jones, of Detroit, the respective first basemen, are about in a class, with Jones a more experienced man.

Neither is a top notcher, by any means. Miller is a brilliant youngster, regarded by Pittsburgers as the find of the season, and a really good second baseman. Dillehanty, who seems to be playing for Detroit as he was never willing or able to do before, has had more experience, and is just as good a player when he feels like it, having a slight advantage, perhaps, with the bat. Wagner, of course, as the bright particular star of the Pirates, outclasses Bush, at shortstop, in all respects, but Bush is a brilliant player none the less, and a better man than O'Leary, who played against the Cubs last year. George Moriarity is a more experienced man than Byrne, of Pittsburg, and a better third baseman in every way, as well as being a powerful, although none too dependable hitter. So much for the infield. Wagner dominates the situation, perhaps, but Pittsburg has not much advantage, even so, for Detroit's inner line of defence is an entirely serviceable one.

GOLF.

Golfers from far and near will be directing their gaze toward Philadelphia this week, the attraction being the fifteenth annual championship tournament of the United States Golf Association, for women. The scene of action will be the links of the Merion Cricket Club, the same place that claimed the attention of the women five years ago, when the metropolitan district did itself proud by furnishing the champion and the runner-up, Miss Georgianna Bishop and Mrs. E. F. Sanford.

In the present tournament a start was made yesterday with an eighteen-hole medal play testing round, and the best thirty-two players will continue on at match play, one round each day. As the entry list shows, champions and ex-champions have rallied this year in an endeavor to win the coveted title and, incidentally, possession of the Robert Cox trophy. The favorites are expected to score well in the qualifying round, more especially as the Merion course is far from exacting.

It rarely happens that a woman of well known ability fails to qualify, as is frequently the case in the men's amateur event. The reason for this is that the fields are smaller and the difference in standard of play greater, so that a good woman player has to be decidedly off her game in order to finish outside the first thirty-two. The lowest score ever made by a woman in a championship qualifying round in this country was the 85 returned by Miss Harriet S. Curtis at Chevy Chase a year ago. When the women last played at Merion there was a tripple tie for low score between Miss Louise Vanderhoef, Miss H. S. Curtis and Miss Lottie Dod, at 93, which 101 managed to get into the match play.

Unquestionably Miss Dorothy Campbell, of North Berwick, champion of Great Britain; her club mate, Miss Frances Teacher; Mrs. C. T. Stout, of the Richmond County Country Club, a former national and metropolitan title holder; Miss Kate Harley, present national champion; Miss Margaret Curtis and her sister Harriet; Miss Mary B. Adams, champion of the Women's Eastern Golf Association, and Miss Bishop will claim chief attention.

BOULEVARD COMMISSION TO INSPECT COAST DRIVE.

Members of the New Jersey Boulevard Commission propose to make an inspection of the coast drive route from Cape May to Atlantic Highlands some time within a week or so. They will cover the roads in automobiles with Mayor Franklin Stoy, of Atlantic City, as their guest.

The members of the commission are: Mayor Frank Appleby, of Asbury Park; Samuel Hellner, of Belmar; Jefferson Seligman, of Deal; P. Hall Packer, of Seabright; Colonel John J. McCook, of Rumson; W. F. D. Stokes, of Long Branch; Uzal McCarter, of Ramson, and Colonel William Barbour, of Monmouth Beach. State Superviser of Roads Robert A. Meeker, of this city, will be in the party.

BLACKSMITH DIDN'T SCARE AT GUN PLAY.

Fight words and shooting talk spiced two interviews between W. Williams, marshal of Hampton Borough, and Edward C. Greene, the village blacksmith, in Greene's shop at Glen Gardner Friday. Each interview ended with the ejection of the marshal from the blacksmith shop. Williams is something of a character in that section. He is known as the "Cowboy Policeman" and claims to have had thrilling experience in the West. He was made marshal of Hampton a year ago, and ever since has gone about with revolver, billy and handcuffs clanking at his belt.

When he entered Greene's place Friday Greene accused him of being the author of an article in a local newspaper declared to be libelous. Greene declares Williams called him a liar, whereupon Greene put him out. Then, Greene says, Williams returned brandishing his revolver and threatening to blow out Greene's brains. "I had to put him out again," Greene stated.

There have been many complaints of Williams' alleged freedom in displaying his revolver and making threats of shooting. Greene declares he will file formal charges with the Hampton Borough officials.

DECREASE IN FRESHMEN.

Princeton Enrollment Shows Loss of Eleven Men.

The following statistics of the freshman class of Princeton University have been compiled by Professor J. P. Hoskins, secretary of the committee on entrance: The total enrollment of the class includes 152 candidates for the degree of A. B., 158 candidates for the degrees of Litt. B. and B. S. and 40 for the degree of C. E., making the entire number in the class 350.

This enrolment shows an increase of 4 men in the A. B. course, 10 in the B. S. course and a loss from last year of 25 men in the C. E. course. This leaves a net decrease of 11 men from last year. In addition to this number 41 more were eligible for admission, but failed to report.

The men from public high schools this year comprise 23 per cent. of the entire class, and increase of 5 per cent. over last year.

A SUNDAY AT CLOVELLY

Rev. C. L. Goodrich Tells of the Daintiest, Quaintest Village in All England.

WAS NEARLY KNOCKED OUT.

Low Door Lintels a Menace to Tall People—Some Impressions and Lessons Given.

Following is the text of Rev. Charles L. Goodrich's address to his congregation Sunday night. It is the first of a series of talks on Sundays in England. This one is on a "Sunday at Clovelly."

"Whosoever shall give to drink unto one of these little ones a cup of cold water only in the name of a disciple, verily I say unto you, he shall in no wise lose his reward."

Some summer day, if fortune is very kind to you, you will turn a corner by a fountain let into the wall, and look down upon a scene which, however much you may have heard about it, however often heard it described, will still cause you to exclaim with the delight and the unexpectedness of it. For you will be looking down into Clovelly, England's quaintest, daintiest village.

There is no other like it, and it is worth a long journey to find. I said you will be looking down into Clovelly, I might have said, looking down into High street, Clovelly; then I might just as well have said, into the street of Clovelly, for that is its only one. And if I had said that you might, as you stood there, have exclaimed, "this is not a street, this is a staircase." Certainly it is a street unque. Paved and narrow, about seven feet wide, with twists and winds, here dodging under an arch and almost through a house it climbs with successive steps its steep way up from the harbor to your feet, between spick and span cottages of white and yellow stucco, pushing up one above the other up the hill, all dainty and bright with vines and gay flowers. A street on which no carriage can go, but only pannered donkeys clatter up and down. All to right and left and back now you rise sharply and high the wooded walls of the deep, almost precipitous combe, or ravine, in which this village had the temerity to perch itself ten or twelve centuries ago; while far down below is a glimpse of the blue sea with a brown sailed fishing boat slipping past.

A village which one has called a bird's nest town, as it clings like a swallow's nest to a cliffside. But it is more like a decorated birdcage of a town. It is like a toy village. "Jewel dropped in a cleft of the rock, happey hundreds crest builded close by the sea," Alice Brom calls it. And Williamson writes: "The extraordinary village of tiny white houses appeared to have tumbled down hill like a broken string of pearls fallen from a goddess's neck." And also this: "The white village glimmered in the pearly light like a waterfall arrested in its rush down a cleft in a hill." Not having seen Clovelly you may think that a farfetched simile; but it really isn't. If a young cataract could be turned into a village that would be Clovelly.

Clovelly lays hold of you with more than its quainness and beauty. It is a fishing village, the tiny harbor, the only dent in a long stretch of the coast, was the excuse for its location in such impossible place. There is always something about an old fishing village which takes hold of you. I hardly know why. A community whose men make their living not on land but on the water, whose men must go out onto the deep each day leaving anxious women at home, whose men face hardships and danger daily without concern impresses you differently from other towns. For centuries the brown sailed herring boats have put out from the little cove, not always to return. On one tragic, never forgotten day they came flying back before a gale to dash themselves up the little shingly beach, unable to make the harbor mouth, and the cruel waves flung three score dead bodies up at the feet of the women weeping on the shore. One can but feel the hardship and heroism, the shadow of tragedy in the constant peril and uncertainty of the life of such a community.

Moreover the place speaks to you also of those adventurous days of the sixteenth century when men from all the Devon churl posts were sailing away westward into the far seas, into the Spanish Main, and over untraversed ways to undiscovered lands.

Three men of Clovelly were with Drake when first of all Englishmen rounded the Horn and circled the globe.

The place tingles, too, with associations of England's most thrilling and momentous event, the conquest of the Spanish Armada. One can hardly go up and down that narrow street and stand on the pier, among the boats and men of the sea, without thinking of Salavation Yeo, and Will Cary and other men of Clovelly who named aright or not by Kingsley did have their part with the brave in the memorable sea fight.

Off the coast, in full sight in clear weather, is the Isle of Lundy, with the strange Shutter Rock at its southern end on which one of the Spanish ships was wrecked, and which Kingsley in his Westward Ho makes the scene of one of his strongest chapters. Off to the right is a narrow combe where some of the shipwrecked Spaniards are said to have come ashore and remained, and their descendants still live there.

There, as all through along the Devonshire coast, I could but keep saying to myself, O these men of Devon, who lived on the blue edge of the world and looked off and dared to venture forth to find another. Who lived on the edge of the old world and believed in the new, and went forth and fought for it and won it. And who, with their courage, their seamanship their staunch ships, were in larger proportion than from any other parts of England the wall of defense for England and protestantism in the days when Spain and Romanism made their fearful onslaught. How much England and America and all the world owes to them. Something of the romance and significance of all this haunts you there and adds to the charm of the place.

It has a further interest also. It is associated with one memorable and loved name, Charles Kingsley. Indeed the historical associations, the spirit of those earl ydays of adventurous voyages, and the conquest of the Spanish Main and the victory over the Armada that are with you there, are yours because of his Westward Ho, rather than of any school histories you have read. It is the magic of his pen, the imparting of his spirit of appreciation of that heroisc age, which has made it so real to you.

This was his home through six years, the most impressible years of his boyhood. He was always coming back to it when he could. This was a village of his love. When he brought his wife to visit the place he said to her: "Now that you have seen Clovelly, you know what my inspiration was before I met you." It was out of his experiences at Clovelly, from his feeling for the life and the constant over-hanging of tragedy there, that he wrote his Three Fishers.

"Three Fishers went sailing out into the sea
Out into the sea as the sun went down.
Each thought of the woman who loved him best
An the children stood watching them out of town.
For men must work and women must weep
And there's little to earn and many to keep Though the harbor bar be moaning."

He loved the place and he loved the people. And he made them love him. Miss Alice Brown in her delightful book, "By Oak and Thorn," tells of asking a resident: "Did you know Mr. Kingsley?" "Why all say him often," was the reply. "As soon as he came on his visits, he was in and out of every house, as welcome as a bit of sunlight on a wet day, and asking how was this one and how was that, and had the lads got home from the sea? Ah, we loved Mr. Kingsley!"

We chanced to ask the same question of the oldest inhabitant, 96 years of age. He did not make as beautiful an answer, but one that manifested the same sort of feeling for Mr. Kingsley. He recalled as a matter of pride and to remember for the rest of life, that he had carried Mr. Kingsley's satchel to the boat when he went away for the last time. As Charles Kingsley had been for many years an inspiration and strength to me, personally, as he did for me in my earlier years what few other have done, it was a pleasure to be in the little town which he loved and which loves him to this day.

As Clovelly has such a combination of charms, so many claims to one's interest, I did not think the more of one writer who said he would as soon live in a house that was all staircases as live in Clovelly; nor could I sympathize with a clerical friend who said: "I have rarely been so glad to get out of any place as out of Clovelly; there was nothing to do there but go up and down that one step street." Surely there is no accounting for tastes; for we left it with regret, feeling sure that we should find nothing more charming in all our wandering. And so I say again, if fortune is very kind to you, you will turn that corner some happy day, and look down into the daintiest and quaintest bit of Devonshire. And if fortune is very, very kind to you, you will happen into the lodgings that we found, and be most comfortably and courteously cared for by descendants of the shipwrecked Spaniards from the Armada, in one of the best of the quaint old houses, and be served by the prettiest of Clovelly maids with the softest of Devon voices whose sweet toned "thank you," whenever you let her hand you any delicious dish, will be a constant pleasure. Only you must go soon, for a certain young men seemed to appreciate her as highly as we did.

One warning, I must give you. If you happen to stand six feet in your shoes, you must learn to be humble, for the lintels of all the doors of that house will strike such a person right in the middle of his forehead. I could not always bear that in mind, and therefore suffered. Indeed there came near to being no Sunday in Clovelly for me to describe; for setting out for church, hurrying back to our living room for some forgotten article, the door lintel smote me with a blow which nearly annihilated me. Once again did pride go before a fall, and a haughty (or hasty) spirit almost before destruction. It is a wonder that I got out of Clovelly alive for one could not always remember. But that Sunday morning blow has at least served to bring me to my subject, which perhaps some of you have thought I was not to reach at all. A Sunday in Clovelly. The blow did not quite annihilate me, so with dented brow and chastened spirit I again set forth with my fellow travellers, who had been considerate enough not to laugh at me—much—to climb the hill, turn the corner by the fountain, and on by walls bright with fuschias and roses, to the level country above and to the parish church at Clovelly Court, which all lovers of Westward Ho will remember was Will Cary's home, the gentleman's estate to which all the region belonged, a tablet to whose memory hangs on the wall of the church.

To reach the church we went in past the porter's lodge into the grounds of the Court; for the church was a part of the estate. It was our first experience attending service in and old English country church attached to a gentleman's estate and had its own interest. Around the church here, as everywhere, was an ancient cemetery, with moss grown stones dating back to times when America was not known or was but a dream of some daring navigator. The church door was approached through an avenue, one may almost call it a tunnel, of yew trees. At the door was a notice for the benefit of strangers telling us that the font within was Saxon-made of the year 1000, that the pillars were of Lundy granite of the year 1300. To one whose land had not been discovered for so many, many years later, this could but give the feeling that here was a structure hoary with age. Here had men been bowing in prayer through all the years of his own land's discovery and peopling and all its history; here had gathered for prayer some of the very men who had helped to find and to make America, and here, were men and women still gathering to pray. So one might well enter with the sense of the past upon him with a feeling of the continuity of religion, of the oneness of past and present, the debt of the day to the yesterdays. With some swelling of the heart at the feeling of being part of the long procession of devotioners in the ages.

Going within did not tend to lessen these feelings, for all about on the walls were tablets and brasses, memorials of men of former generations, dating far back in the centuries. Here in our first English country church we were impressed at once—and the impression deepened as we went on in our tour—with the way the English churches keep the men of the past in mind. The churches all over England in country as well as in city, the small as well as the great are temples of honor. The names of the honored dead are upon their walls.

Stepping inside the church one felt as if he were in a picture, to see that the square stone tower came down open into the main room and there were six men pulling away at the bells. It was right off an English Christmas card! The English manner of ringing church bells, which I had not observed before, ringing not of chimes, but five or six bells of harmonious tones rung at once, is very pleasing.

Courteously received and provided with prayer and hymnbooks we sat down the better prepared for worship by the impressions already made upon us. We had enjoyed so much the soft voices of the Devonshire people in their conversation, that we looked forward to the singing of these people, and we were not disappointed. We were disappointed, though, in the sermon; very agreeably so however. One has often heard the statement that the sermons in the state churches of England are of a very indifferent chraacter. But this was of a very high order. It was short of course, shorter than this talk seems likely to be; scarcely more than ten minutes. But you would go far to hear a better, ten-minute sermon. Simple enough for the humblest present, but stimulating. Not new altogether in theme or thought, but freshly and aptly presented. If I could give you in any real degree the impression and truths of that brief sermon it would justify my theme.

If you will take away with you only two or three fragments from it you will be repaid for coming here. The theme was "Cups of Cold Water." The text was the words of Jesus: "Whosoever shall give drink unto one of these little ones a cup of cold water to only in the name of a disciple, verily I say unto you, he shall in no wise lose his reward."

In the hot country in which Jesus spent his life the wayfarer must often have asked the plowman at work in the field for a drink from the goat skin bag which he had brought with him into the field. Jesus himself had doubtless many times presented just such request. This common act Jesus took and made something uncommon out of it. Took it and used it for an undying lesson. It was Jesus' way to take small things and build great upon them. To link the simple ordinary things of everyday with something high and great! to take a simple act such as any person can perform, and show how it may be connected with a motive high enough for a divine being to cherish. He took this common act, done every day by the working people, and connected it with the prophets whom the devout Jews reverenced with a great recerence, declaring it may have the same kind of a reward as the doings of the holy prophets of old.

So he set in picturesque unforgetable way the encouraging truth that it is not the magnitude of the deed that counts so much as the motive, not the renown or station of the person that counts so much as the aim that is beneath ones doings. That is in God's eyes. For in this saying Jesus has pictured the truth that God does not look at deeds or persons as most men do. That where others weigh the deed he weighs the motive, where others see the outward he discerns the heart and rewards accordingly. So may everyone be stimulated to do joyfully the deeds he can compass, as his opportunity come, assured that with God it is the willingness and the motive of love that count most.

I wonder if you have ever thought of one meaning of the term "little ones" in the text which he gave? The little ones of Jesus' thought are not only children, though whenever a good deed is done a child angels are hovering near. But in almost any company, where two or three are gathered together, one of them is likely to be less clever, or less interesting, a person whom others are not as likely to defer to, or to pay as much attention or to treat as heartily as the others. So a little one is there and there is opportunity to give a cup of cold water. To show that one attention, draw that one out, make that one glad with genuine friendliness.

Does not that interpretation open to one's thought a field of opportunity for kindness which almost anyone can improve and of which perhaps we have not thought enough. In illustration of this he referred to a famous American general, I am ashamed that I do not know to whom he referred, who besides being a successful soldier was a gentleman, every inch of him, and on whose tomb stone was placed this singular inscription: "He danced with those with whom others would not dance."

We do not all dance, and we are not all such that anyone would feel it any favor to dance with us, perhaps, but I brought from out that old church that morning, the desire to be of more service to those whom others did not care very much for; the desire to make in any company the least happy one more happy. That desire I could wish you also might catch as an echo of that Sunday.

MAKING GOODNESS PAY.

Taxation Chief Obstacle to Civic Improvement.

Owen R. Lovejoy writes at length about the plans for remodeling Boston in the Survey for September. He said that the chief obstacle to such city improvements as street opening and widening, park development, location and construction of public buildings, is the special burden they lay on the already overtaxed citizenship. Thus nearly all American cities find their desire to indulge in civic improvements curbed by the fact that all previous achievements have saddled a new and heavier debt on the city, or have so added to the tax burden as to handicap business or make rents prohibitive.

Apparently the significance of the fact that a few citizens always grow independently rich with every new street developing, or park opening, or public building, did not dawn on our proverbially astute countrymen until recently. We now begin to see what most Europeans have known for years, that every such improvement, if wisely done, is a local asset which invariably enchances neighboring property out of all proportion to the sacrifice of the property owners. The burden is spread on the whole city while the unearned increment centres on the fortunate few.

A Hint to Travel.

Weary Walker—What! Don't look like a sailor? Why, I've been following the sea for thirty years.

Farmer Haycrop—Well, you keep following it for thirty years more, and perhaps you'll catch up with it. —Life.

PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

The young people of the Baptist church will hold a rally social in the church Friday night. Every one is invited, both young and old. An excellent program has been arranged and refreshments will be served. The weekly prayer-meeting will be held tomorrow night in the church parlors, so as not to conflict with the rally.

Oliver Lighthouser and family, of the borough, have removed to their new home in Washington Valley. Mr. Lighthouser recently purchased the Evans property and has converted the old place into one of the prettiest homes in the valley.

Harry Goodwin, who has been located at Bridgeton, N. J., on engineering work for the C. R. R. of N. J., spent Sunday with his mother, Mrs. Anna Goodwin, of Stanbury avenue.

Charles Elliott, who is employed by the U. S. Government as civil engineer, spent Sunday with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Elliott, of Park avenue.

Miss Ethel Schenck, who has been visiting relatives in New York during the Hudson-Fulton celebration, has returned home.

Mr. and Mrs. Gere Paff have removed from the Seeley cottage on Stout avenue to Westfield.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

An open meeting of the Men's Brotherhood will be held in the Methodish church on Monday evening, October 11. The evening will be marked by an entertaining musical and literary program and a lecture by William A. Rinker, an engineer of note, on "The Twentieth Century Skyscraper.'

Mrs. W. P. Deering and children, of Gloucester, Mass., are spending a few days with Mr. Deering, at the Mountain View cottage.

William Sandford, the Republican candidate for Mayor, has been spending a few days in Freehold.

HIGH CLASS REPERTOIRE AT THE LOCAL THEATRE

"The Powers that Be," presented at the Plainfield theatre last night by the Charles K. Champlin Company, attracted a large and appreciative audience. It was the general opinion that the performance was one of the best ever given here by a reportoire company. Every member of the cast was particularly good and the audience was more than pleased with the play.

Charles K. Champlin.

The Champlin company is composed of exceptionally clever actors and actresses. Each one seems fitted to his or her part. Judging by last night's attendance capacity audiences will be the rule before the week is over. There are eight vaudeville acts and two specialities are given after every act of the play, making it a continuous performance. A different play will be given every afternoon and evening. Tonight the play will be "The Royal Mounted." This is the play in which Cyril Scott made his big hit.

Out of Fashion.

"Is my hat on straight?"

"Yes—hurry, or we'll be late."

"Are you sure it's perfectly straight?"

"Indeed it is—you couldn't get it straighter. Are you ready?"

"No. I'll have to go back and change this hat. You know it isn't stylish to have this kind on straight. —Cleveland Leader.

The Date Not Set.

"When are you going to your summer cottage?"

"Just as soon as it is warm enough for company to come to visit us and for father to sleep on the floor."—Detroit Free Press.

STREET LIFE IN PARIS.

Street Fakirs Plentiful and Have Freedom.

Paris, in warm weather, is an out-of-doors city, the Parisians having no greater delight than gayly traversing the many boulevards, seating himself or herself at the tables that dot the pavements (sidewalks in America) in front of the many eating places, there to satisfy hunger and imbibe cool beverages. The street and vender in Paris are given the freedom of the boulevards in a way that would scandalize an American police department, and hold such a place in the hearts of the people that were they not there, the streets would take on a less interesting aspect. A police officer never once dreams of disturbing them in their sales, even though pedestrians are often obliged to step out on the street to pass.—Popular Mechanics.

Adjustable.

Aunt Anne, an old family darky, was sitting with knees crossed in the kitchen when the young daughter of the house entered and, impressed with hugeness of the old woman's feet asked what size shoes she wore.

"Well, honey," replied Aunt Anne "I kin wear eights; I generally wear nines; but dese yer I'se got on am twelves, an' de good Lawd knows dey hu'ts me!"—Everybody's Magazine.

PIANO CONTEST FAKES EXPOSED!

There are several Piano houses which have no prices for their goods except grossly inflated ones arranged expressly for fake discounts in connection with schemes of various kinds. These houses seem to find it impossible to dispose of their pianos in a legitimate, straightforward way, but instead resort to one scheme after another—catch-penny devices, so crude as to be positively insulting to the intelligence of the public. These schemes usually take the form of guessing contests, drawing puzzles and various feats of little skill. In all of them the object is identical to mislead the prospective buyer into the belief that he is getting something for nothing, while at the same time prices are arranged sufficiently high to off-set the allowance to which his prize certificate entitles him.

EVERYONE WHO MAKES A GUESS GETS A PRIZE!

If you have ever answered one of these ads you received a discount certificate. EVERYBODY DOES. It matters not whether the answer is good, bad or indifferent, from adult or child it draws a prize in the shape of a certificate or due bill (generally from $65.00 to $100.00) to apply on the purchase of a new Piano. Of course the price of the Piano is fixed accordingly and the purchaser pays a high price even after the amount of certificate is deducted, usually a much higher price than an instrument of similar quality could be secured for in any legitimate music store.

To test the value of one of these certificates present it in payment for something other than a new piano—say a low priced used piano, music cabinet or a bench, and see how quickly the dealer will turn you down. He will not even give you 50 cents worth of music for it. Try the experiment!

AT $185.00 WE WILL SELL A BETTER PIANO THAN THE SCHEME HOUSES ASK $325.00 TO $400.00 FOR! Such well known and high grade makes as Haines Bros., Brewster, the Genuine Mathushek and others too numerous to mention.

SUSPICIONS FAIL TO HOLD ACCUSED WOMAN

There was an unusual scene in the Somerset Court at Somerville, Friday afternoon, when Mrs. Kitty Kean with an infant in her arms and a three-year-old tot tugging at her skirts, was brought from the county jail and placed on trial before Judge Lewis H. Schenck on a charge of stealing $22.75 from the residence of Dr. James J. E. Maher, of South Bound Brook. She was speedily discharged. Her accused was Miss Emma L. Nichols, an attractive young woman, who testified that she was Dr. Maher's housekeeper.

Mrs. Kean and her husband, James Kean, were servants in Dr. Maher's household until last Tuesday, when the woman was charged with theft by her employers, and committed to the county jail to await the action of the grand jury by Justice of the Peace Ralph Read, of Bound Brook. The Somerset Grand Jury had been discharged a short time before Mrs. Kean's arrest, and, as she had no friends to obtain her release on bail, she would have remained in the county jail with her children until the December term of court, under the squire's commitment, had not the attention of the court been called to the lack of evidence in the case.

After a conference between Judge Schenck and Prosecutor Reger, the woman was ordered to be brought from the jail and placed on trial without a jury. Former Prosecutor James L. Griggs was assigned by the court to defend the prisoner, and Assistant Prosecutor E. P. Johnson appeared for the State.

Dr. Maher and Miss Nichols were in court to testify against the accused. When called to the witness stand, Miss Nichols told of the disappearance of $22.75 from a linen closet in the Maher house. She stated that she managed Dr. Maher's farm, and had received money from the sale of milk, which she placed in a box in the closet on Monday morning. Later in the day she found the box on the closet floor and the money gone. Mrs. Kean, she said, came under her suspicion, and she made a search of the servant's bedroom, and found $4 in an envelope under the bed.

This was the extent of the evidence against the accused, who had spent three days in prison with her babies.

Mrs. Kean, on the witness stand, emphatically denied that she had taken the money from the linen drawer. She also denied all knowledge of the $4 which Miss Nichols testified that she had found under the bed.

Dr. Maher testified that he had found Mrs. Kean in the house alone when he returned from the apple orchard on the day of the alleged theft.

Mr. Griggs, in summing up for the defense, said that, from his knowledge of the case, he believed Miss Nichols had placed the $4 under Mrs. Kean's bed, and trumped up a charge against her, in order to drive her from Dr. Maher's home.

After hearing all the evidence in the case, Judge Schenck promptly discharged the prisoner, with the remark that all the evidence that the State had offered against the woman was the suspicions of her accusers.

SOME STATE NEWS BRIEFS

Mrs. William Lovejoy, of Clayton, lost her balance and fell downstairs, breaking an arm and cutting a bad gash in her face.

Rev. James E. Lake, who was defeated for the Republican nomination for Mayor of National Park, will probably be an independent candidate.

The grand jury has recommended that efficient fire-fighting apparatus be installed at the Cumberland County Asylum, which has more than 200 inmates.

Kicked by a mule, William Henderson, thirty-two years old, of Centre Square, sustained a fracture of the right leg and was cared for at Cooper Hospital, Camden.

John Pepper, of Broadway and Division streets, Gloucester, who served both in the army and navy through nearly all of the Civil War, has just obtained a pension, the back pay of which amounts to $1,800.

With favorable weather thousands of people will journey to Salem today to participate in "Carnival Day" exercises which will commemorate the 234th anniversary of the landing of John Fenwick, on October 5, 1675.

The old schoolhouse which has blocked the streets of Clayton for four weeks reached its destination on Central avenue Saturday night, and is considered by many as another eyesore on the main street of the pretty village.

John Floyd, formerly of Norristown, Pa., is in the county jail at Trenton, charged with making a murderous assault upon his wife, which it is said would have been successful had it not been for the interference of a neighbor.

Mrs. Carrie Chintz, of Hazleton, was treated at Mercer Hospital, Trenton, Sunday for an injured leg, caused two weeks ago last Thursday when she was bitten by a dog. The calf of the leg was badly torn, but had not been treated by a physician.

A class of 135 candidates received their first holy communion in St. Mary's church, Paterson, Sunday morning, while at 4 o'clock in the afternoon the same candidates were received in confirmation by Rt. Rev. Bishop of Newark John J. O'Connor.

There was much joy in the Eastside church, Paterson, Sunday, when at the morning service the pastor, Rev. Dr. J. H. Owens, announced that the effort they had been quietly making since last May had been entirely successful and the $12,000 necessary to clear the church property of debt had been subscribed.

The Cape May freight on the West Jersey and Seashore Railroad broke in two on a down grade a few blocks south of the main street at Vineland at 3 o'clock Sunday morning, and when the ends came together again three cars were derailed and one demolished. Two beef cattle were killed outright and several hurt. The freight hands escaped by jumping.

Weakened by lack of nourishment and unable to obtain work, Samuel Upp, who said he deserted from the gunboat Dolphin, at New Orleans, surrendered at the Central police station, Trenton, Saturday night. The man was almost in a state of collapse. He told the police that he deserted from the navy last June, after a fight with a marine following a dispute over a baseball game.

Searching parties Sunday covered the ground pretty thoroughly between Clayton and Franklinville, in response to a telephone message Saturday night that the body of Frank Hardlove, of Clayton, would be found in Gloucester. A letter was also found in Gloucester City, signed by Hardlove, stating that he would commit suicide at the place named Sunday afternoon; but no signs of the body could be found.

Several of the former rectors were present at the fiftieth anniversary of the Protestant Episcopal church of Our Saviour, Broadway and Viola streets, Camden, Sunday. Bishop Scarborough was also present, and the attendance was large at all the services. A memorial service for the departed was held at 9 o'clock this morning, and this evening there will be a reception in the parishhouse.

The members of the First Aid to the Injured Club of the Y. M. C. A. at Paterson, who passed the examinations of the National First Aid Association of America, were awarded their diplomas Saturday night. Those who were successful are Harry Shelby, 74 Auburn street; Thomas Holden, Union avenue; James S. G Robinson, 50 Jefferson street; Louis Urdang, 8 Twelfth avenue, and Joseph Yanowski, Madison avenue.

On their way home from a ball at Liberty Park, Camden, early Sunday morning, a half dozen men became involved in a quarrel which ended in a fight, and David Frail, of 806 South Eighth street, was sent to Cooper Hospital with a badly battered head. Eugene Carter, of 1128 South Tenth street, was also beaten about the head and body, and was taken to the hospital for repairs. They are not seriously injured. Frank Kriger, twenty-four years old, and Harry McCaffrey, twenty-five years old, were arrested by Policeman Appleby and Kaplen and will be charged with assault and battery.

Attracted to the old Camden cemetery along Mt. Ephraim avenue, by groans early Sunday morning, Policeman Kiker jumped a fence and found Lee Carter, thirty-one years old, rolling across the grass between the tombstones as though in agony. Lifted to his feet, Carter said he had been robbed of $75, but he could not explain how he reached the graveyard. He said he had been out with strangers, and was allowed to go home, promising to later give a description of suspects to the city detectives. A half hour later Carter was found further down the avenue by the same policeman, and as he appeared dazed he was sent to the city hall so that he will be able to explain matters in the police court.

ROSELLE PARK PEOPLE TO DEDICATE A SCHOOL.

On Friday evening the new $68,000 High School building in that place will be formally dedicated, and on Saturday afternoon Sherman Council, No. 61, Jr. O. U. A. The Bible will be presented by the Rev. Ellis E. Robinson, of Passaic. The flag will be presented by Everett Gray, of Jersey City, State vice-councillor of the Jr. O. U. A. M. Always Has Been.

"It's hard to see a future President in a village yap with cowhide boots and high-water pants."

MOST FAMOUS COFFEE IN THE WORLD

First Perfected for the Use of a New York Hotel.

Hotel men agree there is nothing on a hotel table of which guests are so invariably critical as the coffee. Hence famous hotels spend an amount of time, effort and expense in perfecting a blend for this special use that is amazing. Probably no hotel in the world ever carried the experimenting so far as the Hotel Astor, which tried every possible combination of every good coffee before it was satisfied it had the one ideal blend.

As a result the coffee soon had an international fame and the demand for its sale to the general public was so insistent that it was finally put up under the trade-mark name of the Hotel Astor Coffee, which is guaranteed to be the same in every particular as that served at the hotel. Connoisseurs are agreed it is the most remarkable in flavor of any coffee ever produced.

Hotel Astor Coffee is sold in one and three pound tins—never in bulk. Every can contains the famous Hotel Astor recipe for making coffee.

Buy a tin the next time you are buying coffee and you'll discover that you never knew before how delicious coffee really could be. Your grocer doubtless sells it, but if he does not, write the importers, B. Fischer & Co., 190 Franklin street, New York City, giving your dealer's name and address, and they will tell you a grocer that does sell it.

CHAPTER V.

HONEST MAN AND KNAVE.

"I WISH to talk to you, Edward," began Mr. Durant. His manner was serious, and Pinckney, who had known him so long, realized that he was seriously put out about something. At such times there was only one way to handle the steel magnate—that way was absolute obedience and prompt replies to his questions. Pinckney became all attention at once.

"Yes, sir. What is it?" he asked.

Durant consulted the paper in his hand.

"The royalty on this Rhinestrom gun," he asked—"am I correctly informed about it?"

"How much did you think it was?" asked the manager.

"According to the papers, we pay a royalty of $6,000 for every gun six inches or under and $1,000 an inch extra for every one over six. So for these twelve inch guns we are to forge we must pay $12,000 each."

"That's correct, sir," said Pinckney.

"It's too much," declared the steel magnate sharply.

His manager ventured a protesting gesture.

"I wrote you," he said, "and cabled you before I signed the contract. It was too risky waiting until your return."

"I don't see why," exclaimed Durant impatiently. "I think you've made a mistake this time, Edward—a grave mistake. That royalty I consider outrageous."

The manager had to make a fight.

"I'm very sorry, sir," he said apologetically, "but you know I have your interest at heart, and it seemed to me the only thing that could be done. You have trusted my judgment. I had to exercise it. The government liked this gun, and it meant an order that will keep us busy for a year. If we controlled the patents they were obliged to give us the contracts. There was no competition, you see, and then our price to the government leaves us a very fair profit even after this big royalty is paid."

Durant shook his head.

"Penny wise, pound foolish, I think it, Edward. To make a profit we have to charge the government a tremendous price that doesn't help our future business. It will give us a black eye when we want work next time."

"Well, I'm sorry, sir," said Pinckney apologetically. "I was working only for the best. I wanted to insure our contract with the government. As it is, you see, we do not begin work for two months, and there'll be a lot of wire pulling and hauling first."

Durant nodded.

"Yes, if they find a gun they like better they can countermand our order."

Pinckney hesitated. He felt he had to go cautiously, but it would not do to let Mr. Durant guess his hand.

"Yes," he said slowly, "this fellow Sommers is here to have a gun forged that he's invented. He's got some pull at Washington, I'm certain of that."

"Don't see what difference that makes," replied the steel man.

"Oh," protested the manager, "suppose after they test the Sommers gun they give it preference over the Rhinestrom gun and countermand our order."

Durant nodded, pleased.

"I wish they would," he said. "We could still get the business and not gouge the government. Sommers is an officer in the navy and can claim no royalty. It would reduce the cost of every twelve inch gun $12,000."

Pinckney bowed in agreement, then suggested:

"You are partly right, Mr. Durant, but if they took his gun there would be no certainty about our getting the order. We would have to compete in the open, and some one might underbid us."

"We can't help that," replied his chief. "Is Sommers' gun better than ours?"

Pinckney looked up indignantly.

"Of course not," he exclaimed, "but Sommers has influence, and I do not trust him. I think he'd be capable of any dirty trick to have our gun turned down."

Durant laid his hand on the young manager's arm in kindly fashion.

"Now, now, Edward," he said meaningly. "I like your enthusiasm; it's good for the business, but you must not let your enthusiasm lead you to foolish hatred. This young Sommers seems to me to be a very decent sort of young fellow. I never saw him before tonight, but I was quite favorably impressed. Frances also seems to like him very much."

"So you've noticed that, too, have you?" sneered the manager.

Frances' father looked up sharply.

"Yes; have you?" he asked.

Again Pinckney hesitated. It was time for careful work now. He could not afford to make an open rupture or say anything about a direct explanation, so he began using all his diplomacy, suggesting by look and gesture rather than by open accusation what he meant.

"Yes, I have noticed it, Mr. Durant," he said. "I hoped I was mistaken. I would hate to see anything like that, because you know my interest in everything that concerns you, and particularly in Frances." He hesitated for a moment, wondering just how to go on.

"Yes, I understand your interest," said Durant kindly. "I understand that."

"Thank you, sir," exclaimed Pinckney gratefully. "You know, then, how hard it is for me to see her associated with such a fellow as Sommers and what a blow it would be if he were to make her fond of him."

Durant looked at the younger man keenly.

"Do you mean there's anything against this young fellow," he asked—"any reason why Frances should avoid him?"

"I—I'd rather not say, Mr. Durant," hesitated Pinckney.

Durant was a straightforward old fighter who liked to have people come right out.

"If you can't say right out, why do you intimate, Edward?" he demanded sternly. "I don't like people who beat about the bush. If you have anything on this young fellow, come right out and say so. Be prepared to prove it and don't beat about the bush and suggest all sorts of things against him merely because he's paying attention to Frances."

Pinckney rose and drew himself up to his full height.

"I'm very sorry, Mr. Durant, that you should think me capable of such a thing," he said with dignity. "I thought my interest was too well proved for you to think that I would do anything underhanded. I say nothing against this fellow Sommers now, because I'm not prepared to prove it; but, remember this, Mr. Durant, he's no good, and sooner or later you'll find it out. I only hope it won't be too late."

Durant looked at his young manager keenly. He had no reason to suspect that Pinckney would lie or do anything maliciously underhanded merely to put a rival out of the way. He had known Edward from a boy and found him always apparently devoted to the Durant interests. All this made him judge kindly when from another man he would not have tolerated mere backbiting.

"All right, Edward," he said kindly. "You've proved yourself devoted to me. I think this is just a little overenthusiasm in the Durant interests. As a general rule, I've found these naval chaps straightforward, decent young fellows, and I'd hate to believe otherwise. However, we'll watch him and see. Come to me if you get anything on him, but you know I will not stand for mere rumors and suspicions."

He stopped abruptly, for the door opened and the man of whom they were speaking, with Frances, came in. The quick eye of the girl caught her father's angry mood.

"What's the matter, dad?" she asked.

The old man turned to her, with a smile.

"Nothing at all, little one, except Edward's been saying some things that interest me greatly, and to show him what I think I'm going to ask him to come to the study and continue the conversation. I'll leave you to entertain Lieutenant Sommers if you'll excuse me."

"Mr. Sommers was just going," said Frances.

"Yes," broke in Sommers, "that bad time when I must say good night has arrived."

"How much longer will you be in Pittsburg, Mr. Sommers?" asked Durant.

"Only until my gun is forged," replied the lieutenant.

Pinckney looked up in surprise.

"Oh, then you intend to remain to see the forging of the gun yourself?"

Sommers smiled at him.

"Is that surprising? I'm somewhat interested, you know."

"We're glad to have you, of course, Mr. Sommers," spoke up Durant. "Everything is at your service. Good night, sir."

The steel man shook hands and, turning, started to his study. Pinckney remained a moment behind.

"Of course," he began rather cautiously, "we are glad to have you, as Mr. Durant says, Mr. Sommers, but with your gun so well under way I don't see how you can possibly be of any help to us."

Just a slight hardening of his tone made Pinckney's speech mean only too plainly, "There's no use in your staying, because we don't want you." But the naval man overlooked entirely the implication. Instead of taking offense he smiled courteously.

"I had no idea of being of any help, Mr. Pinckney. I only want to be on hand when the tempering is done."

"You mean at the work in the furnace room?" gasped the manager.

Sommers smiled.

"That's it exactly."

Pinckney was beginning to lose his temper.

"May I ask why?" he said sharply.

"Only to be sure it is properly done," he explained.

Frances was standing by, watching the men and in her mind comparing them. She saw Pinckney, big, aggressive, strong, an iron man, used to overriding all who opposed him, now matched and held by this quiet, smiling man, whose coolness and evident pliant strength reminded her more than anything else of the finest tempered steel, tough, elastic, unbreakable, that outlasts iron every time. Now Pinckney was losing more of his temper.

"Have you any idea we are not competent enough to handle this job?" he demanded.

Sommers still smiled.

"Oh, no, of course not, only I prefer to see for myself, that's all. Ah!" He turned to see Mrs. Durant, who had entered. "Mrs. Durant, I fear I must say good night, much as I hate to. Thank you for a splendid evening."

Mrs. Durant shook hands cordially.

"Good night, Mr. Sommers. I hope you'll come up often while you're in town."

Sommers bowed.

"Thank you. You may be sure I'll come as often as I dare," he said. Then he turned and held out his hand to Frances.

"Good night, Miss Durant."

The girl shook her head.

"I'm going to see you out," she said.

He smiled gratefully.

"Thanks."

Next he turned to Pinckney.

"Good night, Mr. Pinckney. What time will that gun be in?"

Pinckney hesitated a moment.

"Two o'clock sharp. Good night."

Sommers bowed, turned and followed Frances out into the hall, leaving the girl's mother and Pinckney standing in the doorway staring at each other.

CHAPTER VI.

"I LOVE YOU."

THE door closed, and Pinckney turned to Mrs. Durant.

"Did you see that?" he exclaimed. "She's going to the door with him—going right out there with him. I never saw anything like it in my life."

Frances' mother smiled indulgently.

"Well, what if she is?" she said. "For goodness' sake, Edward, let the child be polite."

Pinckney was losing all vestige of caution and self control.

"She's in love with him. I tell you, she's in love with him."

Mrs. Durant smiled.

"Frances in love with Mr. Sommers! Why, Edward, you're ridiculous."

The man was walking up and down the floor excitedly. Now he stopped in front of her.

"Ridiculous nothing!" he exclaimed. "You won't say it's ridiculous when this penniless adventurer carries her off right under your eyes. I tell you, it isn't safe. He's not the kind of man to be with Frances. I should have protested before, I'm sorry I didn't. I tell you, Mrs. Durant, it makes my blood boil to see it. I can't stand it. I won't stand it."

"Edward!" Mrs. Durant was not smiling now. Her face was stern, grim, almost like her husband's. "Do you realize what you're saying?" she demanded sternly. "It isn't for you to criticise what Frances does one way or another. I will attend to that. Her father and I have charge of her and no one else. For you to make any such speech is presumptuous."

Pinckney bowed, rebuked.

"I'm sorry," he said. "I suppose I was presumptuous, but"—his voice broke with real feeling, a feeling of fear and disappointed ambition that Mrs. Durant mistook for love—"it is hard after the dreams I've had and the plans we've made. I tell you, it's a fearful thing to stand by and see you and Mr. Durant calmly helping this sailor to win her."

Mrs. Durant smiled appealingly.

"Now, now, Edward," she said. "You take it too seriously. You know that George and I have no idea of helping him to win her. If any one is helping him you are the one."

Pinckney looked at her amazed.

"I?" he exclaimed.

Frances' mother nodded.

"Exactly," she said. "You are helping him by your very apparent jealousy. There is nothing that will spur a girl to be particularly nice to one man so much as a knowledge that some one she cares for is seeing and writhing."

Pinckney opened his eyes. Like many another schemer, he had devoted all his time to circumventing men, and he really knew comparatively little about women.

"But she hasn't seen that I notice it," he protested. "She's been too busy with him to notice anything."

The mother laughed out loud at his bitter tone.

"Nonsense, Edward. Mr. Sommers is a nice young man, and I don't blame her for enjoying his visits. Goodness knows, nice young men are not so plentiful in Pittsburg."

Pinckney looked at her reproachfully.

"I thought you at least were on my side," he complained. "I didn't expect you'd be against me."

He sat down in a big chair and stared gloomily at the fire. Mrs. Durant came over to rest one hand affectionately on his shoulder.

"I am on your side, Edward," she said seriously. "You know that. You know perfectly well that her father and I both hope with all our hearts that some day we shall see you two married."

He turned eagerly and, reaching up, caught her hand.

"Then why don't you speak to her of it?" he exclaimed. "Let her understand your wishes."

The woman looked down on him with a pitying smile.

"You poor boy!" she said. "You must be desperate. You want me to propose for you. Well, if George Durant had come to my mother"— She ended with a nod almost savage.

"Perhaps he did for all you know," exclaimed Pinckney.

"No, he didn't. She was dead," snapped Frances' mother. "Now, you poor thing, don't be so tragic. Sommers will go in a day or so, and in a few weeks he may be ordered to the north pole or the equator or goodness knows where. At any rate, he'll be out of her way and yours. See her tonight. Talk with her. Let her see how you feel toward her. Now is a good time. She's coming back. I'll leave you."

But it was the butler instead of Frances, as expected, that entered the room.

"Filkins, where is Miss Durant?" asked Pinckney sharply.

The butler turned.

"On the veranda with the navy gentleman, sir," he said.

Had an Excuse.

"Why did you parade the boardwalk in men's clothes?"

"Your honor," sobbed the fair prisoner, "there's so much fun made of women's fashions this year."

So the court dismissed her with a reprimand.—Philadelphia Ledger.

ROUTINE OF COUNCILMEN

Matters of Minor Importance Disposed of by the City Fathers.

REPORTS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Paid Firemen Appointed—Petitions Are Filed—More Sidewalks in the East End.

Several petitions for new lights and a re-arrangement of present ones were received at the October meeting of the Common Council, last nght. John R. Greason and other residents of Woodland avenue, asked for more lights on that thoroughfare, claiming that there are few lamps there and of little benefit.

J. A. Albert petitioned for additional lights at Washington and Richmond streets, and Rev. C. S. Kemble and others asked for better street lighting at West Fourth street and Monroe avenue. These petitions were referred to the proper committee.

Regarding a recent action of the Common Council, in which property-owners were ordered to lay sidewalks, the Central Park Realty Company, offered a word of explanation about Thornton avenue. In a communication, Ernest Sharpe, said that the company could not fully comply with the order as it had sold considerable property on that avenue. It was willing, however, to lay walks in front of its property; furthermore it offered to deed the street to the city, provided it would accept and macadamize the same. This matter, and another petition from the company asking that Thornton avenue be macadamized, were referred to the street committee.

Charles H. Hand called attention to a sewer assessment in error against his property on Netherwood avenue, claiming that sixteen feet should be deducted to allow for a bridge in front of the property. This was referred to the finance committee.

F. B. Gilbreth, general contractor for the new Frost building on Park avenue, asked for permission to build vaults beneath the sidewalk and the request was granted.

The resignations of Fred D. Wilbee and John H. Brown, as call-men in the fire department, were received and accepted.

Mayor C. J. Fisk appointed William Jaeger and Joseph Robinson as full-paid members of the fire department, and George Mehl, Jr., a regular firemen, as captain. The appointments were confirmed. Mr. Mehl has been a regular fireman since May, 1894, and the Mayor called attention to his faithful and efficient service.

Overseer of the Poor Alex D. Ayers reported outside expenses of $286.14 and almshouse expenses of $184.12, for the past month. This was referred to the alms committee.

The report of Clerk Horace G. Adams, of the District court, for the past month showed the receipts to be $154.19 and the disbursements $42.19, leaving a balance of $112.

Street Commissioner A. J. Gavett reported the granting of twelve sewer permits during September, and Building Inspector T. O. Doane reported the granting of thirty-five permits during the same period.

The city treasurer was authorized to borrow $2,000 on account of the fire fund, in accordance with a resolution of Councilman Buxton.

Mr. Gloak offered a resolution, which was adopted, directing that sidewalks be laid on Woodland avenue, between Central street and Ravine road.

In response to a request from Street Commissioner A. J Gavett, Mr. Montgomery offered a motion, which was adopted, directing a re-arrangement of lights on Park avenue between Arlington avenue and Cedar brook. This will place one light on Evergreen avenue.

Mr. Gloak called up the ordinance providing for the opening of East Seventh street from Leland avenue to Terrill road, and it was adopted on two readings, and ordered advertised. Monday night, November 1, was fixed as the time for a public hearing on the ordinance.

A resolution offered by Mr. Buxton and adopted, directed the New York and New Jersey Telephone Co., to remove fire alarm box No. 13, from a pole on Park avenue, opposite North avenue to the Boice, Runyon & Co. building at an expense of $17.46. The box has already been moved and the adoption of the resolution simply sanctioned the action.

CASHMERE IN FASHION.

The revival of cashmere in a new and lustrous weave was heralded and somewhat adopted last season. It was more widely used abroad than here, and designers say that it will be the leading style in America this season.

It is exquisite in its present form and it is very like crepe de chine that one feels that it is a good friend instead of a stranger, or a Rip Van Winkle come to life.

Prize Animals.

A splendid prize for a juvenile party is a box of imported cardboard toys in animal shapes. The figures are especially lifelike and durable in the way of playthings and are furnished with joints, the method of which is patented. Six animals come in each set. Some of the boxes contain wild creatures, some our fabiliar friends of house or barn. On the back of each shape is printed a description in easy English of the animals' habitat and habits. Thanks to the jointing, the creatures can be made to assume diverse and very characteristic attitudes.

Miss Helene W. Krewson, of 10 Craig place, a prominent nurse of this city, will leave with Dr. and Mrs. Harry L. Homer, of Baltimore, for a European trip to be gone an indefinite time. She will visit most the European cities of interest.

DANDRUFF CURE.

A woman who has suffered much from dandruff and has tried many cures—so-called—found greatest relief by the use of sulphur ointment.

She applied the ointment every other night and washed the hair at first twice a week, later, when the dandruff had nearly gone, every week, gradually widening the intervals to three weeks.

Immediately after washing the hair and before it was quite dry she applied a little of the ointment. This was rubbed in carefully so as not to get on the hair. Used in this way it prevented the scalp from drying out to rapidly.

Though the woman found sulphur ointment a good dandruff cure, she disapproved of the use of sulphur as a shampoo, as it deadened the hair. She found after thorough trials.

A TIP ON TAILORING.

Many persons ordering an autumn suit and intending it to do duty through the winter prefer a medium weight material, sufficiently interlined, the heavier quality which looks to rough-and-ready for the early fall days.

Women will endure the excess of warmth long before winter makes it necessary, but they will not put up with a coat too wintery in appearance. Just by way of suggestion it ought to be generally known that white, woolly felt, which is so generally used for interlining, has, in its loosely woven fabric, great numbers of long white hairs that gradually work their way through the cloth to the surface. The constant picking out of these hairs can be obviated by the use of dark felt interlining, it is well to know an occasional thing and to insist.

His Fatal Oversight.

He proposed to her by mail, and by letter she replied. He read her brief refusal, then committed suicide. Alas! he'd be alive today and she a happy bride had be but read the postscript penned on the other side.—Chicago News.

MR. REED'S IMPRESSIONS

Returning from Trip Around the World, Senator Talks Interestingly.

THEY VISITED MANY LANDS.

Says Russians Lack Patriotism and that the Czar is Liberal—Glad to Get Home.

After an absence of six months during which they made a trip around the world, former Senator and Mrs. Charles Arthur Reed, of this city, returned home on Monday on the Atlantic Transport Line Steamer Minnehaha, and for the present are stopping at the Hotel Marie Antoinette, New York, where they will probably spend the winter.

Mr. Reed came to Plainfield yesterday and made a short visit to his law offices. During his stay in New York he will probably commute between here and New York and look after his Plainfield business in that way. Mr. Reed when seen by a reporter for The Daily Press was looking fine and declared that he never felt better. He said that both Mrs. Reed and himself had thoroughly enjoyed the trip around the world, that it had proved a source of great education. He said that the trip was taken chiefly for pleasure, although he did combine it with a little business of which he did not care to talk.

There were a few things that greatly impressed Mr. Reed in his long journey. One was the beautiful country he found in Siberia, with a climate like that in this country, a rolling country, the foliage and grass green and beautiful. He expected to find a bleak, cold country, but was agreeably surprised.

Anothing thing that impressed him was the absolute lack of patriotism on the part of the Russians. They appear to care nothing at all for their country, realizing that no matter how they are wronged, they have no redress, no voice and there is no possible way in which they can raise a protest. The Czar apparently wants to be fair and liberal, but the aristocracy is determined that he shall not yield to the peasantry.

Mr. and Mrs. Reed had the pleasure of seeing the Czar and Empress and their summer home; also the King and Queen of Denmark. About three weeks were spent in Japan and they were greatly impressed with the beautiful country. Mr. Reed in speaking of the Japanese said that he found them to be a proud people and when he learned that they boasted of a nation 12,000 years old and having taken part in 800 wars without once being whipped, he could understand the reason for their pride.

Moscow was another interesting point visted, in fact, Mr. Reed said he was not so sure but that it was the most interesting place on the trip. There, he said, was to be found a combination of the oriental and the occidental, a central place of meeting for all races.

In speaking of the general conditions as he found them abroad, Mr. Reed said that labor is very cheap abroad and it cost little or nothing for the cheap classes to live. He was impressed with the fact that Americans get more out of life than the foreigners in every instance where conditions compare equal.

Mr. and Mrs. Reed left here April 1 and going across the continent, sailed for Honlulu with former Vice-President and Mrs. Charles W. Fairbanks. They then went to Yokohoma, and spent about three weeks in Japan. They were in Shanghai about ten days, from which point they took a seven hundred mile sail to Hankow, then going by train nearly 1,000 miles to Pekin. They visited Shanhaiquan, where the famous Chinese wall extends into the sea. It is 1,800 miles around this wall and is considered one of the greatest engineering feats known.

Then they went by rail seven hundred miles to Mukden, the scene of

ARREST HOTEL MAN FOR ALLEGED ASSAULT

On the complaint of Edward Burke, of the West End, Constable Robert Pierce, of Dunellen, last night arrested Lawrence Kerwin and John Kerwin, and today is looking for "John Doe," who was also implicated in a fight in which Mr. Burke was severely and roughly handled and had a rib broken.

The alleged assault took place a few days ago. Mr. Burke appeared before Justice Charles Suydam, of New Brunswick, and had a warrant issued for the arrest of the three men, when the Kerwins were arraigned they were held in bail for a hearing tomorrow.

Lawrence Kerwin has conducted a hotel near the city line in the West End for many years, with the exception of a year or two, when the courts denied him a license. Details as to the alleged fight are meagre and will not be known until the hearing tomorrow. Mr. Burke was so severely injured that he was obliged to go to Muhlenberg Hospital for treatment. It is said that there has been an ill-feeling on the part of the Kerwins and Burke for sometime.

FUNERAL SERVICES OF A PHILANTHROPIC WOMAN

The funeral service of Mrs. William Palmer Smith, whose death occurred at the Holland House, New York city, on Saturday, following a long illness, was held from the late home on Belvidere avenue, at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon. There was a very large attendance of friends and relatives, including a number of people from New York and Brooklyn.

Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, rector of Grace church, of which Mrs. Smith was a communicant, officiated at the service. Mrs. Smith was very active in the religious work of Grace church parish and also in the many charities of the city. Her death is a distinct loss not only to the church but to charities as well.

During the service a quartet sang "I Heard the Voice of Jesus Say," "Peace, Perfect Peace," and "Jerusalem the Golden." The burial was in Hillside cemetery. There was a beautiful display of costly floral tributes from relatives and friends, including a number of large pieces and many bunches of cut roses, which completely hid the casket from view.

NEW JERSEY ENDEAVORERS' CONVENTION BEGINS

DELEGATES FROM ALL PARTS OF THE STATE, REPRESENTING MANY PROTESTANT DENOMINATIONS, GATHER AT FIRST PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH FOR TWENTY-THIRD ANNUAL MEETING.

The twenty-third annual convention of the New Jersey Christian Endeavor Union opened this morning in the First Presbyterian church with about one hundred of the expected seven hundred delegates present. The leaders of the morning session were enthusiastic over the splendid enthusiasm evinced by the attending delegates and it was freely said that no previous convention of the C. E. Union ever opened under more propitious circumstances. Delegates representing every society but two in the State were expected before the afternoon session opened. The music which is under the direction of Charles L. Lewis who has had all the young people of the city churches practising was hearty and bore a strong resemblance to the choruses sung in the big auditorium at Ocean Grove.

State Secretary Speaks.

Miss Ida B. Stevens, State Secretary, was the speaker at the opening session, and in her speech outlined the work which it is expected that the Union will accomplish during the coming winter. She made a strong plea for concerted action in the matter of getting all the young people interested in the work and assured the delegates that from now on a determined effort in this direction would meet with success. "There are too many attractions which have a tendency to draw the young people away from the best influences of the church," she said, "and we must work together to prevent a continued advance of secular interests at the cost of Christian impulses. Nobody knows better than the pastors of our churches what these influences are and they also know that their hearty co-operation is needed in the work of the societies in their churches. Without the young people the churches would soon be memberless and it is for us to build up and maintain what our parents have builded for us."

District Conferences.

The conference of district secretaries occupied all the time of this morning's session which was preparatory for the concerted work to be inaugurated tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock. Clarence B. LaRue, general chairman of the convention introduced the speakers at this session. The committees appointed for the convention are: Finance, Frank Stewart, chairman; entertainment, Alexander Galloway, chairman; reception, Miss Eva Rogers, chairman; registration, Miss Bertha Jones, chairman; junior work, Mrs. Wheaton S. Lowry, chairman; ushers, Elmer Gayle, chairman; music, Frank Stewart, chairman, and musical director, Charles L. Lewis.

Afternoon Session.

The afternoon session which began at 2 o'clock, saw a large increase in the number of delegates over the number of the morning. There was a conference of the junior and intermediate workers conducted by Mrs. Ida L. Dukes, State superintendent of junior work. Karl Lehman, Interstate Field Secretary of Christian Endeavor, was present and gave an interesting talk on the work among the New York societies with whom he is now working. He presented many practical ideas for the consideration of the workers in the New Jersey union and told of his experiences in other fields. Mr. Lehman enjoyed the closest attention of the delegates who learned some of the latest and most progressive ideas for the advancement and growth of Christian Endeavor work.

Executive Committee.

The afternoon session will have closed at 5 o'clock, after which a recess of an hour will be taken. At 6 o'clock dinner will be served followed by a meeting of the State Executive Committee and the local committee. At 8 a meeting in which all the local societies will join will be addressed by Rev. Dr. J. Douglas Adam, of East Orange. Tomorrow morning will usher in bright and early the real business of the convention. At 6 o'clock there will be the "Morning Watch" led by State President John T. Sproull. This service will last three quarters of an hour. A 9 o'clock a devotional service led by Rev. John Y. Broek, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, will last for fifteen minutes. Then will follow the addresses of welcome by Rev. Dr. John Sheridan Zelie, pastor of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, Rev. Dr. Charles F. Herring, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, and Clarence B. LaRue, chairman of the Plainfield committee. Following a quiet hour there will be speeches by Percy R. Neussle, of the introduction department; S. D. Riddle, fresh air department; A. B. Johnson, press department and others of the various evangelistic and Bible study departments. A recess of an hour and a half will then be taken for dinner.

Some Addresses.

The afternoon session begins promptly at 1:45, fifteen minutes devotion followed by an address by Miss Josephine Wyckoff, of the missionary department. Two addresses, one by Rev. E. P. M. Gearheart on prison work in Pennsylvania, and another by Rev. E. F. Hallenbeck, of New York city, will be the features. In the evening reports of State officers and several addresses will be the features.

During the three days of the convention meals will be served in the Sunday school rooms of Trinity Reformed church, and tonight the banquet tendered to the visiting delegates will take place at 6 o'clock. Much of the success of the arrangements for the care of the visitors is due to the untiring efforts of Charles F. Windham, secretary, and Alexander Galloway, chairman of the entertainment committee of the local union. Much credit is also due to the other societies of the churches whose young people are not affiliated with the Christian Endeavor Union. Their broad and generous spirit has gone a long way toward making the local union's work easier.

Mr. La Rue's Speech.

In Mr. LaRue's speech of welcome he said that the main or central thought of the convention is two-fold, to show that the motive of the endeavorers was to live up to their slogan of "Forward for Our Master," and to participate in the blessing and benefits to be derived by the young people of Plainfield from association with the workers in the cause as well as to stimulate the actual work among members in an effort to bring those out of the church into a close relationship with Christ and his people. He hoped that the convention would be an inspiration to better and more comprehensive work among all the societies connected with the union as well as those not members.

The societies represented from the local union are from the First Presbyterian, Congregational, Trinity Reformed, Seventh-Day Baptist, Park Avenue Baptist, Temple Baptist, Hope chapel, Warren chapel, South Plainfield Baptist, New Market Baptist, New Market Seventh-Day Baptist, Dunellen Presbyterian and Wilson Memorial churches.

Dr. Clark Due Friday.

Dr. Francis E. Clark, the founder of the society, which now numbers nearly four million members, will arrive at noon Friday and will address the juniors first. Afterwards Dr. Clark will deliver adresses at Trinity Reformed and the First Presbyterian churches. The hours at which Dr. Clark will speak have not yet been determined.

It will interest many to know that immediately after his visit to this convention Dr. Clark will make his fifth trip around the world in the interest of the Christian Endeavor movement. The home which is being built near Boston for the Doctor will in all probability be completed while he is on his world circling trip.

Speeches This Morning.

The district secretaries present this morning at the Christian Endeavor conference were entertained by speeches from Miss N. K. Foote, of Elizabeth, and Field Secretary Carl Lehman, who told of the problems confronting the society and the way to overcome the difficulties and other obstacles Mr. Lehman said that the district secretaries were the key to the situation in Christian Endeavor work and on them although they are mere humans, depends to a large extent the success of the work every where.

For 1,000,000 Members.

A letter was read from President Clark who said that 1,000,000 members were expected to join the movement before another year had passed over their heads.

Following is a list of the district secretaries to be present during the convention:

WHO PAYS BIG BILL FOR EXCISE EVIDENCE?

The verdicts of "guilty" obtained against Edward Coleman, driver for Seigel Cooper Company, and Alvah Dunham, driver for Acker, Merrill & Condict, in the Union county court a few days ago, for selling liquor illegally here, will cost $1,500, according to reliable sources, but the question is being asked, who's to pay the bill?

It is said that Mayor Charles J. Fisk engaged the detectives and others to obtain the necessary evidence against the New York department stores' employees, and the bill was thus incurred. As far as can be learned the bill has not been presented as yet to ither the Union County Board of Freeholders or to the Plainfield Common Council.

The opinion is expressed by those in a position to know that the county will refuse to shoulder the expense if the bill is presented, and it is said here that it is a serious question whether the city could legally pay the bill. Mr. Fisk is still in the Adirondacks and as a result there will be no developments until he returns.

SAY MAYOR DID NOT GIVE THE $350 ORDER

Friends of Mayor Fisk today disagree with the statement made on the floor of the Common Council on Monday night that he had given a verbal order to a local restaurant man to serve any and all meals to policemen and their friends during the Charter Day celebration. The bill for $350, submitted by the restaurant man, has been held up until the mayor's return.

It is said that when presented to him he refused to approve of it and on Monday night the President of the Common Council, Ralph I. Tolles, also declined to put his "o. k." on it. The feeling among the city fathers is that the bill should be paid, but they are first anxious to learn who gave a verbal and unlimited contract for such a purpose. The restaurant man acted in good faith, it is argued, and his claim should be met.

TO OFFICIATE AT GRANDSON'S WEDDING.

Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, pastor of the First Baptist church, leaves today for West Virginia, to officiate at the marriage of his grandson, George Henry Caperton, of Charleston, W. Va., to Miss Hale Austin, of Lewisburg, W. Va.

The wedding will occur tomorrow evening at the residence of the bride's parents, and will be an event of unusual social interest, as both families are widely connected in the Virginias. Dr. Chambliss will return Saturday and occupy his pulpit Sunday.

Lecture for School Boys.

Dr. Lyman Beecher Sperry lectured at noon today at the Somerset school on the "Significance of Sex." His audience was composed of boys of the high school and the grammar grades.

DINE JAMES F. BUCKLE

Get-Together Club Honors One of Its Old Guard at Hotel Waldorf.

WM. N. RUNYON TOASTMASTER.

On the Eve of His Departure for a Trip Around the World, Buckle Gets Great "Send Off."

To express their esteem of the man and citizen, the Get-Together Club last night gave a dinner in honor of former Mayor James F. Buckle, one of teh old guard of the organization, on the eve of his departure for a trip around the world. The affair took place in the large dining hall at the Hotel Waldorf and the place was filled by the men who work to pile up Republican majorities in Union county and in this city. It was the most successful function ever held by the club but it was just what might be expected when it came to paying honor to the club's "chief medicine man."

At the request of "Sachem" Andrew McCardell, Judge William N. Runyon acted as toastmaster and during the dinner led in singing popular songs. Following the feast, which was a credit to Proprietor Henry Windham, the judge made a happy speech and afterwards introduced a number of the diners, who in turn spoke. During the evening, the guest of honor was presented with a huge gilt key and a silk American flag. It was explained to him that it was the key of the city of Plainfield, which he should have while touring foreign lands. Mayor Buckle's response was one right from the heart, a speech characteristic of the whole-souled and lovable man.

Among the club's guests were County Clerk James Calvert, District Court Clerk Edward Bauer, Sheriff Robert Kirkland and Assistant Post master James White, all of Elizabeth. Most all the local officials were present and there were several Democrats in the crowd.

The menu follows:

Dry Martini (not Martine); Azores oysters on the shell game; Mount of Olives, Pinchgut celery, Pickles, a la custom house, Great Salt Lake Almonds; Consomme, a la Human Nature; Gibralter Halibut; Japaned Chicken Croquettes, Egyptian Roast Chicken, Cauliflower Maderia, Potatoes Tangier, Slicked Jerusalem Tomatoes, Corn on the Cob on the Nile, Dead Sea Beats, Sphinx Peas, Five Ace Turnips; Lobster Salad (with Geisha after-effects); Ice Cream; Windham Roquefort Cheese, Chinese Crackers, Assorted Nuts, Cigars made of pure Manila Rope, Java Demi Tasse.

Among other things the menu card contained the verse, beneath a cartoon of Mr. Buckle, written by Judge Runyon:

"God speed you, Jim, as forth you fare, to lands across the sea;
Our fondest love shall e'er be yours, no matter where you be.
And East or West, or North or South, wherever you may roam,
We beg that you will ne'er forget the little bunch at home."

The menu card also contained some "intercepted cablegrams" supposed to have been sent by the mayor as he journeyed around the globe giving his impressions of the various countries.

LUTHER L. SHEPHERD AND MISS M. M. COLLINS TO WED.

Invitations have been sent out for the wedding of Luther L. Shepherd, of Somerset place, and Miss Marjorie Morse Collins, of Brooklyn. The ceremony will take place at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Collins, at Brooklyn, Tuesday evening, October 19, and will be followed by a reception.

Mr. Shepherd is the son of L. C. Shepherd. He was graduated from the Plainfield High School in the class of 1903 and is employed with the Remington Typewriter Company. The couple will make their home in Brooklyn.

RARITAN.

The barn and outbuildings on the John Drake farm near Flagtown, were burned to the ground about 7 o'clock Sunday evening, together with all the contents. With the help of neighbors the horses and cattle, with the exception of a few calves, were saved, but all of his machinery and hay were burned. It is believed that the fire was the work of an incendiary, as several attempts had been made before to set fire to the place. The blaze was so plain that many residents of Raritan thought that the fire was at Duke's country home. The loss will be about $3,000, partly covered by insurance.

FOOTBALL.

The first football game between the Plainfield High school team and Cranford, will be played in this city on Saturday.

The North Plainfield High School football team will play the Holy Cross Club on the Cricket Field, Saturday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock.

Football began in earnest on Saturday, when all the big elevens got into action. The Princeton Tigers had little difficulty in piling up a big score against Stevens, but Old Nassau made costly fumbles which allowed the Hoboken boys to score. Cornell was the other big eleven to be scored upon, the Rensselear Polytechnic team making a goal from the field. Harvard beat Bowdoin easily, while Yale had little trouble with Syracuse. Pennsylvania shut out Dickinson.

Norwich took the measure of Wesleyan, while Vermont and Dartmouth failed to score against each other. West Point rolled up a large score against Tufts, and the Indians downed Bicknell, although the red men's opponents managed to score.

Chicago and Minnesota won their games by large scores. The former defeated Purdue, while the latter took Iowa into camp. Amherst received another setback by losing to Springfield in a close game. Brown took the measure of Colgate, and Lafayette downed Wyoming.

Ted Coy will practically take charge of the Yale eleven today. Logan will continue to be field captain and Coy will be out of the game for the next three weeks, but will appear on the side lines as spectator and coach. He is not expected to don his uniform for practise this week. Yale will also miss Tony Haines, whose ankle was twisted in a scrimmage Saturday. He will be out of the game, it is thought, for two weeks or more. He was the Blues best punter and will be missed in the West Point game next Saturday.

GOLF.

Although the fall season is nearly half over and the days have noticeably shortened, the enthusiasm of the golfers at the Forest Hill Field Club has in no wise slackened. It is now expected that the annual meeting of the organization to be held next Saturday will prove a record-breaker in point of attendance.

Coincident with the meeting will be a dinner, the time for the latter having been set for 6 p. m. The price of the dinner will be $2.25 per plate, which will include the entrance fee in Class A and B eighteen-hole medal play handicaps, scheduled for that afternoon. H. G. Sheerman, the steward, will continue at the club throughout the winter.

Play in the club championship has reached the final round. In the semi final Harry Christi defeated Edward Pierson, 5 up and 4 to play, and J. J. Radel defeated Arthur Taylor, 3 up and 1 to play. Christi also won the handicap in Class A, with a card of 77, 9-68.

C. B. Brown won the championship of the Montclair Golf Club Saturday, defeating Paul Harrison, 4 up and 3 to play, in the final. In the Class A handicap W. B Bremner won with a card of 77, 4-73, while F. L. Stuart's 89, 14-75 won the Class B prize.

At Baltusrol on Saturday, E. B. Sholl won the sweepstakes, his card reading 101, 22-79. W. E Murdock got the second share, with an 84 net, assisted by a sixteen-stroke allowance.

A new champion made his appearance at the Glen Ridge Golf Club on Saturday, when C. L. Borne defeated E. W. Condon, 7 up and 6 to play, in the final round. Dr. W. S. Beggs won the final contest for the Governor's Cup, with a net score of 76.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

Unwonted lauditory comment has been evoked in Chicago, New York and Boston, for the big musical ha! ha!—"A Knight for a Day," by what is called the see-saw pageant of the gaiety. The Boston Transcript termed the effect one of exquisite beauty. The New York newspapers generally hailed it as a revelation in ingenious commingling of lights and grouped girls. "Life Is a See-Saw," one of the songs of the gaiety, introduces the spectacle, the chief effect of which is a giant see-saw of many beams, the planks running in some instances a forty foot length. The boards are alive with larking college girls—the scene is a seminary lawn—whose rise and fall rythmically is illuminated by myraid lights, some tiny flashlights held by themselves, other tiny charged lamps interwoven in the fabric of the scene. The mechanism of the effect is so complex, and the beams so many that a car is said to be required for the transshipment of the device. Interest in the local engagement of "A Knight for a Day," at the Plainfield theatre on Monday night, is said already to exceed that commonly aroused by any early attraction of the theatre.

CHRISTIAN FIELD.

"In Flowerland" will be given at Hope chapel, October 22-23, the proceeds to be for the Christmas fund.

The Women's Association of the Congregational church held a sewing and business meeting yesterday, when plans for the winter work were discussed.

The Ladies' Home Mission Society of the First Baptist church will hold an all-day sewing meeting at the church tomorrow. Luncheon will be served at noon.

The women of the First Baptist church are busy packing a barrel of clothing which will be sent to a western missionary and his family located in Minnesota.

The prayer-meetings in the various churches of the city and borough usually held Wednesday night, will be merged with the State Endeavor convention meeting tonight at the First Presbyterian church.

Miss Kathryn Reed and Charles Jennings, of Warrenville, entertained the Social League Club at their home Monday night.

Mr. and Mrs. Chester Decker, who were recently married, have taken up their residence at 824 West Third street, for the present.

ANNUAL CELEBRATION AT TRINITY CHURCH

The annual celebration of the anniversary of the birth of the Christian Endeavor Society of Trinity Reformed church was marked by a special program of entertainment in the Sunday school room last night. An attendance of seventy-five were on hand for the celebration and in all truth they "whooped it up." Well rendered piano and vocal solos were followed by games of thrilling interest; an abundance of refreshments followed an abundance of guessing games. There certainly was variety to the program, and the people present appreciated it.

The program, it should be said, was arranged by a committee consisting of Miss Myra Dunavan, Miss Edna Dilts, Miss Edna Cole, Miss Cora Gano, Harold Schenck, Elmer Gayle, and Charles and Russell Doeringer. Perhaps the lone bit of entertainment they furnished that did not provide fun was the formal reading of the treasurer's report. Arthur Gaskill read the report in place of Treasurer Cornelius Schenck who was unavoidably absent.

Here is the make-up of the new official board: President, Frederick L. Soper; first vice-president, Leroy Layton; second vice-president, Miss Lucie Coriell; recording secretary, Miss Anna Bach; corresponding secretary, Miss May A. Randolph; treasurer, Russell C. Doeringer.

Mrs. Ida R. Hilliard and Miss May Randolph led off the musical program with a duet at the piano. Then came a vocal solo by Miss Etta Raybert. Mrs. Hilliard concluded with a piano solo. The games that followed were various and of unusual interest. The Endeavorers who did not play at "passing the clothes line" found matching conundrums to their liking, and vice versa. Everybody played at some thing some time. Peary, Cook and other questions of the moment were forgotten for the night.

Rev. John Y. Broek helped the social committee make things lively. Chinese lanterns and floral decorations, placed at appropriate points of the room, gave a festive color to the affair. Finally, the Endeavorers ice-creamed and caked themselves to their heart's content and passed regretfull good-nights.

the great battle between the Russians and the Japanese, and then boarded a train on a Japanese railroad, riding in a thoroughly up-to-date Pullman coach with all the conveniences to be found on American roads.

The trip in this train extended to Chang Chung and at the latter place they took a train on the Trans-Siberian Railroad to Moscow, a distance of 5,000 miles. After that they visited Sweden, Denmark, Germany, France, London, then Ireland, Wales, Scotland and back to London, from which place they left for home, arriving in New York on Monday.

In referring to conditions in Siberia, Mr. Reed said that he found cattle and sheep grazing on the beautiful rolling country and near the Russian border he found the country well under cultivation. The country is thickly populated and the government is urging the peasants to go to Siberia. The entire trip taken by Mr. and Mrs. Reed covered about 30,000 miles, half by water and half by rail.

When the interview was completed, Mr. Reed said in parting, "America is good enough for me and both Mrs. Reed and myself are mighty glad to get home again."

Swartzman Found Guilty.

Joseph Swartzman, of this city, accused of stealing a bicycle owned by Richard Harris, colored, and who entered a plea of not guilty, was tried before Judge E. S. Atwater, and without a jury, in the Union county court this morning. He was found guilty. Francis J. Blatz represented Swartzman and W. L. Hetfield, Jr., assistant prosecutor, represented the State. Swartzman will be sentenced next week.

WOMEN'S GUILD OF HOLY CROSS CHURCH MEETS

The opening meeting of the Women's Guild of the Church of the Holy Cross was held yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock, and was largely attended. The meeting was opened by the rector, Rev. G. A. Warner. The monthly reports were read and these showed the guild to be in a flourishing condition. Three new members were received. The nomination of officers to be elected at the next meeting was as follows:

Secretary, Miss Stevens; associate secretary, Miss Howell; treasurer, Mrs. F. W. Creasy; executive board, the above and Mrs. C. E. G. Larsson, Mrs. MacDonald, Mrs. Murray, Mrs. Stevens, Mrs. Powell, Mrs. Conklin, Mrs. Long and Mrs. Coddington.

The guild in its various chapters reported on the work done and planned for the future. The altar chapter, Women's Auxiliary to Missions, Junior Auxiliary, entertertainment chapter, periodical and bag committee each rendered satisfactory reports and the new year opens under auspicious circumstances.

LATIN LANDS' MISSION MRS. RANDOLPH'S THEME

An interesting paper on "Missions in Latin Lands" was presented by Mrs. L. V. F. Randolph at the monthly meeting of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the First Baptist church, held yesterday afternoon in the lecture room. She has recently returned from touring Italy, and much that she described of the country and the churches had the charm given by the interested beholders.

The lecturer told of the few worshippers in the vast cathedrals, where were decorated images, incense and monotonous intoning of prayers to the Virgin, all in a dead language. She contrasted the meagre handful of worshippers with the large number of tourists who talk volubly as the guides show and explain, as in a museum.

Mrs. Randolph said the greed of the priests had so impoverished the people that the men of Italy had lost faith in any religion or church. The missions, in consequence, had a hard task to restore trust to the deceived and hope to the despairing. She said further that American and English tourists in Italy do not come in contact with missions there, because they are conducted in the Italian language. To the Methodist church, Mrs. Randolph gave the credit of having done the most to evangelize Italy. She described the beautiful Crandall Hall established in Rome by the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of that church, where many bright and winsome Italian girls become a power for good not only in Rome but in other parts of Italy.

The friendliness of the Italian government to protestant schools and churches gives great opportunity to missions, according to Mrs. Randolph, and it is given to them to seek to reform and restore the faith preached by Paul, the first missionary to Italian lands.

The paper was preceded by devotional services led by Mrs. Walter Dobbins.

Dead Chief's Family Remembered.

Michael Lavarett, chief of police for the New Jersey Central, who was killed at Fanwood last week when he was struck by a train, was held in high esteem by the company. Today an official of the road sent Mrs. Laveratt a check for $2,500 as an evidence of this appreciation.

FIRST M. E. WOMEN HOLD RALLY SOCIAL

Under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society of the First M. E. church, a rally social was held in Vincent chapel last night, to which all members of the church and congregation were invited. It was one of the best socials ever held at the church, and was largely attended. The women of the society whose names are included in the initials from A to H, were in charge, to the number of about forty. Mrs. Matthew H. Ewart was the general chairman.

The chapel was attractively decorated for the occasion, the prevailing colors being red and green. There was a profusion of the season's flowers in carrying out the decorative scheme.

During the evening there was a fine program, which comprised two instrumental duets by William Schoonmaker and Mrs. H. L. McGee; soprano solos by Miss Bertha van Nuis Willis, which were well received; several delightful recitations by Miss Lillian Whitehead, of the Emory M. E. church, Jersey City, and contralto selections by Miss Jane Bailey, of this city. Every number on the program received hearty applause. A social time followed during which refreshments consisting of apples, pop-corn, etc., were served.

The prayer meeting at the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church will be omitted tonight so that the members can take part in the State Endeavor convention at the First Presbyterian church.

CURE YOUR KIDNEYS.

Do Not Endanger Life When a Plainfield Citizen Shows You the Cure.

Why will people continue to suffer the agonies of kidney complaint, backache, urinary disorders, lameness, headaches, languor, why allow themselves to become chronic invalids, when a certain cure is offered them?

Doan's Kidney Pills is the remedy to use, because it gives to the kidneys the help they need to perform their work.

If you have any, even one, of the symptoms of kidney disease, cure yourself now, before diabetes, dropsy or Bright's disease sets in. Read this Plainfield testimony:

Mrs. M. Newman, 532 West Fifth street, Plainfield, N. J., says: "A constant pain in my limbs was the principal symptom of my kidney trouble. When I saw Doan's Kidney Pills advertised, I procured a box at Randolph's Pharmacy and soon after I began taking them, the pains in my limbs disappeared. I heartily recommend Doan's Kidney Pills."

For sale by all dealers. Price, 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

Dan Cupid's Dunellen labors are pretty to behold. He announces two weddings for today, and at least one a day for this week. Curious to relate the trio of weddings are, each and all home affairs.

Today's weddings are those of Miss Nettie Baldwin to Clarence Carman, and of Miss Grace M. Dayton to Frank W. Smalley. Miss Baldwin resides on Front street, and Mr. Carman is a draughtsman, of Grove street. Rev. E. R. Brown, of the First Presbtyerian church, performs this ceremony. Miss Dayton resides on New Market road, and Mr. Smalley on Prospect street. Rev. George Gardiner, of the New Market Baptist church, will officiate.

Next Tuesday's wedding is that of Miss Martha Snitla, also of Front street, to Walter Wilmot, who is in the gas business in New York city. The Rev. E. R. Brown will wed the pair.

The younger people of the First Presbyterian church in Dunellen are resting after two strenuous days of marry-making. Sunday they held a harvest party and had a thrilling time. Monday evening they rallied in the chapel and ran through an interesting musical program. This consisted of piano solos by Miss Laura Todd, Miss Susie Lowrie, Miss Beatrice Cameron, and Miss Mabel Cole. Miss Beatrice Cameron rendered a piano and vocal solo. Pastor Brown gave the assemblage an entertaining account of his vacation experiences at Asbury Park. Refreshments were served.

Peter Ratti accompanied his cousin, Peter Musa, to Trenton, where Musa is thinking of starting in business. The pair will look up a location. Musa has been working in his cousin's confectionery shop for a year, and has now resolved to branch out for himself.

Rev. E. R. Brown, pastor of the First Presbtyerian church, attended the meeting of the Presbtyery at Lemington yesterday.

WESTFIELD.

Rev. W. Y. Chapman, of Newark, will be the principal speaker at the annual dinner of the Men's Club of the Presbyterian church, to be held Friday evening of this week.

The wedding of Miss Blanche Uking and Charles Plaut, of Elizabeth, will take place this evening at the home of the bride's parents on Euclid avenue.

William S. Miller was taken to a sanitarium yesterday for treatment. His mental condition has improved in the past few days.

Work was commenced Monday on the new building of the People's National Bank.

PIANO CONTEST FAKES EXPOSED!

There are several Piano houses which have no prices for their goods except grossly inflated ones arranged expressly for fake discounts in connection with schemes of various kinds. These houses seem to find it impossible to dispose of their pianos in a legitimate, straightforward way, but instead resort to one scheme after another—catch-penny devices, so crude as to be positively insulting to the intelligence of the public. These schemes usually take the form of guessing contests, drawing puzzles and various feats of little skill. In all of them the object is identical to mislead the prospective buyer into the belief that he is getting something for nothing, while at the same time prices are arranged sufficiently high to off-set the allowance to which his prize certificate entitles him.

EVERYONE WHO MAKES A GUESS GETS A PRIZE!

If you have ever answered one of these ads you received a discount certificate. EVERYBODY DOES. It matters not whether the answer is good, bad or indifferent, from adult or child it draws a prize in the shape of a certificate or due bill (generally from $65.00 to $100.00) to apply on the purchase of a new Piano. Of course the price of the Piano is fixed accordingly and the purchaser pays a high price even after the amount of certificate is deducted, usually a much higher price than an instrument of similar quality could be secured for in any legitimate music store.

To test the value of one of these certificates present it in payment for something other than a new piano—say a low priced used piano, music cabinet or a bench, and see how quickly the dealer will turn you down. He will not even give you 50 cents worth of music for it. Try the experiment!

AT $185.00 WE WILL SELL A BETTER PIANO THAN THE SCHEME HOUSES ASK $325.00 TO $400.00 FOR! Such well known and high grade makes as Haines Bros., Brewster, the Genuine Mathushek and others too numerous to mention.

LUBBER LAST

By Grace H. Boutelle

EVER since they had come to Perkinsville De Peyster and his mother had failed to adjust their respective standpoints to a mutual harmony.

To begin with, it was spring. With the delicious odor of resinous smoke from the boughs that had banked the house assailing one's nostrils, who could resist joining the dancing silhouettes that circled the bonfire and daring one's fate by leaping across it in swaggering competition as the flames died down?

But she drew lurid pictures of his certain fate if he should repeat the offense. Blind defiance rose insurgent within him. He would go. And then all of a sudden he remembered what his father said and hung his head to think how those grave, kind eyes of his would look at him now.

"Take good care of mamma," he had said at the last. "You must be her big brother and never let her worry about you, she's so little and delicate." And then he had whispered over two or three times, "My pretty little wife, my dear little girl!"

And De Peyster had tried with all his might to remember. But often it did seem as if it would have been a little easier if she could have understood that one was disgraced if one did not keep neck and neck with "the other fellows" in every prank they played.

There was a long and weary period of dooryard discipline after this episode. There were a good many times when De Peyster had to clinch his fists as tight as he could and remember his father very hard.

By and by June came, quivering with gold green sunlight, perfumed with a universal blossoming and pungent with the joy of living. At this time every true joy thrills with the half realized rapture of it all and finds the fullest expression of his ecstasy in going swimming.

Every bright morning in some part of the town there was sure to be a group of boys toeing a line, their necks bobbing eagerly forward and their bodies giving anticipatory jerks and twitches as they waited for the word. When the leader said "Go!" they darted forth, and there was a kaleidoscopic and dissolving view of legs racing madly down a side street that led to the river. Then collars came off, coats followed, as they ran with undiminished speed, the fellow who was farthest ahead sometimes slowing up with magnificent daring to get off his shoes and stockings while the others were still hampered by shirts and trousers, and by the time they tumbled in headlong competition over the bank the nimblest carried their entire wardrobe on their arms and flashed whitely into the water while the laggers fumbled at their shoe lacings. The unfortunate who popped into the river, flushed and panting, after all the rest were in was greeted with taunting cries of: "Lubber last! Lubber last!"

De Peyster had never been told not to go in swimming. It had not occurred to his mother as among the list of his possible perils, as she was in blissful ignorance of the fact that "the other fellows" did it.

So it was with the thrilling exultance of the Greek runner that he set his toe on the line with the rest and hurled himself forward, head up and elbows in.

The first few rods it felt like flying. His feet scarcely seemed to touch the ground. Then a pair of legs flashed by him, and another and another. He gathered his strength and shot forward again, but another pair of legs went by, and another and another.

They were tearing off their coats; they were stripping off their shirts. He felt at his collar, wrenched it off and flung it away, to have both hands free for his coat and shirt. They were almost at the bank now. He could see Micky Daly's white skin dazzle in the sun as he took a splendid dive ahead of the rest. His own feet were growing heavy, and there was a mist before his eyes. The knot in his shoe lacing would not come untied. A savage rage filled him. If he could have cut off his foot to rid himself of the hampering shoe, he would scarcely have hesitated. You were ruled out if you went into the water with anything left on. As he struggled and perspired and agonized the two or three whom he had distanced leaped past him, and as he shook the shoe off at last and made a dive he heard the air ringing with "Lubber last! Lubber last!" and slowly realized that it was meant for him.

He tried manfully two or three other days, but it was always the same way. His muscles were flabby from the dooryard discipline, and he could not pick up in a few weeks what the others had acquired through joyous years of summer vagabondage.

He took it quietly and good naturedly, but it went deep.

His mother found out the custom shortly and forbade him to go near the water.

As for De Peyster himself, the numbness of despair settled upon him. Now he could never learn to redeem himself, to have some day perhaps the ineffable joy of being the first in, ahead of Jimmy Spratt, ahead of Micky Daly, ahead of everybody. His career was ended before it had begun.

"But I got to not let her worry," was the rueful conclusion he always reached. And then he breathed hard and winked fast.

Jimmy was his constant friend and brought him alleviating messages from time to time, such as that "the other fellers all say he has lots of sand and kin do as well as the next feller if he has half a chance."

When even these encouraging remarks ceased to comfort, he gave him his own horned toad as a last desperate resort. The effect was wonderfully efficacious, but transitory.

"I'd oughter been a girl," said De Peyster many times to himself, "but I wish she didn't want to make believe I am one when I ain't."

This was the nearest to a reproach that he allowed his loyal little heart to entertain, but a baffled, unchildlike look grew in his eyes as he watched his mates go off without him day after day.

In July a light epidemic of scarlet fever prevailed. The oldest inhabitants called it "walking scarlatina," the illness was so slight.

Mrs. Van Voort kept De Peyster in the house.

One day De Peyster caught it.

He regarded it rather in the nature of a festal occurrence than otherwise, for all the boys who had had it came up to see him, and, although they were not allowed to stand long, it cheered him amazingly to hear what they were doing, for he had constantly the hope that these new delights they told of one after another would not be on the forbidden list when he was out again.

But after awhile he did not seem to care whether they came or not and one day when told that Micky Daly waited below said languidly: "I guess I don't care about seeing him just now. I'm sorter tired, but tell him it'll be bully to have him come tomorrow."

But when tomorrow came no one was admitted, for he was tossing about in a weakening struggle with something he did not understand that those who watched by him realized only too well.

He heard a voice as if from very far away.

"You'd better tell him, doctor," it said. "I can't stand it to see him fight for his life like a little Trojan when it isn't any use."

The voice broke and then went on: "He's a brave little chap, brave enough to face anything, and it isn't treating him square not to let him say goodby."

De Peyster opened his eyes. The doctor was standing over him.

"You don't have to tell me," said De Peyster, for he dimly saw that the old doctor's lips were quivering. "I—I guess—I know."

He felt for his mother's hand.

"I'd like to hear you sing just once first, mamsie," he said.

"There's a bully song one of the fellers taught me, 'One Wide River.' I've liked it specially much since—since it worried you to have me go in swimming."

His mother sobbed out a few lines, faltered and stopped.

A look of patient disappointment came over his face.

"Never mind, mamsie; you needn't," he gasped. "I'm going to see it, you know, so it don't matter. Won't the cool water feel good, though! And don't you worry, mamsie. Who's afraid? Father 'll find me!"

He lay quite still a moment; then he whispered:

"I would 'a' liked to try one more run with the fellers—Micky Daly was most always ahead. He's a peach sprinter. You tell him and Jimmy and the other fellers about—about me and the wide river. Tell 'em this time I—I ain't lubber last!"

And he slipped away to find that unknown river, the bravest of little pioneers.

Trouble In the Royal Palace.

The Shakespeare club of New Orleans used to give amateur theatrical performances that were distinguished for the local prominence of the actors. Once a social celebrity, with a gorgeous costume, as one of the lords in waiting had only four words to say, "The queen has swooned." As he stepped forward his friends applauded vociferously. Bowing his thanks, he faced the king and said in a very high pitched voice, "The swoon has queened."

There was a roar of laughter, but he waited patiently and made another attempt:

"The sween has cooned."

Again the walls trembled, and the stage manager said in a voice which could be heard all over the house, "Come off, you doggoned fool!"

But the ambitious amateur refused to surrender, and in a rasping falsetto as he was assisted from the stage he screamed, "The coon has sweened!"—Success Magazine.

A Wasted Exertion.

"You must excuse me for leaving you so abruptly the other day when I suddenly crossed the street."

"What was the trouble?"

"I thought I saw my wife coming, but it was only a creditor."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Don't Wrestle With Furnace Clinkers

Clinkers just naturally pass right through the grate of the Boynton.

If they hesitate, the cutting bar smashes them. There is no chance of clogging. The intense and uniform heat of the reduces nearly everything to the finest ash. That's because a square pot develops more heat per unit of fuel than any other kind. That's economy.

The Boynton has some other exceptional features too—the fresh air supply—the dust flue—the square ash pit. Any BOYNTON dealer will be glad to explain how these points reduce the care and cost of up-keep.

There are BOYNTON heating plants of all kinds. Ask about our Round or Sectional Boilers for Steam or Hot Water. Also Ranges.

Puzzle pictures for "grown-ups" as well as children are a source of great pleasure, and nearly everywhere you will find someone at this fascinating pastime in their spare moments. But now we have a puzzle picture contest with more than the mere fun of putting it together, a grand free distribution of over $8,300 worth of prizes, all absolutely free.

Cut out the little pieces and paste them together and you will have two of America's greatest generals. The neatest correct answer will be given the $300 piano absolutely free. The next neatest will be given prize certificates as stated below.

There is no catch. Everyone has an equal opportunity. We are making this extraordinary offer direct to piano buyers instead of spending the $8,300 in magazine advertising, as by this method we will introduce our pianos and fair prices to a great many possible buyers.

We want everyone interested in pianos to enter, as we want the piano and prize certificates to go where they will be appreciated. Be sure and enter. There is no excuse for your not striving for one of these prizes. Send your answer in early.

THE PRIZES—First prize—A fine new piano valued at $300. Second prize—A certificate of credit for $125. The next six best answers will be given a credit certificate for $90. Following these in groups of six or more, each contestant sending in the next best answer will be given a credit certificate for $1 less than those previous—that is, six at $89, next six at $88, etc.—until the amount has been awarded.

Special Advertising appropriation. In addition to the above prizes the Company will voluntarily issue to each of the remaining contestants a special certificate of credit, of not less than $25, as an award for their effort in this contest.

These certificates are good on the purchase of any New Hallet & Davis, Conway or Kimball piano or player piano in our warerooms at regular retail price. Time of certificate is limited. Certificates cannot be applied on any purchase made previous to Oct. 7, 1909. Only one certificate may be applied on the purchase of one piano.

THE JUDGING—Disinterested judges will be chosen who will select the winner, and the decision of the judges will be final. All prize winners will be notified. Judges' names will be announced.

SIMPLE DIRECTIONS—Cut out the pieces and paste together, thus making the two well known American generals. Write the names of the general under each picture. Free to anyone except employes of the Company. Only one answer allowed from one family. Send in coupon or exact written copy with your answer, as no answer will be accepted unless this is done. The neatest correct answer will be awarded first prize, others in accordance to their worth.

In case the judges find two or more answers of equal merit, duplicates of the prize offered will be given to each. All answers must be in before 12 P. M., Oct. 7, 1909. Copies of this advertisement will be furnished free on application at this office.

HEAD to FOOT SALE

OUTFITTINGS OF THE BEST SORT UNDERPRICE

The ability of great stores such as ours to equip one from head to foot—to supply everything that any one needs to wear—to present ample variety in everything, making it unnecessary to go from shop to shop—is one of the factors that have made the department store such a permanent success. And this store, with its vast resources, its great stocks, its splendid appointments, has, more than any other New Jersey establishment, measured up to the task of supplying the communities' every need, and has really rivaled the biggest and best of the metropolitan establishments.

Tomorrow's "Head to Foot Sale" will bring surprisingly good bargains in wearables of many sorts.

The Wonder of the Millinery World

Our Trimmed Hats at 4.75

No store in New Jersey sells so many hats as this one—none has the producing power—none the buying power—and that is why we are able to produce the most original, the most beautiful, the best made hats that are sold at popular prices.

We specialize several low-priced lines, the most prominent of which, because of the very low price, being the line we sell at $4.75.

Many of these hats are copies of much more expensive ones; many others are original creations with our designers; all are trimmed most attractively with wings, feathers, flowers, ribbons, velvets and ornaments; all are full of character; hardly any two arealike; the colorings are widely varied and in most cases fully equal hats selling in exclusive millinery stores at $8 and $10. Yet you can choose from hundreds here—hats for dress or everyday wear, at only..... $4.75

15.00 Trimmed Hats at 9.75

This is another of our special lines and includes hats of somewhat finer quality than those in the $4.75 line. The trimming is more elaborate, styles still more distinctive, and more imported trimmings are employed. There is a wide variety of models and color combinations to choose from. They are hats equaling many sold at as much as $15.00 in the average millinery store; yet you can choose from these at only..... $9.75

Finer Hats specialized at $12.50, and from that we go on to the higher priced and more exclusive productions—most elegant imported models, running to as high as $75.00.

Satin Bengaline Hats in a variety of the newest shapes and most fashionable colors, intended to sell at $1.45; Thursday only 95c.

$3.75 Ostrich Plumes $2.95—Beauties, fine French feathers in the most fashionable colors and black and white; rare bargains at the price.

$2.50 Untrimmed Hats $1.95—Scratch Beaver Hats; newest shapes; all desirable colors; should go like hot cakes at this Thursday price.

Perfection in Tailoring Apparent in Our Apparel

It stands to reason that a store selling so muchin the way of Women's and Misses' Apparel must confine itself to only high-class tailoring and dressmaking establishments to be sure that the models we offer you are strictly fashionable and that the cloths are worthy, and that every detail of the tailoring, the stitching, the interlining, and the lining and finishing be as near perfection as possible.

Ordinarily to secure all this goodness it is necessary to pay extravagant prices, but with the advantage of buying for several great stores we have powers far beyond the ordinary house—that brings the prices down so that, even tho we sell you the highest-class products we are able to do so at minimum cost to our patrons.

Here are three examples of suit selling that prove our point:

A 9 to 1 o'Clock Special

Fine Broadcloth Dresses for Women and Misses, strictly tailored, in black, navy, smoke, raisin, olive and tan, with the full high-plaited skirts; finished with 3½ inch tailor band—co-ed effect; lapped stitched seams; side fastened with twelve large jet buttons; high tailored collar; all sizes; dresses that should sell at $15, to be offered tomorrow, 9 to 1 o'clock only, at the extraordinary price of.... $7.45

No mail, 'phone or C. O. D. orders.

These On Sale All Day

Handsomely Tailored Suits of Broadcloth and Chevron; coats in fashionable 45-in. length, panel back, slashed sides, lined with satin; new novelty plaited skirt; perfect fitting; all the fashionable shades to choose from; intended to sell at $45; featured at $26.75

GOVERNOR FORT STICKS TO DIRECT PRIMARY

Trenton, Oct. 6.—Governor Fort yesterday declared that the direct primary law was all right and had operated perfectly at the primary election last week. He believes the only amendment to the law that should be considered by the next Legislature is one extending the provisions to nomination of party candidates for Governor and Congressmen.

"In the light of your experience and your observations as to the working of the primary system last Tuesday, do you favor any modification of the law as it now exists?" he was asked.

"I think the primary law worked successfully in every way. I am in favor of its retention in its present form. It was shown wherever there was a contest that voters took a large interest in determining the results. In Essex county 85 per cent. of the party vote was cast. In Hudson county it was the same. I am opposed to any modification."

"Do you favor an extension of the direct primary ssytem to include the nomination for the candidates for governor and members of Congress?"

"I recommended in my last message that such an extension be made and I have not changed my opinion. I do not know what the Legislature will do in respect to the matter."

The Governor said that he believed every candidate for a legislative office should declare where he stands on important issues.

"Any man who refuses to tell where he stands when he is a candidate for a legislative office is unfit to fill that office," he said.

The Governor characterized as absurd the talk that associates his name with future office-seeking. He said that he was not a candidate for any office. "Those people who mention me as aspiring for further political honors do so simply to embarrass me in my work as Governor," he said.

ITALIAN SHOOTS RIVALS IN ELIZABETH STREET

Jealousy over a young woman, said to be of unusual beauty, is responsible for the shooting of two men by David De Rosa, a young Italian, shortly after 6 o'clock last evening. The wounded men were shot in the arms and will recover. They are Vincenzio Dallo, of 320 John street, and Piasso Pasyande, of 574 Third avenue. De Rosa submitted to arrest quietly.

The shooting took place on Seventh street, between Fulton and Fraklin, Elizabeth, De Rosa keeping up a running fire while his victims fled. Four of the five chambers in his .32 calibre revolver were empty. One of the bullets, which lodged in Pasyanda's arm, still remains there and will be extracted in the morning by the surgeons at the Elizabeth General Hospital. Dallo left the Alexian Brothers Hospital, where he went after the shooting, after his wound was dressed.

The identity of the woman said to be involved has not been revealed. The three men are employed in a factory only a few blocks from the scene of the affray. The young woman is also employed there. De Rosa warned the others to keep away from her, but they refused, and when he met them last night after leaving the factory, he opened fire on them. A crowd gathered, and among them was the woman, who ran to De Rosa and tried to take the revolver from him. He pushed her aside and continued to shoot.

Policeman John Hankins reached the spot soon after the shooting and arrested the man. De Rosa went with Hankins to the Second Precinct station.

NEW JERSEY THIRD IN B. & L. STATES.

Trenton, Oct. 6.—That New Jersey stands third in building and loan associations in the States of the nation was developed here yesterday at the meeting of the New Jersey League of Building and Loan Associations. Reports show that the associations of the State have 170,000 members, $80,000,000 in gross assets and paid up stock subscriptions of more than $60,000,000. There are now 523 associations in the State, 37 being incorporated last year.

Governor Fort and the State commissioner of banking and insurance, Mr. Lewis, were among those expected to make addresses at the convention, but neither could attend because of other business.

At Proctor's.

Proctor's vaudeville bill this week is of the highest order and attracted a capacity audience last night. Eddie Noyer and his dancing girls; Tom Fletcher, colored comdian, together with an unusually clever gymnastic and comedy teams makes up a bill well worth seeing. Every number was received with enthusiastic applause, last night, while the films d'art still continue to be one of the chief features of the new bill every day.

Meanwhile, outside on the veranda, Frances Durant and Lieutenant Sommers stood side by side in the darkness saying goodby. Back of them, shut off with the heavy hall doors, was the lighted house. In front, far below, showed the bright windows of the steel works, where the night shift toiled. Now and again, at irregular intervals, the sky was lighted with a sudden glare of the huge chimneys that blazed up and then died abruptly, leaving the night blacker than before. For a time they stood looking out at the distant lights and the silence. At last it was the girl who spoke.

"She's in love with him. I tell you she's in love with him."

"And tomorrow night you will be down there toiling, watching, waiting, as they forge the gun which is to make your fame," she said softly.

"And you?" he asked, just as low.

In the darkness she looked up at him.

"And I," she said—"I shall be up here just where I am now, watching the lights and thinking and praying that all will be well."

Again they stood in silence for a time.

Then the man sighed.

"I am afraid to come back again," he began unsteadily. "I think I had better say goodby to you tonight."

She moved slightly closer.

"Afraid?" It was a taunt tremulously given.

"Yes," he blurted. "I am afraid, and you know why."

She did not answer, and he rushed on, speaking low, eagerly, yet bitterly.

"You know I can't tell you what I wish to say. I haven't really the right. I am a penniless naval officer and you the daughter of the biggest steel man in the country. I haven't the right."

"What is it you wish to say?" she asked insistently. She was so close their hands touched as he turned toward her. And, touching, the hands clung together.

"You know what I wish to say," he exclaimed. "If I had the right I'd tell you how much I love you. I'd tell you how from the first moment I saw you I wanted you, and you only. I'd tell you how I never have lived until I knew you and the rest of my life must be one dreary blank of grinding duty because I must lose you. I'd tell you that life with you would be more happiness than any man has the right to have. I'd tell you that I'd rather have one year of you than a million years on earth and all the honors that men could give me. I'd tell you"—he broke off bitterly for a second, then repeated—"I'd tell you enough to make you realize what an absolutely dreaming, idiotic fool I am, but I'd tell you enough to make you know how I suffer because I haven't the right to really tell you anything."

In the darkness the girl laughed a low laugh of pure delight.

"You are an absolute, idiotic, dreaming fool," she said, so softly, so tenderly, that he could not but understand.

"Frances!"

He barely breathed her name. Then all reply was cut off, for she was in his arms with her own arms about his neck and their lips were tight together.

It was nearly half an hour later when Frances Durant, her cheeks flushed, her eyes misty with happiness, opened the big front door and stepped back into the lighted hall.

So much had happened in that short time. She had gone out an anxious, worried girl. She re-entered a glowing woman, loved and loving, sure of herself and happily confident of the future. They were not engaged. No, indeed! They had solemnly assured each other of that fact. It would not do at all for the penniless naval officer to formally ask the hand of the steel king's daughter! But when his gun had been a great success and fame had come to him then he was to come and make his formal plea and ask her father for her hand. And she would be waiting eagerly for her lover, ready with her answer and prepared, no matter what happened, to follow him to the ends of the earth.

"Oh, he's gone, has he?" he said contemptuously.

The girl was too happy to mind the tone.

"You mean Mr. Sommers?" she said, affecting to misunderstand. "Yes; he's gone."

"Of course I mean that naval whippersnapper. Who do you suppose I meant?" he replied sharply. "You ought to have more sense, Frances, than to stand out on that cold porch. You're likely to catch pneumonia or anything."

The girl smiled slightly.

"Oh, I wasn't cold," she said.

"I've been waiting to speak to you," began Pinckney again. "It's about something important."

Frances was in no mood for long, dull conversation. She wanted to get away by herself to think over the last half hour, to feel again the thrill of his touch, to hear again in her imagination the sound of his voice. So she spoke somewhat impatiently.

"Won't tomorrow do, Edward?"

He shook his head with decision.

"No; tomorrow won't do, Frances. I want to talk to you tonight about something in which I am interested and in which your mother and father are interested also—something which we all wish to bring about."

The girl yawned. She did not have the least idea what he was going to say.

"Oh, very well, Edward, if it's anything you wish and mother and father wish, too, just consider that I have agreed and let it go at that. Don't worry me."

He stepped toward her suddenly and before she realized it had put his arm about her.

"Then we may announce the engagement at once," he said masterfully.

The girl recoiled, then tore herself from his arms.

"No," she said sharply, "you will not announce any engagement of mine if you mean yourself as the man."

His face darkened.

"You mean you don't care for me?" he demanded.

She looked at him with a smile.

"Of course I care for you, Edward; we've been brought up together. I've looked on you as a sort of big brother, but I don't care for you the least bit in the way you mean, and I never will."

"You mean you won't marry me?" he demanded angrily.

"Of course I won't marry you when I don't care for you," she retorted, beginning to lose her temper in turn. "Are you out of your senses? I've never had any idea of marrying you, Edward. I will never have such an idea."

Pinckney saw all his dreams begin to tumble. It made him angry, desperate.

"You will marry me!" he exclaimed, stepping toward her. "I tell you you will marry me! What do you think I am—a fool? Do you suppose I'm an idiotic, dreaming fool?"

The repetition of that phrase which she had heard so recently roused the girl to fierce anger.

"Yes," she cried, "you are a dreaming, idiotic fool if you think I'm going to marry you or anybody else I don't love, whether you wish it or mother and father wish it or the whole world wishes it. Understand that once and for all. Good night." And, turning, she started for the door.

Pinckney's face was convulsed with rage. His hands were twitching. He could hardly control himself.

"Then you're going to marry this dirty adventurer, Sommers, are you?" he almost shouted.

The girl stopped short and whirled about, facing him. Her cheeks were bright, her eyes blazing with anger.

"I'm going to marry the man I love, Edward Pinckney!" she exclaimed in a voice of controlled anger. "And that man will never be you. That's all you need know. He will never be you. Good night."

"You mean you won't marry me?" he demanded angrily.

CHAPTER VII.

THE FORGING OF THE BIG GUN.

SMITH, the foreman in charge of the Sommers gun, was raging drunk.

He lurched up and down in front of the furnaces, cursing the men, driving them here and there, making all manner of confusion, apparently without reason. O'Leary, his assistant, had done his best to quiet the half crazed foreman. O'Leary and every man on the job knew that the Sommers gun was in grave danger of being ruined. It had been scheduled to go into the furnace at 2 o'clock, but Smith shortly after noon had lurched in, called his men together and shoved the gun into the furnace three hours ahead of time. Now it was nearly midnight, and unless the gun came out shortly every man knew that it would be completely ruined. It must come out, be brought to the proper temperature and then thrust into the tempering bath—a thousand gallons of oil.

The last time Smith had been in charge of the job he had put a gun into the bath at too high a temperature and it had burst at the proving ground. Smith on that occasion had been laid off and had not been brought back to work until the casting of the Sommers gun. Then Pinckney had sent for him and, after a long talk in his private office, had placed the disgraced foreman in complete charge of this new and very important piece of work.

At the casting of the Rhinestrom gun Pinckney himself had taken complete charge, staying in the furnace room until all the work was finished, and the marked difference in the handling of the two jobs had not escaped some of the shrewder workmen.

"Looks like they don't care a hang whether this one goes or not," O'Leary, the assistant foreman, had complained. "It's plain foolishness, putting Smith on the job. It'll just get him in trouble and won't do any good. That gun's bound to be a failure if we ain't careful."

The men had taken O'Leary's view of the matter and were doing all they could to make this job a success. Sommers during his stay about the works had become tremendously popular. They wanted to do their best for him; also O'Leary expected in the fall to marry Lucy Smith, the foreman's daughter, and therefore he had an interest in putting the job through right.

Sommers was to come down about 1:30 in the morning, when the gun was expected to go into the tempering bath. That was the important work, and he was determined to superintend it. However, with Smith putting the gun in three hours ahead of time there seemed every chance that unless Sommers should be warned of the change the gun would be in the bath and everything of importance over before the navy man should arrive.

In vain O'Leary pleaded with Smith to do something about the gun.

"It's been in too long already, Smith," he urged. "Do you want to ruin this job? Who'll take care of you when you ruin another gun? You'll be down and out for good."

The foreman, swaying from side to side, looked at his assistant with a drunken leer.

"Who'll take care of me?" he sneered. "Don't you worry about who'll take care of me. I'm the best man about these works drunk or sober, and don't you forget it."

O'Leary could not be put off.

"Then if you're the best man show it!" he shouted. "Show it by tending to business! That gun 'll be ruined in no time!"

Smith, broad, brutal, savage from drink, aimed a blow at his assistant.

"You will interfere!" he shouted. "You think you're a better man than I am! I'll show you! I'll let you know who's the boss of this here job!"

O'Leary dodged the blow and jumped out of the way as the foreman rushed. Again the foreman came at him, but the assistant grabbed an iron bar and stood ready.

"You take another step and I'll brain you!" he yelled above the roar and the clang of the toiling hammers. "You're drunk, and we're saving your job for you. Now you tend to it or I'll smash your head clean in."

Smith stopped, grumbling. He knew O'Leary was the strongest, coolest young fellow about the works. A fight with him sober would have been serious, and drunk the foreman knew he would not stand a chance. He stepped back.

"I'm tending to my job, O'Leary," he complained, half maudlin. "There ain't no call for you acting that way. You're trying to get my job, that's what. I'm doing right—just what I was told. Now, you let me alone."

"Sure, O'Leary, let him alone," urged the other men. "He'll come round, and we'll get the gun out on time."

Before more could be said an office boy appeared, coming from the front office.

"They want you in the office, O'Leary. Hustle up," he said; "it's important."

Out in the office Lucy Smith was explaining vigorously to the stenographer, Mazie O'Brien, that Smith, in charge of the Sommers gun, was drunk on the job, and his wife, fearing something might happen, had sent the girl over to beg O'Leary to take care of him.

"Sure, Lucy, that's all right. Of course O'Leary will do it for you," the good natured stenographer encouraged. "I'll just get out and give you a chance at him when he comes. When are you going to get married, anyhow?"

Lucy blushed and hesitated.

"I don't know exactly," she said. "We haven't talked much about it."

Mazie O'Brien smiled.

"Well, it's about time you're getting busy with that line of conversation, I think. Don't do to trust any of these steel hands. Two weeks is long enough for any girl to be engaged. I'll get out now and leave you alone," she ended as O'Leary, astonishment and worry showing on his begrimed face, entered the office.

"What's the matter, Lucy?" he asked anxiously.

The girl turned to him with eagerness.

"It's about father. Is he very bad?"

The man hesitated.

"Well, he's got a few drinks in," he confessed at last. "But there hasn't been much trouble up to date."

"He's pretty ugly, ain't he?" asked the girl.

O'Leary laughed grimly.

"You know what your dad is when he's drunk, Lucy. He's tried to pick one or two scraps tonight, but the men are keeping away from him. I'll do my best to keep down trouble, you know that, Lucy."

The girl nodded.

"Yes, I know, Joe, you're mighty good," she said, "but if anything happens tonight you know he'll lose his job sure. I'm awful afraid, and mother's worse than I am, so I just came over to get you to look out for him. Is he doing his work all right?"

O'Leary shook his head regretfully.

"That's what bothers me," he confessed. "The Sommers gun 's been in the fire too long now. If it don't come out of the furnace soon the gun 'll be no good at all."

The girl made a hopeless gesture.

"What do you think of that!" she complained. "And he's the best man over here when he's sober. Can't you do anything, Joe?"

"I am doing all I can," he urged, as though in justification, "but if that gun 's put in the oil bath after being too long in the fire the tempering will be bad."

Lucy wrung her hands despairingly.

"Let's get Mr. Marsh," she begged. "Mr. Pinckney ain't here, but Mr. Marsh can take dad off the job and keep him from ruining everything. Sommers is such a nice man, too, and Miss Frances likes him. Oh, what are we going to do, Joe?"

O'Leary looked at her blankly. The situation was too much for him to manage.

"Marsh's acting funny, too," he complained. "He must know how Smith is, but he keeps away and don't say nothing to him. Guess he's afraid."

"Maybe I could go in and beg him. Couldn't I do that, Joe?" pleaded the girl.

She turned and started for the door which led into the works, but before she could reach it the door was pushed open and Smith, drunker and more enraged than ever, lurched into the office. At sight of Lucy and O'Leary together he straightened up, caught hold of the door a moment for support, then burst on them with a torrent of anger.

"What are you doing here?" he roared. "Why did you come in this office, Lucy? What business you got here, O'Leary? Ain't I seeing you hanging around my house enough without getting that girl in the office?"

"I—I've got your dinner, father. I brought it over to you," faltered Lucy.

"And why didn't you bring it to me right?" he shouted. "And why do you let this fellow in the office here be talking to you?"

"Joe's all right, father," the girl urged. "He don't want you to make no mistake with the Sommers gun, that's all."

The drunken foreman turned on his assistant with fury.

"Oh, you don't, don't you? Look here, you keep that mug of yours out of my affairs or I'll break it. Do you hear?"

But Joe O'Leary did not come of the race that could be bluffed. As Smith lurched toward him the assistant straightened into a position of defense, waiting for him.

"Don't waste your breath trying to scare me, Smith," he shouted. "You'd better be getting that gun out of the fire before it spoils."

The sudden opposition sobered the drunken man for a moment.

"I got a fine assistant, ain't I?" he sneered. "Trying to tell me my business. I know what you're up to. You sneaked in here to talk to her; that's what you did. Now, you keep away from her after this, I tell you. Don't you come near her or I'll break you in two."

O'Leary looked the larger man up and down with the Irish scorn.

"Break me in two!" he sneered. "If you was to break me in two either piece of me would get up and knock your block off. I tell you, if you ever lay a hand on me I'll kill you."

In a wild fury Smith rushed unsteadily. O'Leary landed once, staggering the big man, and then Lucy rushed in between them.

"Father! Joe! Don't!" she begged. "You'll both be discharged."

The jarring, staggering blow had knocked a little of the fight out of the bully. He still had sense enough to know that in an even battle his young, strong assistant would have a good chance, and, like most bullies, he didn't care for even battles. The plea of Lucy gave him a chance to change the direction of his anger.

"Discharged!" he yelled. "Who'll discharge me? I can clean out the whole works, and I"—

He was lurching about the office, swinging his arms wildly in time to his drunken threats, when the street door opened and Pinckney came in hastily. In a moment the manager saw that something was wrong.

"What's the meaning of this?" he demanded sharply, stepping forward.

Again the current of Smith's rage had found an object to dash against. All sense of discipline and fear of consequences was gone from him. Then, besides, down in his heart he knew that Pinckney needed him and would scarcely dare to discharge him at this time. Instead of replying he heaved himself over until he stood face to face with the general manager.

"Do you think I'm afraid of you?" he demanded drunkenly.

Pinckney paid no attention to him, but turned and pressed the bell. When he spoke it was to the assistant.

"What are you doing here, O'Leary?"

"Nothing, sir."

"Then get to work," ordered Pinckney sharply.

O'Leary hesitated.

"I can't leave Lucy with him," he said, jerking his head toward Smith.

Pinckney nodded.

"I understand, but that's all right. You go back to work. I'll look after her."

SOME TASTY SALADS

APPROPRIATE AND EASILY ATTAINABLE DISHES.

Lovers of Good Things for the Table May Find Here a Few New Ideas —Method of Preparing Stuffed Tomatoes.

Surprise Salad.—Mix in about any vegetables you have left over—boiled potatoes, canned peas or beans, corn (if there is no no milk with it), celery, even apples or walnuts. after all is well mixed pour the following dressing on, which must be hot, and stir until all has come in contact with the dressing, which must be cold, before serving on lettuce leaves: Dressing—Half cupful vinegar, one tablespoonful sugar, one teaspoonful celery salt, one level teaspoonful flour, half teaspoonful dry mustard, one egg, salt and pepper.

Stuffed Tomatoes.—Cut the tops from large, firm tomatoes and with a small spoon scoop out the insides. To half of this pulp chopped add as much minced boiled ham and two tablespoonfuls of bread crumbs; season to taste and fill the tomatoes with this mixture. Set in a baking pan and bake for 20 minutes.

Cucumber Salad.—Six cold boiled potatoes cut in small pieces, two large cucumbers, one large onion. Slice cucumbers and onion thin and let lay in salt water 20 minutes. Dressing—One-half cupful of malt vinegar, one-half cupful water, two tablespoonfuls of sugar, one egg, one tacupful cream, sour or sweet. Boil about five minutes.

Salmon Salad.—Equal parts flaked salmon and chopped celery. Wash prepared cocoanut to extract sugar and add same in layers. Serve in green pepper shells with mayonaise dressing.

Irish Salad.—Chop together five crisp celery sticks, two bananas, and two apples. Do not chop fine. For dressing use juice of two lemons and thicken with one cupful of powdered sugar. Mash one banana in this. Serve on lettuce leaves. For four persons.

Baking Day Aprons.

Baking day should have an air of distinction about it. Of course it is not an easy day, but there are many housekeepers who have learned to finish the day with cheerful hearts and spotless clothing, and the baking day apron has helped them to learn it. This apron is made of rather thin white goods and covers nearly the entire dress. Suspended by straps from the belt on either side are two white cloths to be used as holders when handling the hot baking dishes. —Housekeeper.

New Sofa Pillow.

An artistic looking sofa pillow that could be copied at home was of dull blue velours bordered with craftsman's canvas in the same shade. The two were connected by an inch wide gold galloon set on in a loop as you go design, three loops in a group, like a leaf of clover, and the material cut away as found necessary.

To make it, a square of the canvas should be provided. This will be overlaid with a smaller square of velours, apply braids and rest loops on velours.

Economical Crackers.

A woman who makes home-made crackers of various kinds to sell, uses chicken fat as a substitute for butter to reduce expenses. She buys the fat in quantities at the large markets (the only place where it is sold in separate form). When rendered, strained, etc., it has none of the strong taste of other animal fats, takes the place of butter, and cannot be detected as a substitute.

Scour the Irons.

One point in which the novice in ironing often fails lies in not having the irons perfectly clean before beginning work. To do really good work, begin by scouring the irons thoroughly with soap and water; then dry thoroughly with a soft rag. They must not be dried on the fire, as this creates an immediate rust, which works off on the clothes.

Coffee Ambrosia.

Prepare three quarts of strong clear coffee, add while boiling hot three cups of hot milk and two cups of sugar. When cool put in ice chest, flavor with small wineglass of brandy, few drops of almond extract. When very cold turn into high crystal tankard—half full of shaved ice—serve in tall thin glasses, add two tablespoons of vanilla ice cream and garnish with whipped cream.

Dominican Pudding.

Dominican pudding is made of French pancakes filled with jelly or jam and rolled. Place endwise in a mold. Prepare a light custard, and chopped fruit and chopped pancake trimmings. Pour this in mold between pancakes and steam till set. Turn out of mold and surround with chocolate sauce.

Egg Nog.

Separate the yolk and white of one large, fresh egg, beating the yolk with a tablespoonful sugar until light and creamy. Pour over this a half cupful of milk, then the white of the egg, whipped to a stiff froth. Lastly stir in a few grains of salt and nutmeg to flavor and serve in a spotless glass set on a small plate or saucer.

PLAYING CARDS IN HISTORY.

Origin May Almost Be Said to Be Lost in Antiquity, Although Something Is Known.

Playing cards probably date back to an early period in China. They are said to have been invented in the reign of Seunho, about 1120, although some authorities maintain that they were known even at an earlier date in Hindustan. Originally the Chinese playing cards contained only 30 in the pack.

The game of cards was known as early as the thirteenth century both in England and France as "Four Kings"—which, by the way, would be considered a fairly good poker hand in these days.

Some of the writers on antiquities contend that the game of cards was known among the ancient Egyptians, and that the merry old kings and queens played something like "Old Sledge" to while away the weary hours and make a dollar now and then.

It is recorded that in the year 1778 a French soldier was caught playing some sort of a game of solitaire with a deck of cards in a church. He was haled before the mayor of the town, and thus excused himself for his little lapse from the ritual:

"The ace reminds us that there is but one God; the deuce signifies the Father and Son; the tray, the Father, Son and Holy Ghost; the four represents the Four Evangelists; the five, the Five Wise Virgins; the six says that in six days the Lord made the heavens and the earth; the seven tells that on the seventh day the Lord rested from his work; the eight signifies that eight righteous persons were saved when the Lord drowned the earth; the nine, that nine lepers were cleansed by the Saviour; the ten means the Ten Commandments."

"When I see the queen," continued the prisoner, "it puts me in mind of the queen of Sheba; and the king is the king of heaven and earth."

"And what of the knave?" queried the mayor.

"Ah, the knave is the sergeant who brought me here," quoth the soldier.

"I don't know that he is the greatest knave," replied the mayor, "but surely he is the greatest fool."

Whereat the soldier returned to finish his game of solitaire.

It is true that the number of spots on a deck of cards is 364; it is true also that there are 52 cards in the deck—where they don't play with the joker—coinciding with the number of weeks in the year, and that there are other strange similarities between the deck and the calendar. But there is nothing in all the archives to show that these things are more than mere coincidences.

Japanese Substitute for Cow's Milk.

The Japanese have discovered a very cheap and good substitute for the milch cow in the form of a tiny bean. The juice extracted by a special process from the bean is said to be an excellent vegetable milk, the properties of which render it highly suitable for use in tropical countries.

The preparation is obtained from the Soja bean, a member of the leguminous family of plants, and a very popular article of food among the poorer classes of Chinese and Japanese. In making the vegetable milk the beans are first of all softened by soaking and are then pressed and boiled in water. The resultant liquid is exactly similar to cow's milk in appearance, but is entirely different in its composition. This Soja bean milk contains 92.5 per cent. water, 3.02 per cent. protein, 2.13 per cent. fat, 0.03 per cent. fiber, 1.88 per cent. non-nitrogenous substances and 0.41 per cent. ash. Some sugar and a little phasphate of potassium are added in order to prevent the elimination of the albumen, and then the mixture is boiled down till a substance like condensed milk is obtained. This "condensed vegetable milk" is of a yellowish color and has a very pleasant taste, hardly to be distinguished from that of real cow's milk.

The Gospel of Getting.

Get your desires and get them quick. Get money, which, as things are, is the root of all good. Get exclusive houses and gardens. Get motor cars. Get old oak, and brag about it. Get invitations. Get all you can of all that is good and correct—so you remember early—so you remember enough—the words which contain the pleading of all fathers and the passion of all experience. "Wisdom is the principal thing; therefore get wisdom, and with all thy getting get understanding."—John O' London, in London T. P.'s Weekly.

If She Had Not Married.

The lover of euphonious female names must look back with regret to the eighteenth century with its fragrant memories of Belinda, Arabella and Amabel. Yet in Spain euphony is still preserved. Could you have a more beautiful name than Juana Maria de los Delores de Leon? It is one of the ironies of history that the owner of these charming vocables was fated to be known in after life as Lady Smith, and to bestow that much less attractive and euphonious title upon a town in South Africa.

What He Meant.

"Your novels will not endure," said the critic.

"I know it," said the author.

"They are not literature," said the critic.

"Correct," said the author.

"Well, then, what do you mean by them?"

"Money," said the author. "Waiter, fetch me a porterhouse steak."

Their Revised Views

"Did any one of you meet Chester Sidering last night at the dance?" inquired the girl with the innocent eyes.

"Sidering?" absently repeated the girl with curly hair. "I don't—oh, yes—that little man!"

"I remember him now," chimed in the girl in the blue dress, languidly. "He insisted on seeing my card even when I told him that it was filled. I thought it most annoying of him, because I really had three vacant dances and he calmly took two. I paid him back, though. I sat in a corner with Tom during one of them and hid in the dressing room during the other."

"He doesn't seem to have many ideas, does he?" remarked the girl with the flower hat. "He stuck like a bur and I thought I'd never get rid of him. He just sat and waited for me to do the talking, too, and I was almost angry enough to poison him. So tiresome!"

"I detest a man who insists on being noticed the way he did," said the girl with the bronze shoes.

"Where did he come from and who is he anyhow?" irritably asked the young woman who had just discovered that her new gloves did not quite match her gown. "Is he a friend of yours?"

"Gracious!" broke in the girl in blue before the girl with the innocent eyes had a chance to answer. "Of course not! How can you ask? Clarice makes it a point never to waste time on an ineligible. I noticed as soon as I saw him what a funny little snub nose he had!"

"What made you ask if we had met him?" suddenly demanded the girl with the flower hat. "Did you meet him yourself? I didn't see you dancing with him."

"I didn't know he was going to be there," explained the girl with the innocent eyes. "So I hadn't saved him any dances."

"Well, of all things! As though you'd bother to save a dance for that insignificant person!"

"Did some friend of yours bring him? How did he get in?"

"What any one can see in him——"

"His father," said the girl with the innocent eyes, casually, "is the head of the steel pin trust."

"What's that?" demanded the irritable girl with the gloves.

"Chester," went on the girl with the eyes, "was educated in this country and abroad and took ever so many honors. He has $5,000,000 in his own right, four automobiles, a yacht and two country places of his own and——"

"Clarice," broke in the girl of the flower hat in a low, pained voice: "I think it was very unkind of you not to give us a hint as to who Mr. Sidering was! It was your duty, because we certainly wanted to give him a pleasant impression of Chicago! I hope he'll understand that any neglect on my part was due to the frightful headache I——"

"I knew at once that he had brains!" said the girl with the gloves. "You can always tell it when you see a forehead like his. It impresses one at once. I admire these quiet men who do not chatter all the time, but talk only when they have something to say. I——"

"Sometimes," interrupted the girl in the blue dress, "I think I'll really have to scold Tom. He has such a selfish way of appropriating me! I simply couldn't get away from him and that's why I missed one of my dances with Mr. Sidering! I'm afraid he may think it was intentional, and I shall explain the first chance——"

"What struck me," broke in the girl with bronze shoes, "was his modesty. He seemed to want to go on his own merits. Why, he was positively retiring! I think that quality indicates what a perfectly splendid person he is!"

"You could tell just by looking at him that he was somebody," said the girl with the gloves, emphatically. "There was something very unusual about him."

"Five millions!" breathed the girl of the flower hat, dazedly. "Did you observe how broad shouldered and athletic he looked, even if he wasn't very tall? He gave one such an impression of physical strength. I thought he was charming."

"Clarice," said the girl in the blue dress, firmly, "you must see that we meet Mr. Sidering while he is in town, as you seem to know all about him! We can come over just as well as not any time——"

"Chester," said the girl with the innocent eyes, "left for the east to-day. It's most unfortune! But—I'll give him your messages when I write!"

She smiled sweetly at them all as she departed. The girl with the bronze shoes recovered enough to break the awful silence. "She corresponds with him!" she gasped, awesomely. "Clarice always did have luck!"

"Well, it isn't as though we cared at all," added the rest in chorus. "Let her! I'd hate to throw myself at a man's head like that!"—Chicago Daily News.

BAIL GIVEN FOR PAVLIK

After Lingering in Jail for Three Days, He is Finally Released.

WAS ARRESTED ON A CAPIAS.

Charged With False Representation in Giving a Security to Protect Bondsman.

Stanley Pavlik, of Watchung avenue, who has been held a prisoner at police headquarters for the past three days on a charge of false representation, was taken before Judge William Newcorn, in the district court this morning and released in $200 bail furnished by his counsel, John P. Owens. Pavlik was arrested on a capias, served by Constable John Manley on Monday. This is said to be the first time in the history of Plainfield that this law has been invoked. Pavlik was attended in his cell this morning by Dr. C. A. Gesswein, who found him suffering from a nervous attack.

It is claimed that Pavlik swore that he owned the clothing store known as the Watchung Avenue Cleaning and Pressing Co., when as a matter of fact there are encumbrances on the property. The surety was given to protect Isaac Shrager, a bondsman for Pavlik's brother, Felix, who jumped his bail of $100 on Monday. Felix was under bonds for obtaining money under false pretences.

SIXTY-TWO ARE BORN HERE IN SEPTEMBER

The regular monthly meeting of the Board of Health was held last night, four members being present. Reports were read showing the sanitary condition of the city at the present time.

The following returns were made to the department for the past month: Marriages, 22; births, 62; stillbirths, 3; deaths, 19. Of the nineteen deaths, 42 per cent. were of persons over sixty years of age.

The following communicable diseases were reported during the month: Scarlet fever, 4; diphtheria, 1; tuberculosis, 5; typhoid fever, 1. Four of the five cases of typhoid fever were contracted outside of Plainfield. One of these, resulted in death. At the present time, there are three houses under quarantine, two for scarlet fever and one for diphtheria.

During the month, sixty-three samples of milk were collected and analyzed, and also three samples of cream. Samples of milk were collected from stores selling milk, and the result was not as favorable as for the preceding month.

Ninety-five dairies and eleven bottling places were inspected during the month. The condition of the dairies were found in most cases to be very good; however, five dairies supplying milk to dealers in Plainfield were shut off, because the owners were careles and not prompt in complying with our ordinances. The usual sample of city water was taken during the month and the analysis showed it to be of excellent quality. The number of plumbing inspections made during the month of September was 61; the number of general inspections made was 460, making a total of 521.

The first practice of the Plainfield High School minstrel troupe was held yesterday afternoon. About twenty-five fellows were present and S. B. Howe, Jr., the leader of the glee club, tried their voices. The end men will be Osgood Sewall, Frank Clark, Jack Riffert and James Mauger. The interlouctor will be Roy Titsworth. The soloists will be Clyde Doane, E. Van Zandt and Roy Titsworth. The entertainment will be for the benefit of the athletic association and will be held on Saturday night, November 13.

MRS. EMMA D. POOLE, CHRISTIAN WORKER, DEAD

Mrs. Emma D. Poole, widow of the late John H. Poole, died at her home on Church street at 11:30 o'clock last night after an illness of a few hours—an attack of acute indigestion. The funeral will be held at the residence of her son John W. Poole, 617 East Seventh street, Friday afternoon at 4 o'clock. The body will be taken to Bridgeton for interment in the family plot.

Mrs. Poole was a well known figure in Christian work in this city, having been connected with the Christian Alliance for a number of years and was also interested in missionary and charitable work. Her life was devoted entirely to the welfare of others and her greatest pleasure was derived from alievating distress. She was not a member of any church, preferring to go wherever the spirit led her to worship.

Her husband died about twenty-five years ago and is buried in Bridgeton. Mrs. Poole has been a resident here for the past twenty years, during which time she endeared herself to many who will mourn her as a great personal loss. She leaves besides her son, two brothers, E. F. Wright, of Brooklyn, and Charles F. Wright, of Bridgeton.

BIRTHDAY DINNER FOR MISS CODY THOMPSON

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Knight, of Park avenue, last night gave a dinner at Truell Court in honor of her sister, Miss Cody L. Thompson, whose birthday occurred yesterday. Miss Cody is a guest at the court. Covers were laid for twelve. The dining hall was tastefully decorated, the color scheme being yellow and white. Assistant District Attorney G. W. Martin, of Brooklyn, acted as toastmaster. The menu was an excellent one.

Following the dinner, the party adjourned to the Knight home where music and dancing continued until midnight, when supper was served. The color scheme at the house was red and white, the rooms being adorned with cut flowers and plants. The guests were G. W. NEW JERSEY C. E. CONVENTION'S BUSY SESSIONS

The afternoon and evening sessions of the twenty-third annual convention of the State Christian Endeavor Union came to an end last night after one of the most stirring addresses ever listened to by the members. Rev. J. Douglas Adam, of East Orange, being the last speaker. In the afternoon addresses were made by Karl Lehman, Mrs. James Foster Smith and Mrs. G. D. Baker, synopses of which will be found below.

The services for the day began with a "watch hour" at 6:45 with State president Sproull leading. Devotional services from 9 to 9:15 were in charge of Rev. John Y. Broek, pastor of Trinity Reformed church. Addresses by Rev. Floyd W. Tomkins, Percy R. Neussel, S. D. Riddle and A. B. Johnson filled up the forenoon.

Dr. Adam's Address.

Following is part of the address of Dr. Adam given before one of the largest audiences ever seen in the First Presbyterian church. The address was preceded by some splendid singing by a choir of forty trained voices under the direction of Charles L. Lewis.

Dr. Adam said in part.

"It is a great sense of privilege and a sense of responsibility to talk to young people. Superstition is passing away naturally. We are living in an age of intense atmosphere of reality. It is true in every phase of life. We must find all the places of reality wherever we go.

That Word "Consecration."

He said consecration is becoming a moth-eaten word in so far as its meaning goes with the majority today. We should not use God, but let God use us, that is, surrender and consecration. When we do this we have struck the crisis of our life. God wants you to surrender your elemental self. A life which does that ends with Him.

"The time has come for all Christian Endeavorers to make an advance to the great goal surrender! Some peoples' claim to goodness is what they don't do. But it is not enough. It is not what you don't commit, but what you neglect to do for the needy and fallen which counts against you. The sermon on the mount is not enough for me. I need someone to lead me to its summit. Eternity has no geography. Christ is here and is the general of the campaign and is giving the marching orders. Are you ready to go forward?

Give Christ Inner Life.

"We do not need to worry about our souls many are too selfcentered. They may spend all night in prayer, but were spiritually selfish because they prayed only for themselves. They are narrow-minded, and hard to live with. It is the broad mindedness that will make one say "I have forgotten I have a soul,' that shows the innate faith that Christ has the soul in his possession. Give Christ your inner life, look up. Nothing can separate you from Him. That's what we need in our every day life. In business, at home, everywhere, lose ourselves in Him. It makes us independent of external things. We are delivered from discouragement. And we can draw from the ocean of divine power.

"We must appropriate two things, heart and grace from God's abundance. Around every one of us tonight is the illimitable power of God's love to help us face every difficult path; rest in it. Surrender, companionship, appropriation and expression are the elements of Christian life and the endeavorers must have them to succeed.

"Christian Endeavor is not doing things, but moving deeds with the will of God; bringing the ideals of Jesus to the surface and the vitality of His personality in what you do. The will and power of Jesus Christ is for you to follow."

Mrs. Smith's Address.

The afternoon session yesterday was opened with a stirring talk on the value of junior mission meetings by Mrs. James Foster Smith, of the mission committee of the South Branch, Philadelphia Christian Endeavor Union. She urged more missionary work and fewer entertainments by the young people. She asked where the great missionaries of the future were to come from if not out of Sunday schools of today.

"Yet," said she, "I know of at least one Sunday school that has not had a single missionary topic for one year. Many of the great missionaries of history resloved to serve Christ among the heathen while yet boys, as in the case of the immortal Mackay of Uganda. It is up to our junior superintendents to impress the necessity of missionary work upon the juniors."

Mrs. Smith also deplored the lack of what she termed prayer-life in the Sunday school, and instanced two large schools in Philadelphia which boasted but two members who could lead in prayer.

Carl Lehman then again addressed the convention. He gave an interesting talk on boys and their ways. There were no bad boys in the world, he declared, only good boys with bad traits. The task of workers in the junior field was to eradicate the bad traits, which could usually be accomplished with a little patience. There were three big things a worker had to contend with, in Mr. Lehman's opinion and they were "boys, girls and your own nerves," which latter were least troublesome when most steady.

Mr. Lehman's Advice.

The speaker took up the matter of overcoming the objections of a pastor to forming a junior society when such objections existed. He said that where it was manifestly impossible to interest the pastor before hand, the organizer should form the society right in his own home and force the unbelieving clergymen to recognize it through its good deeds.

Mr. Lehman advocated a warm welcome to applicants for membership in a society. He had found instances where an applicant had to literally "butt in," as he put it, to become enrolled in the junior ranks.

He said that a great many pastors did not know how to talk to boys and girls. Getting young people to understand and sympathize with a grown-up's remarks was an art, he declared, and one that the theological seminaries ought to teach aspirants to the pulpit. He thought that the pastor and board should endorse all appointments of junior officers, and that the pastor should give final approval of all plans for socials and general entertainment.

He said that the formation of a junior society should mean little additional work for an overworked pastor. A pastor did not need to attend every junior meeting; a strong interest in the work could suffice. Mr. Lehman suggested that superintendents give their young people plenty of systematic bible drills, and to hold interest with such things as bible verse contests.

Mrs. Baker Speaks.

Mrs. G. D. Baker, State Superintendent of Intermediate Work, told of the substantial progress made in her field of endeavor in the present year. She said that many who made small figures in Sunday school work made their mark in the intermediate field.

At the banquet tendered to the State Executive Committee by the local union last evening, State President Sproull presided. The repast was one well calculated to satisfy the hungry and was splendidly served.

Immediately after the coffee, a short discussion of the question of the best means to employ in order to make more effective the work of the county presidents resulted in a unanimous vote to place them on the State executive committee. The purpose in view is to make the 1911 convention at Atlantic City the greatest in the history of the Christian Endeavor movement.

A resolution of sympathy was introduced for Miss Ida B. Stephens, State secretary, who was unable to be present at the convention owing to the illness of her mother. Charles F. Windham, general secretary, made a short address outlining the very successful work of his department during the past year, and was heartily applauded.

Morning Watch Service.

The second day's session of the convention began this morning with a "Morning Watch" at 6:45 o'clock, led by State President John T. Sproull. Despite the early hour there were nearly one hundred enthusiastic Endeavorers present to join in the helpful meeting. This continued until 7:30, when an adjournment was taken for breakfast.

The convention session proper began at 9 o'clock with a devotional service conducted by Rev. John Y. Broek, pastor of Trinity Reformed church. He read the Scripture selection and offered prayer.

Addresses of Welcome.

Then followed addresses of welcome, Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, extending a welcome as president of the Plainfield Ministers' Association; Rev. Dr. C. E. Herring, as

SCHOOL ATTENDANCE FRAUD IS EXPOSED

Timely action has been taken by the Montclair Board of Education to prevent an abuse, which it is said exists in this city. Like Plainfield's, Montclair's public schools have such a reputation for efficiency that residents of other towns seek to have their children derive the advantage of pursuing their studies in them, and these efforts have led to abuses which the school authorities have been kept on the alert to correct.

It has been decided that pupils who go to Montclair and live with relatives while attending the schools are not exempt from paying the annual tuition fee, which is $80 for the high school, $60 for the grammar school and $40 for the primary schools. Unless the relative with whom the pupil resides is constituted a legal guardian, the pupil will be considered a non-resident and charged the usual rates.

This rule is qualified for the children from Acquackanonk township, in Pasaic county, who live nearer to the Montclair schools than they do to the schools in their own municipalities. By an arrangement with the Boards of Education of the two districts, Acquackanonk was charged $17.20 for each pupil it sent to the Montclair schools.

Plainfield's Board of Education makes a fixed charge for pupils from suburbs attending the local schools, but the abuse corrected in Montclair also exists here.

BANKS AND SCHOOLS TO CLOSE TUESDAY

Under the auspices of Chapter 261, Laws of 1909, Tuesday, October 12, is made a legal holiday known as Columbus Day. Governor Fort has officially said that he considers the act to be valid until it shall be otherwise declared by the courts and the Attorney General has given his opinion that the act will be enforced. In view of this, all of the local banks will be closed on that day.

State Superintendent Baxter has sent out to the local superintendents a notice of its observance. Accordingly next Tuesday will be a holiday and the schools in the city and borough will be closed.

The postoffice will be closed at 10 o'clock in the morning. There will be one delivery of mail.

To Enforce Shooting Law.

Complaints have been made to the North Plainfield police of shooting on the part of residents of the borough. It is announced that the ordinance forbidding the discharge of firearms within the borough limits will be strictly enforced by the law officers.

GRANTED AN INJUNCTION

Vice Chancellor Stevens Issues Order Restraining Garbage Man's Practises.

NEIGHBORS MAKE COMPLAINT.

George T. Hughes and Howard J. Vail Make Freeman Strait Defendant in Their Bill.

On complaint of George T. Hughes an injunction was issued yesterday by Vice-Chancellor Stevens restraining Freeman Strait, who operates a garbage collection system in the city of Plainfield, from disposing of the offal on his property in North Plainfield township in such a manner as to allow noxious and unpleasant odors to escape and extend to the premises of Hughes, who resides near the Strait property.

According to the bill of complaint filed by Hughes, Strait occupies the property, consisting of 100 acres, known as the Underhill farm. Hughes avers that for more than a year Strait has been carting from the city of Plainfield swill and decayed animal and vegetable matter which he has dumped in piles on the land and occasionally spreading it about the fields on the farm, leaving it exposed to the elements. Hughes lives only a short distance from the Underhill farm and he alleges that as a result of the nuisance caused by his neighbor life for himself and family has been made almost unbearable by the stench that permeates the air. The smell from the garbage has been so vile, it is declared, that members of the Hughes family have been so nauseated at times that they have been unable to eat.

Howard J. Vail, another resident of the neighborhood, sustains the charges made by Hughes. Vail declares that frequently the stench from the garbage is so vile that he and his family are compelled to abandon the use of their porch as a place to sit in warm weather and go into the house and close all the windows for the purpose of preventing the noxious odors from discomforting them. He also says that Mrs. Vail has been made sick and unhealthful by reason of the nuisance.

Former Assemblyman S. S. Swackhamer is counsel for Hughes.

HELD FOR GRAND JURY FOR ALLEGED ASSAULT

Justice Snape last night disposed of the cases of Peter Wilson and Frank Gunning, charged with assaulting Patrick Regan on the night of September 18. Wilson was held in $200 bail for the grand jury and Gunning was discharged.

Wilson admitted striking Regan, but said he did it in self defense. Regan charged Gunning with being an accessory to the assault, but it was proved to the court's satisfaction that Gunning took no part in the affair. In fact, William R. Coddington, Regan's counsel, requested that Gunning be released.

Judge William Newcorn, counsel for the alleged assailants, termed their arrest as a piece of spite work, and showed that the complainant bore both defendants ill will and had spoken slightingly of the wife of one. He showed that Wilson, the man finally held, was of good character and had never been brought into court before.

Wilson, who is a quiet, clean cut young man, took the stand in his own defense and frankly said that he "walloped" Regan. But he claimed that Regan had stopped him upon the street with an oath and then made a swing at him. Then came the Wilson punch that put Regan into the ditch. Drs. Buchanan and Pittis testified that Regan was brought out of the ditch with a broken rib.

Counselor Newcorn said that he thought the broken rib was due to rocks in the ditch and not to kicks from Wilson and Gunning as alleged. Chief Weiss testified to Regan's condition when brought into police headquarters and that the injured man mentioned Wilson alone as his assailant.

Henry C. Meyer Hurt.

Township Committeeman Henry C. Meyer yesterday fell from a high limb of an apple tree on his property at Johnston's drive and was so severely injured about the shoulder that Dr. Westcott was summoned. Meyer had been picking apples when he fell. The full extent of his injuries are not known.

The California State Baseball League, known as the "outlaw" organization, has joined the fold of organized baseball, when Frank A. Herman, representing the directors, signed articles with Cal Ewing, president of the Pacific Coast League, whereby the State League becomes affiliated with the national organization, with a Class B rating.

New Brunswick will either play the New York Giants or the Philadelphia Athletics in New Brunswick on October 10. On October 3, the Boston Nationals defeated "Dave" Driscoll's team by a score of 4 to 1.

"Jack" Martin is now playing the best game of his life and the fans are going wild over the way he covers short and is wielding the stick. Next season he will play with the Worcester, Mass., team.

The local baseball season is about over, but few games remaining to be played in this city and vicinity. On Saturday, Bound Brook and Somerville will meet at the former place. "Lou" Wiltse will pitch for Somerville and that means there will be nothing to it for the home team.

Ortleib, formerly of the Plainfield team, is now doing good work in the box for Elizabeth.

FOOTBALL.

The Tiger A. C., of New Brunswick, would like to schedule football games with teams averaging 115 to 120 pounds, to be played on opponents' grounds, Sunday games only, with suitable guarantee. All dates open. Address George G. Ellison, manager, 295 Suydam street, New Brunswick.

Interclass football practice at Columbia took on a more serious and important aspect Tuesday when L. H. Bigelow, captain of the Yale 'varsity football team in 1907 and coach at New Haven last season, took charge of the junior team on South Field in the afternoon. Bigelow is a law student at Columbia, and intends to devote as much of his spare time as possible to training the Columbia class teams. He will look after the third year team three days a week, and the other two days he purposes giving to the freshmen.

A series of six games has been arranged, in which each team will play every other team. The first game will be played next Wednesday. The schedule is as follows: October 13, sophomores against freshmen; October 20, seniors against juniors; October 27, juniors against freshmen; October 30, seniors against sophomores; November 3, seniors against freshmen; November 6, juniors against sopohomores.

Application blanks for the Princeton football game with Yale at the field at New Haven on November 13, were issued Tuesday, and they show that the allotment will be three on each application, as heretofore. On the applications for Harvard game tickets only two tickets will be allowed to each applicant.

Everard S. Thompson, manager of the Yale ticket department, has devised new forms of applications, the chief departure being that each blank carries two forms, one for the personal user and the other for friends who have borrowed the name of a Yale man. The end in view is to give Yale men better seats, making them preferential holders, while friends will have second choice. Another innovation is that tickets will be mailed to all applicants instead of being called for at the ticket office. This will prevent congestion at the ticket office the day before and the day of a game.

GOLF.

At a recent meeting of the Eastern Professional Golfers' Association it was decided to hold next year's championship tournament in August, on a course yet to be selected. The championship will be played for as follows: Eighteen holes medal play, first eight scores to qualify and play off, match play, for the championship. The player getting the lowest score in the qualifying round will receive a gold medal. Second and third eight scores to play off medal play for prizes. The amateur and professional foursomes have been abandoned.

The fall tournament of the Country Club of Atlantic City will be held on Thursday, Friday and Saturday, November 4, 5 and 6.

Tom Vardon, the visiting British professional, arrived in New York Tuesday and immediately went out to Hackensack for practice with Alec Smith over the links of the Hackensack Golf Club for the match yesterday. The contest was at thirty-six holes, with Tom Vardon and Walter J. Travis against Alec Smith, present metropolitan and Eastern open champion, and Findlay S. Douglas, former amateur and metropolitan champion.

The new golf course of the Richmond County Country Club will be officially opened on Saturday with an especially attractive program: Club championship, qualifying round eighteen holes medal play; first sixteen to qualify; scratch. October Cup, qualifying round eighteen holes medal play with handicap; prizes to be awarded to the lowest net scores in Class A and Class B; first four in each class qualify to play off match play for the October cup, presented by the president. Kickers' handicap, eighteen holes medal play; cup presented by K. P. Emmons. Special cup for guests, eighteen holes medal play with handicap. Members may play with guests in any of the above events. An informal stag dinner will be served at 7 o'clock.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

A three cornered comic love tangle has an inning in "A Knight for a Day," the big New York, Chicago and Boston musical comedy success that comes to the Plainfield theatre Monday night. The tangle has for its principals an awkward, simpering girls' college chore girl and excitable French chef attached to the seminary and a merry little sweetheart of the slavey, who, a waiter by profession, is posing as a knight whose credentials he appropriated because the knight when waited upon, failed to reward the waiter with a tip. The slavey finds it pleasant to encourage both suitors, and the squabbles that usually attend the dancing dalliance of two affinities become the experience of the trio.

SEVENTH-DAY BAPTIST WOMEN ELECT OFFICERS

The Women's Society for Christian Work of the Seventh-Day Baptist church held its annual meeting and election of officers in the church parlors, yesterday afternoon. There was a large attendance and much enthusiasm was displayed in again taking up the work for the year. It was reported that more than $400 was raised during the year and this was divided among the missionary, educational and tract departments, while some of it was given to local charity.

These officers were elected for the coming year: President, Mrs. William C. Hubbard; vice-president, Mrs. S. L. Wardner; recording secretary, Mrs. O. S. Rogers; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Asa F. Randolph; treasurer, Mrs. F. A. Dunham; auditors, Mrs. T. C. Smith and Mrs. W. H. Rogers. The committees will be appointed at a later meeting.

SEBRING GIVES DINNER FOR SOMERSET OFFICIALS

Following an inspection of Greenbrook road, which is about completed by the contractors, Mobus & Burke, the members of the Somerset County Board of Freeholders were guests at 1 o'clock this afternoon at a dinner given by Charles P. Sebring at his home in Greenbrook. Among others present were some of the county and municipal officials, including Assemblyman Smalley and former Mayor N. B. Smalley.

The improvement of Greenbrook road has been underway for sometime. The thoroughfare has been widened and macadamized from Gavin's corner to the borough line, making it one of the best in Somerset county. A top dressing of oil completed the work and doubtless the road will be used a great deal by autoists and others Mr. Sebring was one of the inspectors put in charge of the work, and the dinner today was a complimentary one to the county officials.

STATE C. E. CONVENTION

pastor of the convention church; Clarence B. LaRue, as chairman of the local committee, with a response by State President John T. Sproull.

Dr. Zelie, in his address, said that he felt sure the Endeavorers would be impressed with the welcome whether anything was said or not, and in fact he hoped that the welcome had already been proved. He said that Plainfield is a good place to be welcomed to, it is a good place for strangers, they are not kept on

Rev. J. O. McKelvey,
Devotional Leader.

the anxious seat very long He referred to the fact that the welcome had been prepared long ago. Dr. Zelie said that the spiritual forces in the city stand behind such movements better than in any place he could think of. Any Christian worker is given a tremendous advantage and helped to do great things.

Liberal Givers.

"This is a city where the collection box is seen," continued Dr. Zelie. "We see the subscription list often, but we are use to that. You must feel the note of conquest, so aptly referred to by Dr. Dawson, of High Bridge, London, when attending a council of religious workers at Brighton. We thank you for coming in addition to welcoming you. You no doubt feel discouragements. Work is a discouragement. One often thinks that there is a mighty lot of work done, but little product, but it has always been so.

"We welcome you to a city that has been the birthplace of some religious movements and we welcome you to our homes. In the name of the city, the churches, the homes and the Plainfield ministers I extend a hearty welcome to you all."

Dr. Herring Humorous.

In extending a welcome on behalf of the convention church of which he is pastor, Rev. Dr C. E. Herring remarked that Dr. Zelie had taken his time and he in turn would take the time alloted to Mr. LaRue, which caused much laughter. In trying to explain why the convention met in his church, Dr. Herring said he thought it must be because of his initials, "C. E." sometimes referred to as "Christian Endeavor" Herring. This provoked laughter.

"I remember the State convention which met here fourteen years ago," continued Dr. Herring, "and I have always been impressed with the interdenominational fellowship shown. I love to think of heaven as a city where we will enjoy that fellowship and I welcome you to this church with that thought. I love all denominations, but possibly love more the interdenominational idea in the advancement of the cause of Christ.

"You have gathered this week in order that you may go forth with renewed energy and perform better service in the future. The circumstances and conditions today are vastly different from those of fourteen years ago. We now have more modern and approved ideas to reach those who are out of the church and to bring them into Christian fellowship, and may your coming together be productive of much good. I greet you heartily as pastor of this church."

Mr. LaRue's Welcome.

On behalf of the Plainfield Endeavor Union, Clarence B. LaRue, extended a welcome to the delegates, and he did not forget to make it broad enough to include all young people of Plainfield, through whom it was made possible to entertain the convention. He referred to the generosity of all who were helping in the work. He expressed the belief that this convention would surpass any held in recent years. He said that two years had been spent in preparation for the gathering, with two objects in view, first, that the young people of Plainfield would receive a great blessing and inspiration, which has been a fact, and secondly, that new ideas would be gained for greater work in the future.

"It is a pleasant duty to receive such words of welcome,' said State President Sproull in his response. It means more than words can express. When a Christian Endeavor Society thinks that it can get along without a pastor's aid, its days of usefulness are over. We always want the pastors with us. Dr. Herring referred to himself as "C. E." Herring, but he is not a dried herring by any means, in fact I think he is a wise Herring.

"It is a pleasure to state that the invitation to come to Plainfield was backed up by deeds, and we as Endeavorers are glad to get a welcome that is backed up by two years of constant prayer for the success of the convention. We are all fighting in the same cause and your blessings will come through your preparation. It is for us to do things through the inspiration received here and may we through the outpouring of God's Spirit be made better channels for winning souls to Christ."

Mr. Neussle's Report.

Then followed a business session, which began with a report of the introduction department by Percy R. Neussle, of Newark, State Superintendent. He explained that the department is made up of the State superintendents, county or local superintendents and a representative from each society, and it is the duty to provide a welcome for all strangers and extend a Christian fellowship. Through this plan of co-operation many strangers have become interested in Endeavor work. Mr. Neussle said that eleven counties reported during the year and eighty-eight strangers had become identified with the work. He urged greater co-operation during the coming year.

Mr. Riddle's Report.

S. D. Riddle, of Newark, State superintendent of the fresh air department, gave an interesting account in a general way of the work done during the year. Trolley rides, excursions to the seashore and trips to the mountains had comprized numerous outings under the auspices of the societies in the various counties. Mr. Riddle said that Morris county had taken the lead in this work, closely followed by Hudson and Essex counties. Somerset county as well as some of those in the southern part of the State had also done good work in this department. Special mention was made of the interest taken by Miss Nellie Dodwell, of Dunellen, and Miss Mina Bock, of this city.

Press Department Work.

The work of the press department for the year was prepared by the State superintendent, A. B. Johnson, of Newark. The report was read by Mr. Riddle, as Mr. Johnson could not be present. He briefly told of the work of interchanging ideas and plans among the societies of the State, telling how helpful it had been. Supplimenting the report, President Sproull emphasized the importance of this work, adding, "if you have a good thing let us hear about it."

Dr. Tomkins Here.

The "Quiet Hour," fixed for 10 o'clock, was postponed to this time, owing to the inability of the leader to be present at the early hour. Rev. Floyd W. Tomkins, S. T. D., rector of Holy Trinity church, Philadelphia, was in charge of this impressive service. Instructions were given to allow no one to enter or leave the church during the hour, as perfect quiet was desired. Dr. Tomkins made a few very helpful remarks throughout the service, counseling the Endeavorers to be natural, to be prayerful, and to seek the Spirit of Christ. He said that parents do not love their children as they ought to, simply because they are human. If they get the Spirit and love of Christ in their hearts it will be reflected in their lives.

During this hour the Endeavorers gave themselves up entirely to a spirit of consecration and it was the most impressive service of the convention. Following this announcement was made for the various group conferences that were held from 11:25 to 12:15.

Methods Conference.

The conferences of the School of Methods were made up of groups some of which met in the Y. M. C. A. building and others in rooms in the church. The Prayer and Look-out committees in charge of Karl Lehman met in the assembly room of the Y. M. C. A. Miss Wyckoff with the Missionary commitee in the junior room. Mr. Sproull took charge of the social committee in the body of the church.

The four departments were arranged as follows: Evangelistic, Rev. Abram Duryee, of Hackensack; Bible study, Rev. Walter B. Greenway, of Jersey City; Sabbath Observance and Christian Citizenship, Rev. Dr. F. W. Johnson, of Washington, N. J., and Junior and Intermediate, Mrs. L. Ida Dukes. The reports of these conferences will be read tomorrow morning.

Rev. J. J. Adams, pastor of the Zion M. E. church, of Red Bank, addressed the convention this afternoon in the interests of the State colored churches.

Favor Church Athletics.

At the banquet and annual meeting of the executive committee it was suggested by President Sproull that some plan be recommended for the purpose of reaching the unreached in our churches, and it was decided to make the following recommendation to the pastors: "That, wherever and whenever it meets with their approval and seems to meet the needs of their churches, the executive committee suggests organizing baseball, or basketball teams, reading clubs or musical circles, or such organizations, athletic or social as may meet the needs, under the control of the Christian Endeavor Society and that this committee will stand back of any such movement."

The invitation of the Mercer County Union to hold the next annual convention at Trenton in October, 1910, was accepted unanimously.

Dr. Clark Coming Tomorrow.

A telegram was received from President Clark, the founder of the movement stating he will arrive at 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon.

COUNTRY CLUB PROGRAM OF SATURDAY ANNOUNCED

It will be a gala day at the Plainfield Country Club, Saturday, when the privileges of the clubhouse, golf course and tennis courts will be extended to all members of the Park Club, Watchung Hunt Club and the Park Golf Club. Nearly one thousand personal cards of invitation have been mailed to the members of those organizations and to the members of the home club. It is hoped that the guests will use the links and courts freely all day; and any who wish to lunch at the club may do so by placing their orders with John Hilton, superintendent, upon their arrival at the clubhouse in the morning.

Mrs. Henry C. Irons, Mrs. Daniel F. Ginna, Mrs. Harry V. Borden and Mrs. Leighton Calkins, the women of the house committee, will preside over the afternoon tea from 3 until 6 in the afternoon. There will be music on the "deck" piazza during the afternoon and the women of the various clubs are especially invited to the afternoon function.

The enlarged clubhouse makes it possible to provide dining facilities for nearly two hundred persons without crowding, and guests as well as members are invited to arrange parties and to telephone their dining orders to the superintendent. Orders should not be received later than tomorrow night, so that Mr. Hilton may know how many to accommodate. Dinner will be served promptly at 6:45 so that the large dining room can be cleared and thrown open for the dance which will begin at 8:15 o'clock.

Free stages will connect with all trolley cars, afternoon and evening. Automobiles will be allowed to approach the club by the main driveway throughout the day. While personal invitations have been mailed to members of the three invited clubs, there may be some who have been omitted, and all who belong to those clubs are cordially invited to attend, and also bring their friends.

Many parties have already been booked for dinner, and as tables will be reserved in order of applications, guests and members are advised to place their orders as early as possible. The usual charges will be made for meals. There will be no other charges for guests, who are invited to use the club throughout the entire day with all the privileges accorded to members.

ALLEGED DESERTER A FAKER.

Lives Well for Three Days on Policeman's Generosity.

Samuel Upp lived for three days on the fat of the land at the expense of Police Sergeant Charles Smith, of Trenton, who hten discovered that he had been buncoed by a new trick. Upp surrendered himself as a navy deserter, and Smith fed him generously, expecting to get the $20 reward which the government offers in such cases. He wired the naval authorities, and yesterday received word that Upp was a faker. He then arraigned the fellow in court, but no crime could be charged against him and he was allowed to go

A Matrimonial Tangle.

The Mercer County Grand Jury will have to unravel the matrimonial entanglements of Stanislaus Zegarskey, of Trenton. He is in jail in default of $500 bail, on the charge of a woman, who claims to be Mrs. Zegarskey, that he has failed to support her and their two children. The woman told Justice of the Peace Eisner that she has learned that Zegarsky has a wife and several children living in Baltimore, and that he has at least one more wife and several more children living in the old country.

Two Locked in Ice Rooom.

Thomas Ceary and James Hickey of Trenton were accidentally locked in the ice room of a refrigerator plant in Trenton last evening and would have been kept there all night but for the chance return to the place of another employe. They kept themselves from succumbing to the cold by tossing about cakes of ice and pieces of beef.

RELIC OF REVOLUTION STAGE DAYS FOUND

While digging up the ground in Washington street, between Park place and High street, at Morristown, where a new brick pavement is to be laid, a workman of the street department Tuesday found an old transfer ticket of a stage line, which it is supposed ran between Easton and New York a century ago. The ticket is of metal and on the one side bears an imprint of a stage coach with the words "telegraph line," while on the other side is simply the words "Transfer Ticket." Old residents say that after the Revolution a stage line ran between New York and Easton, and they think it possible that Morristown was a place of transfer where travelers put up for the night and where a fresh team of horses was secured to continue the route. The relic is now in possession of Street Commissioner Cole, who is anxious to find out when the stage coach line ran through Morristown. The ticket is the first of its kind ever seen around here by citizens now living.

PLAN ENDURANCE RIDE OF OFFICERS OF FIFTH.

Paterson, Oct. 7.—Colonel E. W. Hine, commanding the Fifth Regiment, issued an order Tuesday notifying the field and staff officers of the command that the endurance ride for this year will be held from Thursday to Sunday, October 14 to 17. The officers will assemble at the armory Thursday evening and will find three mounts equipped with blankets, ponchos, shelter halves, mess kits and saddle bags. The horses are to be drawn from the First Troop, and several remounts will be taken along to insure every officer finishing the ride.

In the afternoon a quartermaster's wagon equipped with a buzzacott (the army field range), rations, etc., will leave Paterson in charge of Musician Henry Ritter, of Company B, and Quartermaster Sergeant James Simpson, of Company C. Ritter is an experienced field cook, and will have charge of the commissary department. The wagon will proceed to Pompton, where the first bivouac is to be held. The officers will pitch shelter tents there and will remain until Friday morning, when the route will be taken for Newton. The destination of the ride is the country place of Lieutenant-Colonel Walter F. Whittemore, of the division staff, who has invited Colonel Hine and his officers to pass a night at his place.

Final arrangements will be made for the ride at the board of officers' meeting at the armory Friday evening.

TUBERCULOSIS CONVENTION.

Among the speakers at the mass-meeting arranged by the State Tuberculosis Commission in Taylor's Opera House, Trenton, on the night of Thursday, October 21, will be Governor Fort, State Senator Joseph S. Frelinghuysen, Dr. Henry Baiard Favill, of Chicago; Dr. William H. Welch, of Baltimore; Dr. William E. Evans, of Chicago, and Dr. Livingston Farrand, of New York. Bishop McFaul, of Trenton, will introduce Governor Fort, who will preside.

Drs. Favill and Welch are two of the six greatest tuberculosis experts in the United States. Dr. Farrand is secretary of the National Tuberculosis Association. Dr. Evans is health officer of Chicago. It is expected that Rev. Dr Henry Van Dyke, of Princeton University, will pronounce the benediction. Bishop McFaul will make the opening prayer.

REPERTOIRE SUCCESS AT THE LOCAL THEATRE

The presentation of "The Charity Ball" at the Plainfield theatre, last night, by Charles K. Champlin and his excellent company, was greeted by a large and appreciative audience. The extra care which all the details that go to make a successful performance, Belasco-like, were much in evidence. The scenery, costuming, electrical effects were marvelous. The ball room scene in the second act especially deserves mention.

The specialties between the acts, which serve to drive away dull care, came in for their usual share of applause. This afternoon "The Royal Mounted" will be presented, and tonight by request, "An Old Sweetheart of Mine," a beautiful Western romance, with an entire change of specialties.

START SUNDAY LAW TEST.

Proprietor of Picture Show Fined in Newark and Appeal Will be Made.

In the First Criminal Court in Newark yesterday Judge Simon Hahn imposed a fine of $50 and costs on Martin Singer, proprietor of a moving picture show at No. 306 Market street for having opened for business on Sunday, September 26. Singer pleaded not guilty. Five other moving picture men were arraigned at the same time on similar complaints by Police Captain M. J. Ryan, but as the Singer case is to be made the basis of a test of the Sunday question, it was decided to hold all the other cases in abevance until the action is concluded.

It is contended by the moving picture men, who have formed an organization and engaged counsel, that if they have violated any law it is the general State act against vice and immorality, and not the city ordinance which prohibits theatrical performances without licenses.

WELCOME PASTOR TO ROSELLE.

PIANO CONTEST FAKES EXPOSED!

There are several Piano houses which have no prices for their goods except grossly inflated ones arranged expressly for fake discounts in connection with schemes of various kinds. These houses seem to find it impossible to dispose of their pianos in a legitimate, straightforward way, but instead resort to one scheme after another—catch-penny devices, so crude as to be positively insulting to the intelligence of the public. These schemes usually take the form of guessing contests, drawing puzzles and various feats of little skill. In all of them the object is identical to mislead the prospective buyer into the belief that he is getting something for nothing, while at the same time prices are arranged sufficiently high to off-set the allowance to which his prize certificate entitles him.

EVERYONE WHO MAKES A GUESS GETS A PRIZE!

If you have ever answered one of these ads you received a discount certificate. EVERYBODY DOES. It matters not whether the answer is good, bad or indifferent, from adult or child it draws a prize in the shape of a certificate or due bill (generally from $65.00 to $100.00) to apply on the purchase of a new Piano. Of course the price of the Piano is fixed accordingly and the purchaser pays a high price even after the amount of certificate is deducted, usually a much higher price than an instrument of similar quality could be secured for in any legitimate music store.

To test the value of one of these certificates present it in payment for something other than a new piano—say a low priced used piano, music cabinet or a bench, and see how quickly the dealer will turn you down. He will not even give you 50 cents worth of music for it. Try the experiment!

AT $185.00 WE WILL SELL A BETTER PIANO THAN THE SCHEME HOUSES ASK $325.00 TO $400.00 FOR! Such well known and high grade makes as Haines Bros., Brewster, the Genuine Mathushek and others too numerous to mention.

THE TRIAL OF JESUS

By REV. A. C. DIXON, D. D.,
Pastor of the Chicago Ave. (Moody's) Church, Chicago.

"What shall I do with Jesus who is called Christ?"—Matthew 27:22. Jesus was tried before the tribunal of grasping greed with Judas as judge, and the sentence was: "I will sell him for 30 pieces of silver." This is in striking contrast with a Japanese young man in New York whose father offered him $50,000 if he would give up his Christian nonsense and return to the faith of his fathers. The reply was "Jesus is worth more than $50,000 to me. I cannot sell him for that." Are you, as judge, estimating Jesus at so low a rate that you are willing to sell him for paltry present indulgences?

The next tribunal was that of religious prejudice represented by the Jewish Sanhedrim. One of the greatest enemies to Christ is religion. The matter with China, India and Africa is to a large extent religion which worshiping monstrous idols brings its votaries down to their level. The matter with people calling themselves Christians who are satisfied with elaborate ritualistic observances, while in their daily lives they are bad, is that they have a large religious nature which has not been purified by the blood of Christ and mastered by his life. Their religious prejudice often bars their hearts against the entrance of Christ.

Jesus came also before the tribunal of patronizing pride with Herod as judge. Herod would like to see him perform some miracles and asked some questions which Jesus treated with dignified silence. There are Herods of wealth and scholarship living to-day who assume a patronizing tone toward Christ.

Pilate represents the tribunal of conscientious weakness. He is convinced that Jesus is innocent and he would like to release him, but he lacks the moral courage to assert his conscientious convictions.

The world is full of Pilates who know their duty toward Christ while they lack the moral courage to do it. If some of them had stamina enough to take the advice of their good Christian wives, they would do right and be happier.

The tribunal of weak faith with Peter as judge decided against Christ under stress of great temptation, but one earnest, loving, compassionate look from the eyes of the prisoner convinced the judge that he was wrong and caused him to reverse his decision, while it sent him out into the dark to weep over his blunder.

I have described these tribunals before which Jesus was tried. But after all I am mistaken. Jesus is really the judge and these men are the prisoners before him. He is trying them. Judas is found guilty of base treachery and executes judgment upon himself. The Jewish Sanhedrim and the mob, full of religious prejudice, have judgment passed against them. The prayer "His blood be upon us and our children" has been answered and I hear the execution of the sentence in the tramp of the Roman army and in the thud of battering rams beating down the wall of the sacred city.

Herod's patronizing pride took him to Rome in search of a kingdom, but he received instead a decree of banishment and died a miserable death. Such will be the end of all pride which merely patronizes Jesus, while it refuses to accept him as Saviour and Lord.

Pilate was summoned to Rome, and, though his vacillating weakness would evade the issue, he must go and answer charges made by his enemies. Seeing that he will be condemned, he commits suicide. A legend tells us that his body was thrown into the Tiber and in a storm was cast upon the bank. It was then thrown into the Rhone, but the river would not hold it. It was at last cast into a Swiss lake and once a year the devil takes it out and makes it go through the process of washing its hands in the presence of the people. The weird legend has in it a suggestion of truth. Those who know the right and refuse to do it can never find peace. The soul that is convinced of the truths of the claims of Jesus Christ but refuses for any reason to take his side will be restless and storm-tossed, a plaything, sooner or later, in the hands of the devil.

After his resurrection Jesus said: "Go, tell my disciples and Peter," as if he knew that Peter after his backsliding would not consider himself a disciple, unless he should receive such a personal assurance. Peter, restored to fellowship and power, preaches at Pentecost with a tongue of fire and 3,000 are converted in one day.

Reader, you are a judge before whom Jesus stands, and you must answer the question: "What shall I do with Jesus?" He is on your hands and you must do something with him. Will you sell him like Judas? Will you let religious prejudice cause you to reject his claims upon your faith and love? Will you patronize him like Herod? Will you vacillate like Pilate and refuse to be true to your convictions? Will you deny him like Peter?

To Form Men's Club.

Rev. L. R. Howard, G. Herbert Condict and a number of young men interested will meet at Hope chapel, Saturday night, to consider the advisability of forming a Young Men's club among and for the young men of the chapel. The movement has the support of all the young men of the chapel. All young men over seventeen years are eligible for membership and are earnestly requested to be present at the meeting Saturday night.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning Oct. 10, 1909.

By REV. S. H. DOYLE.

Topic.—How can we help our pastor?—Ex. xvii, 8-13.

The life of the pastor of a church today is one of so many and complex duties that he needs all the help that the church can give him and is especially encouraged when the young people come to his assistance, show their appreciation of his labors and lend a hand to make them more effective. What helps one pastor may only annoy another. Therefore, before Endeavorers can help their pastors, they must study their dispositions and environments, so that they can exercise judgment in all that they do. Pastors are human. They have hearts. They have feelings. They need help and encouragement as well as those to whom they try, by the grace of God, to administer these same things. Some general principles may here be noted.

A realization of the tremendous labors and burdens that rest upon a pastor's shoulders is an absolutely necessary requirement in the helping of pastors. Many treat their work lightly. They look upon the ministry as one of easiest professions. Their idea is that about all he has to do is to talk twice on the Sabbath day and that no preparation is required for that. The facts are that the members of no other profession do so much as ministers and none are so poorly paid. But people say, "The minister should not think of money." Christ never said so. He declared that the "worker is worthy of his meat." Moreover, if because of the insignificance of his salary in comparison to his real needs and, as is usual, its irregular payment the minister comes to owe a few debts the cry goes up that he is no good because he does not pay his debts—and often some of those to whom he is indebted owe pew rent to the church of which he is the pastor, and the church cannot pay him because they do not pay it. Ministers are men. They should, like other men, be paid what they are worth. They should be paid promptly. When that day comes few will ever be in debt or have to worry over making "both ends meet." The church and the world, as well as the minister, will reap the results, for he will then be able to give to them the service of a clear, unworried mind, and the results will soon be apparent. Christian Endeavorers, when older and richer, should bear these facts in mind. Pay your pastors a living salary. Pay it promptly, as you agree to do in calling him, and you will help him and help your church and the world at large.

If some people with false estimates of a minister's duties could go with one in his work for one week they would certainly have a change of mind—two sermons, which require hours of preparation, to be preached to the same people Sabbath after Sabbath for years, in addition to at least one midweek lecture, the sick to be visited, the dying to be comforted, the dead to be buried, the bereaved to be comforted after the death of loved ones. He goes with the physician, continues with the undertaker and still continues his visiting after both are done. Many other burdens of sorrow rest upon him through the adversities and trials of his people. The Protestant church has no confessional, but Protestant ministers nevertheless have many secret burdens and trials intrusted to them. And to whom should those in trouble go but to their pastor? Who are more sympathetic? Who more willing to help in time of need? The world, too, makes many demands upon the minister. No class of men do more beyond their bounds of labor than the Christian minister. A man may shun a church and a pastor during his days of health, but when dying he wants one. He may have never darkened a church door, but when he dies his family wants a minister at the funeral service, and he goes. No one says "He is not a member of my church" and declines. It is a part of his larger ministry which in Christ he owes to all men. There are no complaints meant by these statements. Such things are the duties of the minister, and he does them for Christ's sake and the love of his work. The last profession on earth a young man should choose is the ministry unless his heart's one desire is to perform these duties. Nor does the professional element enter into his work. Ministers become deeply attached to their people and enter with sincere sympathy into all their troubles and sorrows. And how may pastors be helped in all the burdens of pulpit and pastoral labors? Realize that he, too, needs comfort and encouragement, and thereby help him. Give him your cordial friendship. Do not hold aloof from him because he is your pastor. The ministry is a lonely profession. He is much in public and much in company, and yet his heart is lonely. Many hold aloof from him and when he is about are constantly on the "anxious seat." Treat him as you would any other Christian man and you will help him.

"Gather Up the Crumbs."

The Juniors of the United Methodist Society of Christian Endeavorers, Portsmouth, England, know the value of small gifts. They have a farthing fund and collected last year more than 5,000 farthings, or $25. They gave $50 to an orphan home, paid one-half the cost of a day in the country for forty poor children, breakfasted 168 children at Christmas, sent parcels of groceries to every home represented at that breakfast and supplied coal to a number of poor people.

"Telephone!" he commanded. "There it is. Phone Sommers."

"Yes, Joe, please go when he tells you," urged Lucy.

O'Leary nodded.

"All right; I'm going," he said. He reached the door, then turned and spoke threateningly to the drunken foreman, "See here, Smith, if you touch that girl I'll kill you, and don't you forget it!"

Before Lucy's father could reply he turned and slammed the door after him.

Smith whirled, lurched toward Lucy with his hand upraised, but Pinckney stepped in front of him.

"Here, here, Smith!" commanded the manager sharply. "You've got no time for fooling. Remember, I put you in charge of the Sommers gun."

Smith straightened and leered with a drunken assumption of sarcasm.

"What if you did? Ain't it being done to suit you?"

"Of course it is. I haven't complained, have I?"

The foreman thrust his own face against that of the general manager.

"You'd better not complain!" he sneered threateningly. "I guess I know what's wanted of me."

Pinckney nodded.

"I'm sure you do, Smith," he said blandly. "I have every confidence in you; now go and look out for that gun, and, remember, until that job's out of the way you're boss. Don't let anybody interfere with you!"

The foreman shook one of his big arms.

"If any one interferes with me you know what they'll get," he roared. "You can bet your life on that, and one of them is going to get it quick."

Still muttering threats, he turned and staggered out of the works. Pinckney looked sharply at Lucy.

"You go home and stay there," he said.

The girl hesitated. Fear of what might happen with her father drunk and in charge of such important work gave her unusual courage.

"Excuse me, Mr. Pinckney, but father isn't himself. Do you think it safe to have him in charge tonight?"

The manager frowned so savagely that Lucy trembled.

"Oh, that's what brought you here, was it? You came over to manage the works, did you?" he sneered.

"I was afraid—that gun"— repeated the girl.

Pinckney broke in on her savagely.

"Well, the next time you keep your fears home. When I need you to look out for the works here I'll send for you. Now get out."

He turned from the frightened girl to the office boy, who at last had answered his ring.

"Send Marsh to my private office."

And without another look at the frightened girl the manager strode into his private office and slammed the door. Lucy, crushed and beaten, fearful that she had only made matters worse by coming, was hurrying out when the door from the works again opened, and Joe O'Leary, blood streaming down his face, staggered across the threshold and fell into a chair, gasping:

"He got me."

CHAPTER VIII.

PINCKNEY TAKES THE LEAD.

GIRLS who grow up around the steel works do not develop into the fainting kind. Lucy did not shriek nor even cry out loud. Instead she rushed to her lover, put her arms about him and helped to hold him up, begging tenderly:

"Joe, is it bad? How did it happen?"

The blood was streaming over the man's face, and only his great courage kept him up as, resting in her arms, he gasped out the story.

"Smith—he hit me with a hammer when I wasn't looking—he got me. But don't mind me—I'm—all right. Find Sommers."

"Sommers?" the girl asked, surprised. She could not imagine what Sommers had to do with it.

"Yes," he insisted, "find Sommers. There's something crooked going on. I must get Sommers quick. They hit me because I'm on the level, and Smith didn't want me around. Find Sommers, Lucy—you must find Sommers!"

The girl looked about her blankly. How was she going to find Sommers? And, then, she didn't really care whether she found him or not. Sommers, the gun, everything was secondary to her now, with Joe O'Leary here, maybe dying. But O'Leary had commanded her, and the habit of obedience was strong.

"Where is Sommers, Joe?" she asked. "I don't want to leave you this way. I can't find Sommers."

But the practical assistant foreman, injured though he was, knew what to do.

"There it is. Phone Sommers. Try the Durants. Maybe he is there. Hurry! That's the private one to the house. Tell Sommers to come at once."

Reassured now that she did not have to leave him to do his bidding, the girl ran to the private phone. She rang the bell wildly, half crying into the receiver:

"Hello! Is Mr. Sommers there?"—then her face went blank. "He ain't?" she gasped, then turned from the phone to cry to O'Leary, "Oh, Joe, he ain't there!"

The strength of the bleeding man was going fast, but grim determination to do the right thing kept him up.

"Find out where he is and get him," he commanded.

The girl turned back to the phone, and her voice brightened as she recognized the person at the other end of the wire.

"Oh, is that you, Miss Frances?" she cried. "This is Lucy Smith. Yes, ma'am, I'm at the works. There's been trouble here, and Mr. Sommers must come right away. There's something wrong with the Sommers gun. What? You say come up to your house?"

She looked away from the phone a moment pitifully toward her injured sweetheart, then turned back to the receiver in response to Frances Durant's sharp, anxious command.

"Yes, ma'am. O'Leary made me phone. I want to warn Mr. Sommers. They're trying to spoil his gun. No, ma'am. It ain't sure. We suspect."

Again she hesitated, looking pitifully at her own wounded lover. How could she leave him merely to save the lover of the other woman? But discipline is strong about a steel works, and Frances Durant was the daughter of the owner. So poor little Lucy had no alternative but to obey.

"Yes, ma'am," she shouted into the receiver. "I'll come if you wish. I'll get there in five minutes. I'll run. Yes, ma'am, I'll run. Goodby!"

She hung up the receiver, then hurried over to O'Leary. He sank forward in his chair and rested now partly on the desk before it. The girl put her arms about him.

"Oh, I can't leave you if you are hurt bad, dear!" she half sobbed.

With all the strength he could command O'Leary caught her arm.

"Don't trouble about me. Hurry over and do what Miss Frances tells you and don't tell any one else."

Still the girl hesitated, but just then Marsh entered the office from the works.

"Marsh will take care of me," gasped O'Leary. "Hurry! Do as I told you."

Reluctantly Lucy ran out of the office as the head draughtsman came over to the injured man.

"What's happened, O'Leary?"

The assistant foreman was almost too weak from the shock and loss of blood to reply, but he managed to gasp out faintly:

"Smith cracked me with a hammer when I wasn't looking. He's fighting drunk, Mr. Marsh, and ruining the Sommers gun."

Marsh, experienced about the works, was examining O'Leary's wounded head with almost professional skill.

"You've got a bad rap, boy. We must rush you to the doctor."

He stepped to the door leading into the works and yelled for two men, then came back to do what he could. Pinckney had almost at the same moment returned from his private office.

"What's this?" he exclaimed as he saw the bloody O'Leary half lying across an office table.

The workman, injured though he was, still held to his grim determination to get justice for Sommers. At Pinckney's question he half raised himself on the table.

"It's Smith, sir," he said to the general manager. "He's leaving that gun too long in the furnace. I kicked, and he hit me when my back was turned. I'll fix him."

Pinckney looked at the bloody man coldly.

"You ought to have more sense than to kick," he said. "Smith's in charge of that job. He's responsible. It's none of your business. You ought to have kept your head shut."

O'Leary stared at the manager, too amazed to retort. He was still half dazed from the terrific blow he had received or his suspicions would have been immediately aroused. The two men had entered from the works and stood ready. They knew just what to do.

"Here," ordered Pinckney, "take this fellow across to the doctor quick. Tell him it's a works case."

The two men seized O'Leary, picked him up in their arms and hurried with him out of the office.

Marsh turned to the general manager.

"We've got to stop this, Mr. Pinckney," he exclaimed. "Smith is fighting drunk."

Pinckney nodded carelessly.

"Oh, yes, I understand, but I'll see to Smith. There's something more important on now. I've just got a wire from my agent in Washington."

"About my gun?" asked Marsh anxiously.

"About the Rhinestrom gun," came Pinckney's cold correction.

The head draughtsman nodded acquiescence.

"Yes, that's what I mean," he agreed.

Pinckney took a telegram out of his pocket.

"Well, there's all sorts of trouble in Washington," he explained. "Tomorrow they'll notify us not to begin on the Rhinestrom order until the Sommers gun is tested."

"What of that?" asked Marsh blankly. "It only means a slight delay."

Pinckney made an impatient gesture.

"Slight delay, nothing! Haven't you sense enough to see it's a game of this toy sailor, Sommers? They'll countermand the order for our gun after they test his just as sure as fate."

Marsh dropped into a chair dejectedly.

"Just my luck!" he exclaimed in distress. "That's the end of my royalty. I might have known. It always happens that way with me. I never have any luck."

Pinckney stood looking, a sneering smile on his face.

"That's it," he said contemptuously. "Lay down. That's the reason your luck is always bad and always will be bad. A quitter can't have any luck. How do you expect to have anything if you drop at the first ditch?"

The inventor looked up, puzzled.

"What can I do?" he asked.

Pinckney smiled pityingly on him.

"What can you do? Haven't you sense enough to guess? Here"—he stepped closer to the inventor to speak in a lower, firmer tone—"this dirty, tricky sailor has got the best of us in Washington, but with Smith drunk I guess we've got the best of him here."

Marsh looked up, startled, amazed. Some slight hint of what Pinckney intended began to dawn on him.

"What do you mean?" he asked slowly in an almost dazed tone.

The general manager looked at him sharply.

"What time did you say Sommers would get here?"

"One-thirty," replied Marsh.

Pinckney's laugh was rich with confident relief.

"Well, there's lots of time. It isn't 12 yet," he chuckled.

On Marsh's face had come an expression of horror. He knew now what the general manager intended to do. It made him sick to think of it, for Marsh was honest at heart. Only he was an inventor. He loved his work. It was his chance of a lifetime. And, then, he was weak.

"You mean you will ruin his gun?" he half whispered faintly.

The brutal laugh of the other man was answer enough.

"Shut up!" he sneered. "Don't talk as if it was murder. If you're going to get on in this world, Marsh, you must learn there's as much in blocking the other fellow's game as there is in playing your own."

His latent sense of honesty made one last sickening revolt as Marsh started up from his chair, exclaiming wildly:

"It's awful! I won't be a party to any such thing as that, Mr. Pinckney."

With all his superior physical and mental strength Pinckney seized the weaker man and pushed him back in his chair.

"Don't be a fool, Marsh," he explained, shaking his shoulder fiercely. "You know if we get this order from Washington it means an independent fortune for you. Don't you know that?"

The force of the other stronger personality reacted on the weaker man.

"Yes, sir; you say so," he said.

Pinckney went on more earnestly, driving his points home with all the power of his strong will.

"Think what it means, Marsh. It means the end of this slavery, day after day, at the works. It means you'll have time to work on your inventions. It's your one chance of a lifetime—your one chance, Marsh, to amount to something in this world and"—he ended most persuasively—"and you don't need to have anything to do with this affair. I'll attend to it."

The little man looked up with the gaze of a helpless child.

"What—what do you intend to do?" he asked.

Pinckney smiled, well satisfied.

"Do?" he said. "Nothing. I won't do anything." His look became shrewdly, terribly malevolent as he ended, "Smith will put that gun in the tempering bath before Sommers gets here."

The little man's eyes grew wide with fearful understanding.

"Put it in at too high a temperature and kill it!" he gasped.

Pinckney laughed cruelly.

"Smith has charge of that. If he kills the gun we don't know anything about it," he said.

The little man shivered.

"This is horrible!"

Pinckney's laugh was cold and menacing.

"Horrible," he sneered. "What did you invent your gun for but to murder men and disrupt nations? Now, nobody asked you to do anything, Marsh. Just you go out there and send Smith in to me. Attend to your work and don't notice anything that Smith does."

Marsh looked up weakly.

"Yes, sir," he said, and Pinckney clapped him on the back with real heartiness.

"Now, remember, Marsh, it means your fortune and your future. Be quiet."

When Marsh had gone Pinckney stood thoughtful for a moment.

"What a pity he's such a weak fool," he muttered to himself. Then another thought made him smile with more satisfaction. "Perhaps it's just as well he is such a fool. I couldn't have got away with him so easy otherwise."

Smith came lurching in a little fiercer than before, but Pinckney on occasion knew how to manage even Smith in his fiercest mood.

"See here," he exclaimed, sharply, "that gun must go into the bath before 1 o'clock. No foolishness now! You're fighting drunk, but I don't want anything out of you. Understand, you get that gun in before 1 o'clock if you're ever going to do any more work around this place."

Smith, drunk though he was, recognized that now Pinckney was not the man to fool with.

"It's going in in fifteen minutes," he said.

"Let no one interfere with you, you understand?" ordered the general manager.

The drunken foreman leered at him.

"You saw what that fellow got that did interfere, didn't you? Well, they'll all get that if they fool with Smith."

Pinckney nodded acquiescence.

"You're responsible. Remember, fifteen minutes, that's all."

"I know my business," retorted the foreman. "I'll do the job," and he lurched for the door as fast as he could go.

Pinckney looked after him, with a laugh.

"Well, when that fresh navy duck arrives he will find his gun in a thousand gallons of oil. I guess I fixed him all right."

He was turning away when the street door opened, and Sommers, cool and collected as ever, lounged in.

"Hello, Mr. Pinckney."

He smiled at Pinckney's startled look. "Guess I'm a bit early. Didn't expect me so soon, did you? I'll just hang around here till my gun is taken out of the fire."

CHAPTER IX.

CAUGHT IN THE ACT.

FOR ten minutes Pinckney, suppressing his anger and surprise, managed to talk casually in the office. Then he excused himself on the plea of work and, leaving Sommers, hurried out to see whether Smith had followed directions.

"I'll be out in a few minutes myself," said Sommers as the general manager left. "Expect there is plenty of time, though."

"Oh, yes," Pinckney assured him from the door. "There's plenty of time. Don't hurry. We have our most responsible man in charge of the job."

Out in the furnace room Pinckney found Smith moving about in leisurely fashion, as though he had all the time in the world ahead of him.

"Have you taken out the Sommers gun yet?" demanded the general manager eagerly.

BOWLING.

There was some sensational bowling in the individual tourney at Campbell's alleys last night. High scores were the rule and an even break was the result, each of the competitors winning and losing a series. The scores:

Matthews	178	224	182
Campbell	234	191	162
Matthews	212	194	151

Metuchen Has Good Team.

The Metuchen Football Club met last night for its first practice and many of the old players showed up. After practice a meeting was held when David Kramer was elected manager, and Corbin, Rutgers '08, was elected captain. Mr. Kramer is a well-known business man of Metuchen and has been manager of the Metuchen team for the last three years. Corbin is just the man for captain. He captained the Rutgers football team last year with great success. The club will hold its second annual dance in Robins' hall, Metuchen, Friday night, October 22, rain or shine. Profs. Oppie and Cortelyou will furnish music.

P. H. S. NOTES.

The sophomore class held a second election yesterday afternoon, as the first one was declared void. These officers were chosen: President, Edison Woodhull; vice-president, Gertrude Pryor; secretary and treasurer, Fred Fenno.

Dr. Lyman B. Sperry gave his second lecture to the boys of the High School at noon today. The boys gave him a splendid welcome.

Miss Sminck has been appointed manager for the girls' basketball team. The girls have had one practice and showed up fine.

The football game with Cranford for Saturday has been cancelled. The first game of the season will be played with Westfield on Wednesday, October 13, at Westfield. The team is practicing steadily and should show up in great shape. Windonson won't be able to play for a while, as he has cracked two of his ribs while practicing.

Social at Netherwood Church.

Under the auspices of the Ladies' Guild of the Netherwood Reformed church, a delightful sociable was held in the church Tuesday night. The edifice was attractively decorated with autumn leaves. The affair was an informal one and every one present had a good time. The officers of the Guild are as follows: President, Mrs. G. D. Merkel; vice-president, Miss Maude Berry; secretary, Mrs. R. M. Berwise; treasurer, Mrs. P. H. Wood.

Lane—Edgerton.

Miss Mary Edgerton, daughter of William Edgerton, of Bound Brook, and Ralph Lane, of this city, were married last night at the bride's home. Miss Bertha Edgerton, a sister of the bride, was bridesmaid. Mr. Laing is employed by the Hyatt Roller Brewing Co., of Newark.

—Mrs. Herbert Henry telephoned to police headquarters this morning that an apple thief was getting away with the fruit on her father's place at 829 Berkeley avenue. Patrolman Andrew Saffron was despatched to the scene with orders to arrest the intruder, but the "villian escaped."

L. H. BIGLOW'S THREE WILLS.

Widow's Allowance Reduced in the Third Testament by $40,000.

Three wills of Lucius Horatio Biglow, the banker, were filed yesterday in New York. The first, executed January 17, 1906, leaves to his widow, Anna Graham Biglow, $65,000 absolutely and seven of the twenty-one shares of his residuary estate, the other shares going to his children. The second will, executed three days later, is identical with the first, except that the executors are directed to retain $50,000 to pay his debts.

The third will was executed on May 8, 1906, and reduces the bequest to the testator's wife to $25,000.

Miss Van Winkle's Narrow Escape.

Miss Beulah Van Winkle, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jeremiah Van-Winkle, of East Seventh street, narrowly escaped being killed while waiting at the North avenue station, last night, for the return of her sister from New York. She was standing close to the track, talking to a friend, unmindful of an approaching train. Three loud blasts from the engine did not seem to be sufficient warning, but fortunately Miss Van Winkle and her friend stepped back a pace, just as the train passed, and saved themselves from being crushed.

These Women Pedestrians.

Miss M. H. Cross and her nieces, the Misses Morris, of Morristown, are visitng Planfield and have made it convenient to do so during the State Endeavor convention. They will remain here for two weeks. They are stopping with Mrs. George F. Randolph, of 206 East Front street. The young women are enthusiastic pedestrians and have enjoyed the beautiful scenery in Plainfield and vicinity, having walked to Scotch Plains and Washington Rock, and it is with pleasure they tell of a jaunt from Long Branch to Pleasure Bay.

Thimble Club Meets.

The Thimble Club held a business meeting at the home of Mrs. Jacob Blimm in the New Madison apartments, yesterday afternoon. Plans were discussed for the season's work and it was decided that the club meetings be held every two weeks at the homes of the members. Refreshments were served at the close of the meeting.

Clifford Randolph, who pitched for the Binghamton, New York State League club this season, expects to return there next year. He made a good record this year, considering that it was his first in the fast company, and greater things are expected another year.

DUDLEY BUCK, ORGANIST AND COMPOSER, DEAD

Dudley Buck, an organist and a composer of international reputation, died suddenly of heart disease yesterday in the home of his son, Dudley Buck, Jr., No. 65 Northfield road, West Orange, where he had resided since his return in August from a two years' residence in Europe.

Few Americans have ever held the position in the musical world occupied by Dudley Buck at the time of his retirement from active and public work in 1903. For twenty-five years the musical director at the Church of the Holy Trinity in Brooklyn, his work was looked upon as a standard in devotional music. Outside of his profession he was widely known both in this country and in Europe, where he studied as a young man.

He was born in Hartford, Conn., on March 10, 1839. When scarcely more than a boy Dudley Buck went abroad to study music. After a period as a student of various masters he was graduated from the Royal Conservatory of Music at Leipzig, Germany, among his classmates being Sir Arthur Sullivan. From Leipzig he went to Dresden, Germany, and studied composition under the famous Reitz, and later received instruction from the court organist, Herr Schneider. His education was completed in Paris.

Returning to this country for a time he was organist in St. James' Protestant Episcopal church at Chicago and afterward at Boston. From the latter city he went to Brooklyn to accept the position of musical director at the Holy Trinity church of that city. He was one of the foremost musicians in the Apollo Club and was a director in that organization for more than fifteen years until his retirement in 1903.

Friction between himself and the officials of the Holy Trinity church of Brooklyn, regarding the church music, led to his resignation from the musical directorship in January, 1902. Although numerous offers were made for his services by other churches he retired.

In composition Mr. Buck was unusually prolific. With apparent ease he composed songs, chorals, overtures, orchestral pieces, voluntaries, cantatas, oratories and operas. One of his odes was sung at the Boston Peace Jubilee, his "Golden Legend" reecived a prize and his "Light of Asia" created enthusiasm both in England and America. His comic opera, called "Deseret," written to a libretto by W. A. Croffut and dealing with misadventures among the Mormons, was very successful.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS.

An enthusiastic reception that was accorded Denman Thompson and George W. Ryer's comedy, "Our New Minister," when it made its initial bow at the Plainfield theatre, was such that every person before whom it was presented then may be counted upon to greet the company again on Wednesday, afternoon and night, October 13, when it plays a return engagement at this popular playhouse. To say that "Our New Minister" is delightful from beginning to end, and captured all on its first visit is praise enough, and to add that the company will be exactly the same, and that the presentation will, in every detail, be a counterpart performance of that seen here recently. The demand for seats is very large.

NEW JERSEY'S BANKS SHOW GOOD INCREASE.

According to a report just made by Vivian M. Lewis, State Commissioner of Banking and Insurance, the assets of the savings banks, the trust companies and the State banks of New Jersey were increased $2,826,183.63 during the ten weeks preceding September 1.

The State banks suffered a decrease in assets in that period, but the prosperity of the savings banks and the trust companies more than offset this and made up the handsome increase shown.

During the same time the deposits in all three classes of such institutions increased, the aggregate increase being $2,879,372.88. The aggregate resources of all the institutions covered by this report amounted to $332,632,667.41.

WANTS REPORT ON DR. MOTT.

Elizabeth Presbytery Instructs Committee to Act.

The Elizabeth Presbytery in session at Lamington on Tuesday, instructed the committee which had charge of the application of Henry Elliott Mott for reinstatement to the ministry to have a report as to the disposition of the application ready for the January meeting.

Dr. Mott's application recalls the sensational episodes surrounding his suspension by the Presbytery in July, 1908. It was charged at that time that he had been indiscreet in his conduct toward members of his congregation. He denied any wrongdoing, but is said to have admitted indiscretions. His present place of residence is unknown. Dr. Mott was pastor of the Westminster Presbyterian church at Elizabeth. His salary was $5,000 a year.

HERE AND THERE.

Mr. and Mrs. Hugh P. Colvin and daughters, Edith and Marguerite and sons, Frank and Hugh, Jr., of Springfield, Missouri, are visiting Mr. Colvin's brother, James Colvin, of West End avenue. Mr. Colvin for twenty-five years has been a railroad engineer on one of the important lines of the Chicago, Rock Island Pacific Railroad, and has a record of which any man might feel proud.

Mr. Colvin, like his brother, was born in Hunterdon county, but went west many years ago. He is now weaned away from New Jersey and while he says he likes to visit here, he is so attached to Misouri that he never wants to move from the State. This is Mrs. Colvin's first visit to New Jersey. She is a native of Memphis, Tenn. The family has been making its headquarters at James Colvin's home, while visiting relatives and friends in the East. They will return home next week.

"Teddy" Roosevelt, the pet fox terrier belonging to Thomas B. Titsworth, of the Babcock building, caused great commotion at that busy centre yesterday morning, when he fell out of a second story window, landing on the sidewalk in front of the postoffice. When the canine struck the pavement it gave a yell that could be heard blocks away and attracted a large crowd. Before it was realized what had happened the dog was on its feet and scampered in the main hallway and back to its rooms in the building.

"Teddy" has always been considered a knowing dog and these bright, warm sunny days he likes to take a nap in the window. It was during a doze this morning that he lost his balance and fell to the pavement below. Mr. Titsworth made an examination of the dog afterward but was unable to find that it was injured in any way and seems to be as good as ever.

John W. Harrison, of Gospel wagon fame, who resides on Central avenue, where he announces that "I repair all sick furniture without pain," has just completed the making of a novel headstone which he will erect today in his plot at Hillside Cemetery over the grave of his wife, who died on February 18, 1909. The reason he has selected tomorrow as the day for doing this is that it marks the forty-ninth anniversary of his wedding.

The concrete head-stone which was made by Mr. Harrison, and inscribed by him, is an imposing one. He also made the mould for the stone, as well as each letter for the inscription. On the top of the stone are these words: "The Gospel Wagon Aged Couple on a Long Journey," and the reason for this is that the newspaper headings in describing the journeys of the aged couple invariably used those words.

On the face of the stone is to be found this inscription:

"J. W. Harrison, July 10, 1837—

"The House in which Charlotte Tickle, My Faithful Wife, A Loving Mother and True Christian Lived, Lies Under this Stone. July 21, 1839—February 18, 1909."

The stone is to be placed on another stone base of concrete. On each side of the stone appears the name of "Harrison."

Mr. Harrison was born July 10, 1837, while his late wife was born July 21, 1839. They were natives of England, and prior to coming to this country, Mr. Harrison was a successful china merchant in Liverpool. After coming here the couple began their long Gospel journeys in which they traversed the greater part of this country. For twelve years the couple resided in Philadelphia and subsequently lived in Newark, where Mr. Harrison's health broke down while manager for a factory there. Then the Gospel trip was decided upon.

APPROVE PLANS FOR BRIDGE.

War Department Will Now Get Specifications for Boulevard Link.

Plans for a $200,000 bridge, which is to link the new drive Atlantic county is to build as a section of Governor Fort's ocean boulevard, with the drive Cape May county is building, were approved by a joint meeting of the Atlantic county and Cape May Freeholders yesterday at Atlantic City. The plans now will go to the War Department for approval. The bridge, which will be a half mile long, is to be built across the Great Egg Harbor Inlet.

The new section of the road Atlantic county is building, exclusive of the bridge, will cost $200,000, and Cape May is spending about $100,000 for its road extension.

Sold to Minors, the Charge.

Charges have been preferred before the New Brunswick Excise Board against Charles Shapiro, a Burnet street saloon-keeper, for selling to George Brindle and other minors. The complaint was signed by Chief of Police Michael O'Connell and George A. Glace, an officer of the Elizabeth Wray Memorial Sunday-school. This charge grew out of the "rough housing" of the Wray School last August when windows were broken and shingles torn from the building. Chief O'Connell learned that four or five boys had committed the act while in a hilarious condition. They admitted being intoxicated. The complaint will be pressed.

Rev. Dr. and Mrs. Charles E. Herring are now living at 131 DeLacy avenue, North Plainfield.

LEATHER CO.'S TROUBLES

Mr. Harrington Draws Big Salary as President But Duties Nil Now.

JOHN T. GEORGE'S SINECURE.

Elizabeth Man Gets $8,000 for Filling a $10.00 a Week Job —Their Future Plans.

John T. George of Elizabeth, is drawing a salary of $8,000 a year simply for marking leather in the plant of the Harrington Leather Company at Elizabeth, although his duties are those of an unskilled laborer who is paid $10 a week for the same work. Sometime ago Mr. George and Frederick Harrington, of Rockview terrace, North Plainfield, who was president of the company, sold out their interests to the Central Leather Company, which operates eighty tanneries throughout the country.

A five year contract was signed, and the terms allowed Mr. Harrington $15,000 a year and Mr. George $8,000. The agreement expires next June. When the Central Leather CCompany took charge of the plant, Henry Stockman was sent to take charge of the plant and incidentally asked Mr. George, who was vice-president, to get out. He refused and told the new owners that he would hold on as long as his contract was in effect. He was informed his services in the managerial department were not needed and as a result he is now marking leather for $8,000 a year.

Mr. Harrington still holds the title of president of the concern and is getting $15,000 a year, but, according to Mr. George, his authority is almost nil and his duties compare with those of an office boy. After the contract expires in June, Mr. Harrington and Mr. George will go into the leather business for themselves.

Mr. Harrington is prominent in society affairs in the city and borough and is a vestryman of the Church of the Holy Cross.

A. J. BRUNSON ASKS FOR AN INJUNCTION

Augustus J. Brunson, who was an invited guest at the dinner given by Charles P. Sebring at his home in Greenbrook, yesterday, did not arrive in time to partake of the feast, but he reached there later, in company with a representative from the law offices of Lindabury, Depue & Faulks, and papers were served on the county officials stopping them from further work in the intended plan of removing trees in front of Mr. Brunson's property on Green brook road.

The papers summoned the Board of Freeholders and contractors to appear before Vice-Chancellor F. W. Stevens at Newark, Wednesday morning, October 13, at 10 o'clock, to show cause why an injunction should not be issued to prevent the removal of the trees in question.

OVATION FOR ENDEAVORERS' HEAD

FOUNDER OF ORDER MET AT STATION BY STATE CONVENTION DELEGATES REVIEWS BIG PARADE OF THE JUNIORS.

A crowd estimated at 1,000 Endeavorers met the 2 o'clock train this afternoon at the North avenue station to greet Rev. Dr. Francis E. Clark, the founder of the Christian Endeavor movement. As Dr. Clark stepped from the train he was greeted with a might cheer. An automobile, which was in waiting, whisked him over to the Crescent avenue church, where he reviewed the parad of the Juniors.

Dr. Clark will make two addresses tonight, one at Trinity Reformed at 7 o'clock the other in the First Presbyterian church at 8:15. This will be the last opportunity Endeavorers will have in this State of hearing the president of the National C. E. Union before he starts on his world circling trip in the interests of the movement. The entire special choir of forty voices will be on hand to render the specially arranged music. The meeting at Trinity Reformed church will be free to the public but that at the Presbyterian church will be restricted to delegates wearing badges.

W. Phillips Hall Speaks.

This morning, third day of the convention was ushered in by a morning watch service held at 6:45 and lasting three-quarters of an hour. At 9 o'clock Rev. Charles L. Goodrich, pastor of the Congregational church, led the devotional meeting, and at 9:30 Rev. Abram Duryee spoke on the evangelistic work of the past year and gave a summary of the success attending this department. Rev. Dr. J. R. Janvier led the "quiet hour" service, which was followed by an enthusiastic address by William Phillips Hall, the "Businessman's Evangelist," of New York city. State President Sproull conducted the open "parliament" of the convention.

The evening service last night had a pleasant feature which was a surprise to most of the delegates and other visitors. A new hymn of which a copy will be found below, composed by Miss Nellie K. Foot, district secretary for Union county, was sung with surprising vigor by the entire audience, to the tune of Eulation, by Cutler, which is a part of nearly all the protestant hymnals.

Big Crowd Present.

The treasurer's report showed an actual deficit of about $90, which was wiped out before the evening came to a close. The auditorium of the church was filled to overflowing and standing room only was obtainable after the choral service. Rev. Dr. Charles R. Erdman, of Princeton, gave a masterly address on "Personal Relation to Christ," in which he emphasized the importance of service, having the spirit, knowing the perfection and the power of the Savior.

Following Dr. Erdman's address an informal reception was held welcoming visitors, delegates and "travelers" from St. Paul. Rev. Charles M. Anderson, pastor of the First Methodist church, read the Scripture and offered prayer, the whole convention adding the Lord's prayer at the end. John I. Sproull, State president was in charge of the meeting instead of the speaker announced on the program.

The report of the executive secretary, Miss Ida B. Stevens, was read by Miss Emily Edwards, of Hackensack, and summarized is as follows: During the year 79 societies have been added showing an increase in membership of nearly 5,000. Twenty societies disbanded and some that have not yet been heard from may increase this number, but the trend has always been upward. The total workers for "Christ and the Church" may be safely said to be nearly 32,000. Two societies will have to divide the "increase" banner between them, the First Presbyterian, of Cape May City and Emanuel Baptist, of Paterson, whose percentage of increase is 300. In the intermediate roll two others are tied—Bergen Reformed, of Jersey City, and the Prospect Park, of Paterson, both having an increase of 100 per cent. The Cramer Hill Baptist chapel heads the junior list with an increase of 350 per cent.

The increase is marked all through the State and the Central Baptist of Newark, comes in for special commendation because the society is composed of girls and has the largest enrollment (211). During the year 1,675 Christian Endeavors have joined the church, nearly 700 more than was reported last year; and making the record stand at 5,200 for the past four years.

Much Good Done.

More than $21,000 has been contributed for Missions during the year and more than one half was sent through denominational channels. The First Presbyterian society, of Newark, leads in this respect with $575, the First Presbyterian, of Westfield, coming next with $410.

The pledges given at Atlantic City a year ago have borne fruit the District Secretaries having met the requirements of the pledge in a largely increased way, making the showing greater than was even anticipated. The secretary says that a deeper spiritual tone has been given to all the work. All the unions have been strengthened through the realization of their responsibilities. The Endeavorers who have sent in papers on this subject are: I. W. Martine, of the Clifton Reformed Society, Susan V. Knox, Alexander Hill, and Ellen Whittaker, all of the First Presbyterian Society, of New Brunswick; Rev. A. MacGregor of the First Baptist church, of Hasbrouck Heights, and Miss Clara Elias, Miss Susie Weimar and O. P. Parthmore, of the same society.

Forty-seven Unions.

There are forty seven unions in the State, three having been added during the year—Bound Brook, Somerville and Paterson Junior.

The veteran banner was captured this year by the Essex County Junior Union, they having registered the largest proportionate increase, 48 per cent. Camden Junior won this banner in 1907 and 1908.

The report ends with a eulogy of State President Sproull, which the secretary says is deserved. She says that Mr. Sproull has devoted himself, body, soul and spirit to the work of the Master and gives him the title

CHARTER DAY'S TIDINGS

Mr. Marshall Would "Show Up" the "Souvenir" Program Delinquents.

THE ADVERTISERS WON'T PAY.

The Much Belated Expense Account Won't Be Given to Subscribers for the Time Being.

The previous announcement that a report of the Charter Day committee, including a financial statement from the treasurer, would be presented, attracted a large number of people to the October meeting of the Board of Trade, last night. In a measure the long delayed report was a disappointment, for it was not complete. Only the expense account was made public, it being impossible, so it was stated, to prepare the complete list of receipts at this time. This will be done a little later, when the local newspapers will be given the detailed report.

The officers were not willing that the expense account should be made public, until the whole thing is completed, but it was learned that there were expenditures of $7,51 .86, with a balance of $33.05, and an indebtedness of $456, which future receipts from the Nation Press, in connection with advertisements in the official Charter Day book are expected to liquidate. It was explained that the $1,000 donated by the city did not pass through the hands of Treasurer E. M. Laing.

President Marshall stated that no settlement had been made with the Nation Press as yet, because of the advertisements had not been paid for. There were twenty five subscribers and there is a balance of $421.65 still unpaid. He explained that the Nation Press could assign the bills to the board for collection, but this was not thought advisable. Yet every dollar is needed. He dedid not say how many or how few of the issue of "Souvenir" booklets had actually been sold or issued. Mr. Marshall stated that the deficit was caused by the badge committee. "That put us in bad," said the president. "The chairman of the committee insisted on securing 15,000 badges. We knew conditions and the chairman didn't, that's all."

Mr. Marshall wanted the members to know that it was the Galaschaun and the official Charter Day book that had "pulled the committee out of a hole." If the publishers do not collect the balance due, the board will not get all of the 40 per cent of the net receipts. It was explained that the publishers had had collectors here for days at a time, but the delinquent advertisers always had an excuse to make. Mr. Marshall said he wanted to "show them up" but the committee would not stand for this. "Because a man is a member of the board," said Mr. Marshall "is no reason why his name should not be published if a delinquent."

On motion of Edmund Rushmore, the P. S. C. was thanked for its illumination of the city during the celebration, and all contributors were also thanked.

Upon the suggestion of R. Frank Coriell, it was announced that as soon as completed a detailed statement of every expense will be published in the newspapers.

ABUSED HORSEWHIP ON HIM

School Marm Lashed Her Dismissed Suitor on the Street.

CHARLES SNYDER" VICTIM.

Alleged Plainfielder Lashed by New Brunswick Woman in Peaceful Quaker City.

Alza M. Selton, described as a school teacher at New Brunswick, went to Philadelphia Wednesday night in search of Charles Snyder, a salesman alleged to live here, who she alleges "talked shamefully" about her after she refused to marry him, as told exclusively in this paper yesterday.

She met him yesterday afternoon at Fifty-second and Race streets and without any words she grabbed a horsewhip from a buggy standing near by and thrashed him thoroughly with it. Snyder ran and in his flight boarded the street car. Miss Selton followed him and plied the whip through the car and off the front platform. The race continued until the Fifty-second street station of the Market street elevated railroad was reached, when Snyder ran up the stairs and boarded a train. Miss Selton followed up the stairway but was unable to get her money from her purse to purchase a ticket before the train started and Snyder was safe.

Miss Selton says she was engaged to marry Snyder, but gave him up on account of his drinking habits. A reconciliation was effected, but he did not improve and she threw him over for good. It was succeeding this that she alleges he said nasty things about her.

The name "Charles Snyder" is believed here to be a fictitious one.

TUNNEL CONNECTION TALK

Board of Trade President Says Jersey Central Will Use Tube Within Year.

CONFIRMATION IS LACKING.

McAdoo People Know Nothing About It—Jersey Central's Plans With Pennsylvania?

Confirmation could not be obtained today concerning the statement made by President Harry W. Marshall at the Board of Trade meeting last night that within a year the people of Plainfield would have the benefit of tunnel connections with New York via the Jersey Central. Mr. Marshall told the members of the board that he had the information to impart to them, backed by official authority. He did not mention his informant's name and in explanation of this said that he was not at liberty to divulge it.

When a representative of The Daily Press sought corroboration of the story at the banking offices of Harvey Fish & Sons, the Hudson Tunnel Company's financial backers doubt was cast upon it. Vice-president Wilbur C. Fisk, of the Hudson company, said that it would be a physical impossibility for his company to dig a tunnel within a year's time. He added that he did not know what, if any, arrangement the Jersey Central might have with the Pennsylvania Railroad Company. At the present time the P. R. R. is using the McAdoo tunnels to New York and Mr. Fisk said that his company would be glad to transport Jersey Central passengers, if that road brought its passengers to its tube, which now connects with the Pennsylvania's station at Jersey City.

Vice-president and General Manager William G. Besler was not at his office this morning and could not be located. His chief clerk said he knew nothing about the matter. General Passenger Agent William C. Hope was not at his office and he could not be found. His chief clerk said that he would not be surprised if some arrangement had or would be made for the use of tunnel connection. The rumor is an old one and it is not generally supposed that the Jersey Central will have tube service for a long time to come.

Former Actress Evangelist.

Mrs. Florence Worth Duncombe and her thirteen-years-old daughter, Kittie, will conduct a series of evangelistic services at Salvation Army hall beginning to morrow evening and continuing until Sunday, October 17. Mrs. Duncombe is a former well known English actress. Her daughter is specially gifted in evangelistic work.

They come to his office from far and away, from far away over the hills;

They care not a whit what the others may say, they want no opinion but Bill's.

In office, in church and in bank, he's a prize; the way people trust him is great,

And in Somerset County no folks ever dies, 'till they've hired him to fix their estate.

THEIR RECTOR RESIGNS

Rev. Wm. R. Mulford to Leave All Saints Church, Fanwood, on Nov. 1.

HE GOES TO BOLTON, N. Y.

Generally Popular Clergyman Has Served All Saints' Church for Twelve Years.

Rev. William R. Mulford has resigned as rector of All Saints' church, Fanwood, after twelve years' devoted and appreciated service. His resignation takes effect on Monday, November 1, when he assumes the pastorate of Saint Sacrament church, Bolton, N. Y. His new charge will bring him into a larger field of usefulness.

Rev. Mr. Mulford succeeded Rev. W. F. True as rector twelve years ago. During his ministry the church was dedicated, the debt on the edifice having been discharged. He has been exceptionally successful in his parish work and his loss will be deplored generally at both Scotch Plains and Fanwood, where he was very popular with people of all creeds. Before his departure the townsfolk will show their appreciation of him at a farewell reception.

All Saints' church was organized by the late much-beloved Rev. Erskine M. Rolman, as rector of Grace church, this city. Its usefulness was great under Mr. Mulford, who is a liberal-minded, wholesouled clergyman, who has endeared himself to his people. The vestry has made no announcement of Rev. Mr. Mulford's successor.

CONSCIENCE PRICKED HIM; YOUNG GRAY RETURNS

Arthur Gray, the young man employed by W. E. Van Court, of Oak Tree, who disappeared with the excursion for Gettysbury last Sunday, taking with him a bicycle which he had not paid for, returned to his former employer's home last night having ridden the entire distance on the wheel. He says that he was persuaded by two other young men on the excursion train to go with them, but after a day of wandering his conscience smote him so hard that he made up his mind to return and forego his contemplated trip to the South.

He returned to Mr. Van Court's home this morning with a very contrite heart and wants to get back to work. He was compelled to return the bicycle to Jack Horner before doing anything else. Mr. Van Court is not sure whether he will keep the young man or not, but he believes that the romance of the easy life in a Southern State has been completely knocked out of Gray by the hardships experienced in the return journey of several hundred miles.

Our $15 & $16 Fall Suits for Men

Justify All Our Claims

To build quality and shapeliness into clothing regardless of price is our constant aim—and we hit the mark.

We never allow any lowering of standard in modeling, tailoring and finish because of the selling figure. In this respect we bring our garments of the less expensive fabrics up to the general high tone of those of more costly materials.

The exclusive fabrics and distinctive models of Our Fall Suits at $15 and $16 afford ample justification of all our claims.

At $15, the man of a conservative turn may choose from all wool unfinished worsteds in neat stripe effects.

At $16, the young man to whom a striking individuality appeals may select from a host of smart patterns in London-cut Suits.

Among our wide showing of Fall Suits priced from $10 to $30 it would be difficult to find a fancy that cannot be pleased.

Fall Overcoats $12 to $30

The man who hasn't seen our new Fall Overcoats in the fancy striped effects has missed seeing the smartest Over-garments in town. There are tricks of fashion in the treatment of collars and cuffs which take the fancy of young men who demand distinctive apparel. Then here are also models and patterns to please the more conservative, including oxfords and blacks.

Boys' Fall Suits, Topcoats and Reefers

In our provision of clothing for boys of every age and temperament we exercise the same exacting care in the selection of fabrics and the same tailoring skill in the making that has given our men's garments such a high reputation.

Here is an unusual collection of Boys' Fall Suits, Top Coats and Reefers—clothing of a character and quality to stand the most strenuous wear and keep your youngster well dressed. All the new Fall shades and wanted materials are represented at prices ranging from $4 to $16.

Men's 1.50 Gloves, Spe'l 1.15

This is an unusual glove offering and is getting the attention of the thrifty-wise. These are regular M. & B. $1.50 Cape Gloves, in the popular Fall shades of tan.

Nassau Shoes for Men, 3.50

M. & B. $3.50 Nassau Shoes are superior in quality to any other shoe at the price. In style and shapeliness they equal most shoes sold at $5. All leathers.

Brooklyn, 7; New York, 5.
Boston, 3; Philadelphia, 1.

National League baseball for the season of 1909 came to an end yesterday, when the Giants dropped a game to the Brooklyns and the Bostons beat the Phillies. Brooklyn's victory made its occupancy of sixth place sure, the St. Louis Cardinals, after giving them a close battle, being forced back.

ELIZABETH LODGE OF ELKS OPEN BIG BAZAR

Elizabeth is veritably in the hands of the Elks and their friends. The local lodge inaugurated its ten-day bazar last night with pomp and splendor. The ceremonies included a big street parade, fireworks, a band and other joy-producing features. Elks from other cities, women friends of the lodge and prominent Elizabethans were entertained in the new Elks' home on Westfield avenue.

The home, which has been remodeled into a splendid structure, was ablaze with light and bunting, the royal purple of the order predominating in the color scheme.

The parade passed through the principal streets of the city, and thousands were on hand to watch the marchers. The twenty-five automobiles in the procession were uniquely bedecked. More than 500 Elks were in line and received tumultous cheering all along the route.

Two thousand incandescent lamps made the interior of the new home aglow with brilliancy. Thirty booths which filled the spacious floors were attended by young women, more than 100 of whom will remain on duty until Saturday evening, October 16. The funds raised will be devoted to paying for the new home, which was formerly the Williamson mansion. A feature of the affair will be visiting delegations, for there is hardly a city in the State that boasts of a lodge that will not be represented at the affair during the next ten days.

In addition to the display of a variety of articles at the booths, some of which are of great value, there will be an entertainment program each evening, including dancing in the upper hall.

Peter Daly, a Middlesex County orator and Elk, was the principal speaker at the opening of the bazar last night. He was introduced by General D. F. Collins, chairman of the committee in charge. General Collins formally opened the bazar, extending a welcome to the visitors.

Raymond Hubbell is responsible for the score and Robert B. Smith for the book and lyrics of B. C. Whitney's latest musical success, "A Knight for a Day," which will be seen at the Plainfield theatre on Monday night. They had already attained a wide repute through "Mexicana" and "Fantana" before Manager Whitney secured their later effort for the opening attraction at the Faddists' Theatre in Chicago, which he took over and gave his name to. It was such a pronounced success there that it established a record entirely its own for a prolonged run of musical comedy. It was performed 607 times in the Western Metropolis and moved from there to Wallack's theatre in New York, where it ran for six months. It then went to Boston and delighted the theatre patrons of the Hub City for three solid months, continuing at the Tremont theatre for the entire summer. Comedian Frank Doshon heads the big list of fun makers engaged for the interpretation of the famed comedy roles of the piece, and he is said to be scoring the biggest success of an eminently long and successful career in the role of "Jonathan Joy." The supporting company is one typical of the Whitney trade-mark, and the chorus has been rehearsed under the personal direction of Gus Sohlke. It would not be a Whitney attraction without an electrical display of magnificent grandeur, and all who have seen it are of the opinion that it excels anything this well-known producer has ever given the public. The electrical pageants at the end of each of the two acts are said to be a happy co-mingling of present-day electrical science and modern stage-craft. Of the many song numbers which have been whistled by the audiences in every city so far visited, the most notable are, perhaps, "Whistle When You Walk Out," "I'd Like Another Situation Just Like That," "Hurrah! Hurra! Hurro! For That," "Life is a See-Saw," "The Little Girl in Blue," and "You Never Told Me That Before We Married."

If you happen to meet Manager Downs nowadays, you will notice that he wears the smile that won't come off. The reason of this is that he secured Denman Thompson and Geo. W. Ryer's comedy, "Our New Minister" for a return date on Wednesday afternoon and night. Rarely if ever has a new play caught the popular fancy of Plainfield as did this one on its first visit. Thompson and Ryer built better than they knew when they wrote this play. It is far and away superior to their "Old Homestead." There is a subtle something about it that pleases all classes of people, and it will be in its prime when all of its contemporaries shall have been forgotten. "Our New Minister" is a play of everyday life in a small rural New England community, with its serious as well as its humorous sides, and it bears an element of human interest that will hold the attention of every individual with its keen insight into human fads and fancies. The same excellent cast will appear.

Lillian Russell ends her New York run in "The Widow's Might" about the middle of October and is booked for an early appearance in Plainfield, when she will offer here her original New York production and cast of Edmund Day's pleasing comedy of present day life in and about the great financial district of Wall Street. It will be the first local appearance of the famous American beauty in several seasons and is an engagement freighted with interest to theatregoers. In this new play Miss Russell has scored the artistic hit of her career, the metropolitan critics with one accord recognizing her splendid development and the fact that she is today the foremost of American comediennes and an actress of charm and winning personality.

THE DAILY PRESS.

OVATION FOR DR. CLARK

of the master workman in the vineyard. Miss Stephens, the State Secretary, who is unable to attend this convention because of the illness of her mother, was prayerfully remembered by the entire convention. A letter was received from Miss Stephens this morning in which she told of the extreme weakness of her mother and her disappointment at being absent from this convention. 8,000 new societies are promised for the convention of 1911.

Devotional Service.

The devotional services which opened the afternoon session were led by Rev. O. J. McKelvey, pastor of Warren chapel, this city. Then came an interesting story of the workings of the Missionary Department by its superintendent, Miss Josephine Wyckoff. Rev. L. B. Hillis, who comes all the way from the sunny Phillipines, gave his ideas on junior societies and they proved a revelation to his auditors. At several points in the course of his address he was stopped by applause that he will find pleasure in recalling when he returns to his Manila charge.

Pauses, caused by applause also made the Rev. E. M. Gearhart's talk to stretch over a longer period than the speaker originally thought it would. Perhaps for direct interest this address was a feature of the day. Mr. Gearhart is the successful young superintendent of prison work of the Pennsylvania union. He said that there were 9,000 boys behind prison bars in the Keystone State and that the prison wardens agreed with him that all of them needed spiritual care. The boys themselves ask for it, he declared, as in the instance of a prison containing 110 men of whom 72 asked that they be allowed to form a Bible class.

On Redemption.

A boy who worked in a bank forged a check for $15,000, according to the speaker, and was apprehended and sent to prison. While in jail the chaplain took him in hand and succeeded in reforming him. Then the chaplain went to the bank told the officials of the reformation of the imprisoned boy, whose term was nearing an end, and asked them to give the forger his old job back when he should be in a position to take it. The bank officials were startled at the idea of giving their erring employee another chance, but finally were persuaded to do so. The boy is now a trusted official of the bank. Mr. Gearhart gave this case as one of his reasons for believing that a jailbird should be entitled to chance and a job.

Rev. E. M. Hallenbeck, D. D., of New York city, argued for heroic Christianity. He deplored what he termed the "I can't" and "I'll try" brand of Christianity, and appealed for the "I must" kind. He spoke in short, energetic jerks and drove his every statement home to the listeners. Dr. Hallenbeck was followed by Rev. F. W. Johnson, D. D., superintendent of the Christian Citizenship and Sabbath Observance department, with an all-round patriotic talk.

Dr. Hallenbeck Scores.

He electrified the convention. He shot at it truths about present-day problems—Wall Street, local option and desecration of the Sabbath. He was sorry that so many respectable men opened their newspapers at the stock market page. Wall street, he stated, stood for indolence; its worshippers jeered at the most uplifting of conditions, industry. Dr. Johnson hit sharply at the friends of the Allwell bill, whom he said were confident of passing the measure at Trenton this winter.

Rev. W. B. Greenway, superintendent of the Bible Study department, said that he thought well of a special day in each week when every society in the state would study a given Bible topic. He asked those who favored the idea to stand and practically the entire convention rose. Mr. Greenway and the delegates are to get together and arrange to work out the plan.

The appointment of these committees was announced: Committee on audit, J. W. Weston and P. R. Neusle; committee on resolutions, Rev. W. B. Greenway, Adelbert Chapman and E. W. Gulick, and Messrs. Thomas and LaRue.

New Jersey State C. E. Hymn.

Air—"The Son of God Goes Forth to War."

Endeavorers for our Lord the King,
Enlisted for the fray,
Our hearts and talents now we bring
And on the altar lay.
New Jersey for our King we claim,
The battle we wil press,
Take up the conflict in His Name,
Proclaim His righteousness.

From Sussex hills to Cape May pines,
Extol your sovereign Lord,
Till through our Garden State entwines
Endeavor's golden cord
Till men, forsaking sin's dark way,
Shall know the peace of light,
Redeemed, shall own the Saviour's sway
And battle for the right.

Grant, Lord, that from the hearts of youth,
In this glorious State,
The power of Christ, the love of truth,
Shall banish sin and hate.
And grant that we who follow Thee
May ever be sincere,
Exalt our pledge, live loyally,
Thy holy Word revere

God of our great Endeavor host,
Our hearts to Thee we raise;
From mountain vale and ocean coast
We join in hymns of praise.
We laud the Christ of Galilee,
Our alleluias bring;
The Shepherd of our souls is He,
Our Saviour, Priest and King.

Parade This Afternoon.

One of the features of the Christian Endeavor convention was the parade of the junior societies of the several church this afternoon. The parade formed on the square near the Crescent avenue church and headed by a platoon of patrolmen in command of Sergeant Overbaugh. Followed by Suhr's military band they marched down Crescent avenue to Eighth street, to Madison avenue, to Fifth street to Park avenue, to Front street, thence to the First Presbyterian church where a flag drill was held and the children given a highly interesting talk, illustrated by crayons, by Rev. Dr. Robert F. Y. Pierce, of New York city.

Each of the societies was headed by its superintendent of Junior work and they marched in double file like a regiment of little soldiers flags a-flying and faces radiant with the exhilaration of pride in their importance. There were about six-hundred children in line and they presented a fine appearance.

Special Trains Arrive.

The pages who have been faithful to an arduous trust had their hands full this morning attending to the new arrivals and setting them on the right track for the church. Two special trains arrived this morning bringing about seven-hundred more delegates who are specially drawn to the convention to hear for the last time before he goes abroad Rev. Dr. Clark. It is expected that overflow meetings will be necessary in other churches in order to accommodate the crowds. The pages who have worked so hard are Robert and William Dow, Harold and Stanley Humbert, Lawrence and Elmer French, Frank Dunning, Henry Kenney and Ralph Martin.

The patrolmen under Sergeant Overbaugh were Flynn, Messler, O'Keefe, Payne, Nolan and Henderson.

Following the "morning watch," which was held from 6:45 to 7:30 o'clock, this morning and led by State President Sproull, the convention session opened at 9 o'clock, with devotional services in charge of Rev. C. L. Goodrich, pastor of the Congregational church. A. Harry Moore, vice-president, presided at this session.

Colored Preacher Talks.

After the devotional service, there was a brief consideration of work among colored people and affiliated societies. There was an earnest address by Rev. J. J. Adams, colored, of Red Bank, who was taken special interest in Endeavor work among the people of his race. He told of the progres being made by the colored people of the State in Endeavor work and prophesied a better and brighter day for his people. He declared that they fully appreciated all the efforts put forth to educate and train the colored people in religious matters.

The evangelistic department was treated by the State superintendent, Rev. Abram Duryee, of Hackensack. His address was filled with earnest words, helpful suggestions and all was deeply spiritual. HHe declared that when one stops to look at statistics it makes one ashamed as to what has been accomplished. The great need today, he asserted, is for those who will stand between Christ and men. Christ is coming to bridge that chasm, but just now it is all-important to have someone do this work.

State Superintendent's Remarks.

The speaker made an earnest appeal to all to stand in this gap, between Christ and man. Referring to the great missionaries of recent times, Mr. Duryee said that when David Livingston died in Africa, a great light went out, and a powerful light went out when Dwight L. Moody was taken away.

"Who among us here today," said Mr. Duryee, "stands willing to take the other man's place. The test of ones religious life is to be found in the spontaniety with which they respond. The athlete rejoices in his strength. The runner keeps his eye on the goal, rather than on the starting point. Keep your eyes on the work you are doing. Cultivate There are abundant opportunities ThTere are abundant opportunities offered to do something for Christ and His kingdom, if we will accept them. We cannot talk about religion too much. Where one does this there are a thousand who do not.

"Think of the thousands of commuters you come in contact with every day and how easy it would be to converse with them about their soul's salvation. If we would only seek out these opportunities, there would be a revival that would shake New Jersey from one end to the other. I urge you to constantly read your Bible and pray. Dare to do the hard things in life. Christ died for you, but what sacrifice are you making for Him?"

Greetings were received from Rev. J. E. Rogers, Rev. Dr. Arthur Willis Spooner and Mrs. P. H. Bennett, earnest Endeavor workers and they were filed.

Rev. Dr. Janvier Here.

In the absence of Rev. Floyd W. Tomkins, S. T. D., of Philadelphia, who was called home last night, the "Quiet Hour" service was in charge of Rev. Dr. J. R. Janvier, pastor of the Holland Memorial Presbyterian church, Philadelphia. Dr. Tomkins conducted this service yesterday and it was one of the most spiritual and helpful of the day.

Dr. Janvier paid a deserving tribute to Dr. Tomkins, adding that it would be impossible for him to take the latter's place, but he was very glad to be present and bring a message from the Master. He then spoke on some of the dangers which confront Endeavorers. He said that all have a serious responsibility. It is a dreadful thing to be elected to a position of responsibility, not that we should refuse such honors, but that one should fui realize the importance of it.

The first danger referred to was that of self-confidence, that of having a good opinion of one's self, conceit. Another danger presented was that of unreality, no insincerity exactly, but just a habit of appearing unreal. Don't say something simply because people expect you to do so.

Get Near Jesus.

"We can all help men to be better than ourselves," said Dr. Janvier. "We need Jesus Christ, just Him, and that personal contact which will surely follow. We don't need a long distance telephone to get in touch with Christ. He is right here now, through His Holy Spirit. Jesus, Son of Mary, my Brother, bone of my bone and flesh of my flesh. That's what our experience should be constantly. A man cannot be unreal if he has Jesus with him. Get in touch with Jesus Christ and you will surely have that personal relationship which every true Christian should have.

Business Man Evangelist.

Rev. William Phillips Hall, the "business mans evangelist," spoke to a large audience in the First Presbyterian church this morning. The gathering was made up largely of Endeavorers. He spoke of the supreme thing for Christian Endeavorers to do from the moment of joining the society—to win souls for Jesus Christ. He said that all were called just as the apostles of old were called to sperad the Gospel and in neglecting to do this they fell short of the requirements and failed to measure up to the full stature of the faith. Mr. Hall punctuated his address with illustrative anecdotes and his narrative of his own early Christian life was interesting. He made several suggestions for the propagation of the gospel among people out side of the church and ended by appealing for clean hearts for the reception of the Holy Spirit.

Reports of the conferences held by the prayer, lookout and evangelistic committees were given in the open "parliament" presided over by President Sproull and many practical suggestions were received.

Church was Overcrowded.

Chief T. O. Doane's attention was called today to the apparent overcrowding of the First Presbyterian church, where the Endeavor convention is being held and he made an inspection this afternoon during the Junior exercises. He found all aisles blocked, as well as the vestibules, and immediately took steps to remedy the difficulty and lessen the danger in case of fire or panic.

PIANO CONTEST FAKES EXPOSED!

IMPORTANT FACTS FOR HOLDERS OF GOLD BONDS, PIANO COUPONS AND DISCOUNT CERTIFICATES.

There are several Piano houses which have no prices for their goods except grossly inflated ones arranged expressly for fake discounts in connection with schemes of various kinds. These houses seem to find it impossible to dispose of their pianos in a legitimate, straightforward way, but instead resort to one scheme after another—catch-penny devices, so crude as to be positively insulting to the intelligence of the public. These schemes usually take the form of guessing contests, drawing puzzles and various feats of little skill. In all of them the object is identical to mislead the prospective buyer into the belief that he is getting something for nothing, while at the same time prices are arranged sufficiently high to off-set the allowance to which his prize certificate entitles him.

EVERYONE WHO MAKES A GUESS GETS A PRIZE!

If you have ever answered one of these ads you received a discount certificate. EVERYBODY DOES. It matters not whether the answer is good, bad or indifferent, from adult or child it draws a prize in the shape of a certificate or due bill (generally from $65.00 to $100.00) to apply on the purchase of a new Piano. Of course the price of the Piano is fixed accordingly and the purchaser pays a high price even after the amount of certificate is deducted, usually a much higher price than an instrument of similar quality could be secured for in any legitimate music store.

To test the value of one of these certificates present it in payment for something other than a new piano—say a low priced used piano, music cabinet or a bench, and see how quickly the dealer will turn you down. He will not even give you 50 cents worth of music for it. Try the experiment!

AT $185.00 WE WILL SELL A BETTER PIANO THAN THE SCHEME HOUSES ASK $325.00 TO $400.00 FOR! Such well known and high grade makes as Haines Bros., Brewster, the Genuine Mathushek and others too numerous to mention.

SOME STATE NEWS BRIEFS

George McFadden, of Glassboro, has not missed a Sunday school session at the M. P. church in six years.

Only 200 additional voters registered at the sitting of the Atlantic City registry boards Tuesday. Over 10,000 voters at the primaries broke the registry record of the city.

The cranberry crop in South Jersey is one of the finest in years. Edward Durrell, of Woodbury, has gathered over 30,000 bushels, and M. M. Chew, of Cecil, nearly 10,000 bushels.

Columbus Day falling on the day for opening the fall term of Atlantic County Courts, Sheriff Johnson has advised jurors and attorneys that the court will not be opened until Wednesday.

The Woman's Hebrew Society of Vineland announces the opening next Sunday of a free Hebrew school in the Jewish Synagogue on Grape street. A teacher from Philadelphia has been engaged.

Five hundred invitations have been sent out for the twenty-fifth wedding anniversary of Rev. and Mrs. DeWitt C. Cobb, of Bridgeton, which will be celebrated on October 15. Mr. Cobb is pastor of Trinity M. E. church.

Residents of Dorchester, seven miles below Millville, were startled Wednesday to see a buck deer lope through the principal street of that thriving village. The baying of hounds in the distance told of the cause of its flight.

Upon complaint of State Oyster Superintendent Bacon Wednesday, Henry M. Lee, an oyster planter, at Bridgeton, was arrested charged with illegal dredging. He waived a hearing and was held in $500 bail for his appearance at court.

The wine-making season in Egg Harbor City is about over, this year's grape crop having been the heaviest in the town's history. The wine-makers have utilized every vacant space in their vaults and every cask is filled to its capacity. The industry here is prosperously growing.

All of the Protestant denominations of Millville have united to celebrate for eight successive days the centennial of the first religious service in that place, beginning Sunday, October 17. A number of eminent ministers will deliver addresses and many special features will be introduced.

Among the questions to be discussed at a meeting of the Gloucester County Pomona Grange, at Clayton, at the next meeting, is "Should Bachelors be taxed?" Mrs. Theodore Fleetwood and Mrs. Lillie Moore will take the affirmative side, and Elmer Bradshaw and Harry C. Howey the negative.

Convicted of three charges of breaking and entering, John Weiwadel was sentenced to five years in State prison from the Camden Criminal court Wednesday. He broke into the home of Mrs. Ida Davenport, at Collingswood; E. G. Locke, Sixth and Linden streets, and Mrs. Jennie Hires, Sixth and State streets.

The strike at the Williamstown glass works has been ended, and the "snapping-up" boys will go to work Monday at the same old wages. The majority of them have already signed agreements. The company's threat to close the plant entirely and transfer its orders to Cape May Courthouse brought the strikers to terms.

An industrial parade is to be given in Camden on November 9, under the direction of the Business Improvement Association. It is being planned to have floats and many handsomely decorated wagons in the line. The city firemen will take part in the demonstration to celebrate the fortieth anniversary of the paid fire department.

At the annual convention of the Cumberland County Sunday school Association at Fort Norris, Thursday, October 14, the speakers will be Rev. E. Morris Fergusson, of Atlantic City; Rev. W. T. Pennell, of Cedarville; Rev. Frank Anderson, of Millville; Rev. J. B. Haines, of Vineland; Rev. Emil Weber and Rev. Albert Gage, of Bridgeton.

James Absalom, of Florence, was surprised when a stranger insisted on paying him a bill he claimed he owed. Absalom refused to take the money and found that he had been mistaken for John Watts, an engineer on the Pennsylvania Railroad. The two men met for the first time Wednesday, and their resemblance is so striking that they hardly knew which was the other.

The Atlantic City police believe that an organized gang of thieves looted the store of Samuel Rothoiz, within a block of the city hall, and on one of the most brilliant lighted corners of the city. The thieves backed a wagon up to the back door of the store and forced a door, selecting only high-priced evening clothes. A big pile of supplies was taken from a hotel in the neighborhood Tuesday night.

A big freight automobile smashed into and wrecked the bridge between Mays Landing and Egg Harbor, and the Board of Freeholders was informed at its meeting Wednesday that the county will probably be forced to rebuild the structure. The heavily loaded machine tore out railings and planks and sank deep in the swamp alongside the road. Men with teams and jacks worked all night to get it out.

Supporters of the Atlantic City beachfront park project are pleased over the decision of the Supreme Court in refusing to order a review of the action of Council in appointing commissioners to condemn the lands of Joseph Brady. Under the decision City Solicitor Wootton believes that all obstacles to the condemnation of property whose owners refuse to sign park deeds have been wiped out, and the only question left is the amount of damages to be fixed.

The first move in an intended war on the sale of impure milk in Atlantic City was made Wednesday, when George Simons, of Egg Harbor, was fined $25 by District Court Judge Ingersoll for vending alleged watered milk. Simons declared that he had done nothing to the milk after he received it from the dairy farm, but Assistant District Attorney General Stryker, who conducted the prosecution, showed that the law makes no provision for ignorance in the sale of milk below standard.

Noticing several boys acting in a suspicious manner in the vicinity of the elevated tracks of the West Jersey and Seashore Railroad at Spruce street, Camden, Wednesday, Special Officer Cusick, of the road, made an investigation and found picks, shovels and other implements across the rails. A train was due and the obstacles were quickly removed, otherwise there might have been a wreck. John and William Roy, eight and ten years old respectively, were placed under arrest and were later placed in charge of Probation Officer White by Recorder Stackhouse. The boys denied that they wanted to see a wreck "just for fun."

A FROCK OF KHAKI.

A frock that attracted notice at a popular resort recently was of khaki colored linen elaborately trimmed with black soutache. The skirt was long, perfectly fitting about the hips and quite full around the bottom. It was simply finished with a deep hem. The front gore widened out at the top to form a shaped panel extending to the bust and to points under the arms where it was held by large linen covered buttons. At the front and just above the waist line in the back there was an elaborate wheel and scroll design of black silk soutache and the design was repeated at the top of the long, plain sleeves. The neck was cut out in a shallow circle with a tiny yoke and high stock of white tucked batiste finished with a tiny square bow of black satin at the front.

The sleeves were tightly buttoned over at the wrist with linen covered buttons.

FOR BEST RESULTS

IDEAS ESPECIALLY ADAPTED TO BAKING DAY.

Recipe for Oatmeal and Fine Brown Bread—Cream Puffs and Cream Filling to Be Made in the Home.

Delicious Oatmeal Bread.—Into your bread pan put three cupfuls of uncooked rolled oats, two tablespoonfuls lard, two-thirds cupful of brown sugar, one-third cupful of molasses and a little salt, then pour over all three cupfuls of hot water, and let stand until lukewarm. Have ready one yeast cake dissolved in one cupful of warm water. Put this into the mixture when ready, then add white flour and mix the same as for white bread. It takes about a quart of flour. Let it rise like white bread, and bake very slowly three-quarters of an hour. This is very healthful and nutritious.

Fine Brown Bread.—One bowlful of Indian meal, one bowlful of rye meal, one bowlful of sour milk, one large cupful of molasses, one teaspoonful of soda dissolved in the sour milk and one tablespoonful of salt are the ingredients called for.

Grease a two-quart lard pail, turn in the mixture, put the cover on, and set it in a ten-pound lard pail, with a little hot water in it. Then put the cover on this and place it in the oven. I usually mix mine about noon, and don't look at it until five p. m., when I take it from the pail of water and let it dry off in the oven until supper is ready. If you cleanse and dress a squab, just splitting it down the back and place in the center of your bean pot when the beans are half done, you will have together with this brown bread a supper fit for a king.

Cream Puffs.—These are much nicer than the baker's product. Get together one cupful of water, one-half cupful of butter, boiling these together, stir in one cupful of flour while boiling, take from the fire, and when cool, stir in three eggs not beaten. Bake in a hot oven 25 minutes, avoid opening the oven door, and drop in large spoonfuls on tin.

Cream Filling.—Five even teaspoonfuls of flour, one cupful of milk, one-half cupful of sugar and one egg. Beat the egg and sugar together, also the flour. Stir all into the milk while it is boiling. Open cakes with knife and fill.

Pound Cake.

Is a useful standby, and as it not only keeps but improves by keeping, it can be made now, when butter and eggs are cheap, and will be a useful cake to have by one. Required: Half a pound each of butter, caster sugar, mixed currants and sultanas, half a teaspoonful each of ground ginger and cinnamon, one tablespoonful each of brandy and rosewater, five eggs.

Beat the eggs till they are pale, and stir into them the sugar and butter. Then add slowly the fruit and spices, lastly the brandy and rosewater. Beat well for 15 minutes. Grease a tin, line it with two thicknesses of buttered paper. Pour in the cake and bake in the slow oven for two to two hours and a half. Double quantity of this cake can be made and will keep well.

To Hold Decorations.

If you have a large iced cake that you wish to decorate for a fete or a table of a bazaar, the quickest and easiest way to fasten the decorations of vines and flowers is to pin them securely with the smallest size invisible hairpins—new ones naturally.

These pins hold the trimmings securely in place, and if carefully put in do not make unsightly marks on the cake.

Sour Milk Pancakes.

Beat into a pint of sour milk a level teaspoonful soda, a half teaspoonful salt and flour to make a good consistency for baking. No eggs are needed. Have the griddle hot and well greased, bake the cakes in perfect circles and pile symmetrically one on top of the other.

Dutch Onion Pie.

Slice six onions, fry in butter to delicate brown, add one-half cupful of milk, one-half cupful of cream, one tablespoonful flour, one well-beaten egg; salt to taste. Have ready a baked pie crust in the usual pie pan and pour in onion mixture. Return to oven and bake to good brown. White of egg may be added to top.

This is a most excellent Holland Dutch dish.

Newport Cakes for Tea.

Take a pint and a half of flour, a half cup of sugar, a half cup of butter and a cup of milk. Having mingled with the flour two heaping teaspoons of baking powder, add the other ingredients, into which have been stirred two eggs beaten very light. Bake in tins for 20 minutes. This recipe is the American substitute for Scotch scones used at afternoon tea abroad.

Spanish Punch.

Scald six ounces of Jordan almonds and one ounce of bitter almonds. Remove the skins and soak the almonds in cold water for several hours; then pound them to a pulp with two tablespoonfuls of orange flower water. Add two cupfuls of powdered sugar, one pint of grape juice, and three pints of water. Strain and serve with cracked ice.

SOMERSET POLITICIANS MR. SEBRING'S GUESTS

The Somerset County Board of Freeholders, and in addition many other county officials and a few friends, were guests of Charles P. Sebring at a dinner given at his home in Greenbrook yesterday. Twenty-six guests sat down to one of the finest dinners ever served at the Sebring homestead and nothing but words of praise were heard for Mr. Sebring and his assistants.

The home was elaborately decorated for the occasion by Anthony Zolvolenck, an expert florist and neighbor of Mr. Sebring. There were chrysanthemums, roses and carnations in abundance, while every guest received a handsome chrysanthemum as a souvenir.

After the dinner there were addresses by Assemblyman W. W. Smalley, Director Gibson, of the board, and Abram Story, a neighbor. In addition to the Board of Freeholders there were present County Clerk A. P. Sutphin, County Collector E. B. Allen, William Logan, custodian of the Court House at Somerville; Assemblyman W. W. Smalley, Contractors Frank Mobus, Joseph Burke, John H. Kitchen, A. I. Smalley, Abram Story and John Y. Barrett, borough street commissioner. Greenbrook road was not finally accepted, although another payment was ordered.

LYNUS WALPOLE LOSES HIS LIQUOR LICENSE

At the session of the Common Pleas Court in Elizabeth, this morning the application of Lynus Walpole, of Scotch Plains, for a liquor license was refused, but the applications of William Deegan and William Lee for liquor licenses at the same place were granted. W. A. Covington represented Mr. Deegan and W. L. Hetfield appeared for Mr. Lee. Attorney George Ball opposed the granting of all license applications in Fanwood and Scotch Plains.

Invited to Hear Dr. Wilson.

President Marshall, at the Board of Trade meeting last night, invited that body to attend the Democratic rally to be held under the auspices of the Democratic Club, of which he is a member, at the Plainfield theatre on Friday night, October 29, when Dr. Woodrow Wilson, will deliver a political address.

Mrs. J. Ringel and daughter, Mrs. Hille, of Westervelt avenue have removed to Brooklyn.

Dr. and Mrs. Emil A. Runquist, of 58th street, New York, are spending a week here, during which time they are enjoying the game of golf on the Park Golf Club grounds. They are enthusiastic golfers.

Mayor to Deliver Series of Lectures on Municipal Government.

MORE PLAYGROUND TALK.

The Orange Shade Tree Commissioners to Talk Here on Their Work—Factories Seek Sites in This City.

President H. W. Marshall, at the October meeting of the Board of Trade, last night, announced that Mayor Charles J. Fisk will give a series of lectures before the board at the December, January, February and possibly the March meetings. The topics will be of general municipal interest.

Among other features for the meetings during the winter will be illustrated lectures by the Shade Tree Commission of Orange, showing some of the remarkable work done in that city.

The question of public playgrounds for Plainfield was introduced by Rev. George A. Warner, and he wanted to know what had been done in this direction. President Marshall explained that he with J. W. Gaven and George P. Mellick had been appointed a playground commission and they intend to investigate the matter.

It is the intention of the commission to secure the use of the public school grounds for the purpose until a tract of land can be acquired, such as the Orange Oval. In referring to the latter playground, Mr. Marshall said that it cost Orange about $54,000, and Mr. Warner added, it has been worth that sum in law and order to Orange.

George X. Christian, of this city, one of the enthusiastic members of the board, stated that John Barber, of Trenton, and S. M. Simpson, of Yonkers, partners in the famous Hill Bakery Company, of Trenton, and Yonkers, were desirous of locating one of their modern bakeries here. He explained that the concern is not looking for financial support, for it has plenty of that, but is anxious to know whether conditions here are right for such an industry. He said that the concern if it came here would probably expend $50,000 and would employ a large force of men. It would be its intention of covering the territory between Westfield and Somerville. The proposition was received with much enthusiasm and no doubt the concern will be assured of the board's co-operation.

Another concern from New York communicated with the board and wanted to know if it would be willing to raise $35,000 to bring an industry to Plainfield. Through a suggestion of E. M. Laing, the secretary was instructed to inform the New York parties that it is not in a position to perform such a task.

A number of tickets for the Patrolmen's Benevolent Association ball were received and President Marshall said that members could get the same upon application to the secretary.

Lee F. Hammond, of the Newark Public Playgrounds Association, communicated with the board, stating his willingness to co-operate with the members in the matter.

"LAMB AND THE BRUTE" AT THEATRE TONIGHT.

"An Old Sweetheart of Mine," was presented at the Plainfield theatre last night by Charles K. Champlin and his company of clever artists. It depicted life and the way the ends of justice are met just as it really is. The play was similar to "Arizona," and "The Round Up," and the large audience that was present proclaimed it one of the best plays of the week.

Charles K. Champlin as "Dick Scott," a young Easterner, for whom love had mapped a cruel path, again distinguished himself as an actor of no mean ability. He was ably supported by James K. Dunsuth, as Tom Cragen, the bluff and wholesome ranch owner. The company presents "The Charity Ball" this afternoon. "The Lamb and the Brute" will be the attraction tonight.

MRS. CAROLINE CLARK AGED SIXTY-FOUR, DEAD.

Caroline C. Clark, the wife of Jacob A. Clark, died last night in this city, to which she had just returned after spending the summer at Asbury Park. She had been staying on Madison avenue, pending the completion of a new home on Netherwood avenue. The funeral takes place from the home of her brother, Cornelius Compton, 31 Deer street, on Sunday afternoon.

Mrs. Clark was Caroline Compton, thirty-nine years ago when she was married here. She was born at Pluckemin in 1845. Her husband survives her. There are no children.

The interment will be at Hillside. Rev. A. E. Finn, pastor of the Park Avenue Baptist church, will officiate.

Led Gospel Meeting.

Karl Lehman and William Russell, president of the Essex County Christian Endeavor Union, were in charge of the Gospel meeting at the Plainfield Rescue Mission last night.

THE GENTLE CYNIC.

Most of us believe in eternal punishment—for our enemies.

The good don't all die young if we are to believe the tombstones.

A man never fights so hard for a principle as he does for results.

When a fellow tells a girl she is a dream it is cruel of her to wake him up.

The things that make a man discontented are not what he has, but what he wants.

Some people take a melancholy satisfaction in always being prepared for the worst.

Occasionally you find a grown man who seems to eat almost as much as a small boy.

Even the man who borrows trouble is apt to kick if he gets more than he bargained for.

Some men are so rich that they even seem to think they can pay their respects in dollars.

It is quite natural that a fellow will never have a show unless he has the price of admission.

The man who suffers from dyspepsia has little patience with a woman who merely has a broken heart.

It always worries an absent-minded man to think he can't remember what it was he was going to worry about.

TRUTH IN TABLETS.

Some people's breakfast is a sort of cereal story.

A truck has wheels—unless it is garden truck.

Vanity leaves its footprints on a woman's face.

An officeholder never retires until the voters pry him loose.

A woman isn't necessarily gifted because she has the gift of gab.

The nearer you approach many a great man the smaller he looks.

Flour by any other name would smell as wheat—to the shorts.

The antique assertion that "figures won't lie" is a lying figure of speech.

The wise man keeps his temper even when he is getting the worst of it.

A man will confess to one bad habit for the purpose of hiding a dozen others.

A woman may claim to be as young as she likes, but she doesn't always look it.

It's simply impossible to love thy neighbor as thyself if he is an amateur cornet player.

It takes an expert female shopper to get rid of a dollar's worth of energy in an attempt to save two cents.

WAYSIDE WISDOM.

Opportunity is a gum-shoe artist.

It is an odd man that never tries to get even.

Some people cannot think without making the noise of a boiler shop.

The trouble is that people who have money are content to think money.

Don't wait till somebody offers to turn the grindstone before you sharpen your ax.

It is very hard to tell where patience leaves off and laziness begins in most people.

A woman's idea of slaying the fatted calf is to put the best tablecloth on the table.

The devil finds mischief for idle hands to do. The busy ones find their own mischief.

It shows the innate superiority of the masculine sex that a man can be bald and still be loved.

You can't tell just what a man expects who puts a rabbit's foot in his pocket when he goes to call on a pretty girl.—Illustrated Sunday Magazine.

CHEERFUL COMMENTS.

Bathing suits nearly everybody on a hot day.

Even the straw hats have a bewildered, disappointed look.

If the price of ham goes much higher the ham sandwich will soon be out of season.

You think you've had a pretty hard time, but the native strawberry has had to bear it also.

There hasn't been so much hurrying to get the hunk of ice off the sidewalk as there will be later on.

While on the other hand probably nine out of 10 jokesmiths who make fun of the June bride were married in December.

Successful Furnace Fires

PATENTED

makes tending the furnace easy, but best of all it makes a joyous fire. Round fire pots burn strongly through the center with a rim of half dead clinkers at the edge and when you shake the fire the middle drops out. You've noticed it. Fires built in BOYNTON Square Pots are all live coals. A shake down is an even shake. The whole fire settles. There is no waste. The fuel being equal, a square pot will develop almost twice the heat, or the same heat for about half. The square pot is our patent and can be had only in the BOYNTON furnaces. We have a dealer in your town. He will be glad to show you.

There are BOYNTON heating plants of all kinds. Ask about our Round or Sectional Boilers for Steam or Hot Water. Also Ranges.

At the 5 O'clock Tea.

A popular combination much served instead of iced tea at 5 o'clock is grape juice and ginger ale mixed. Use about a third of the latter. If white grape juice instead of purple is chosen the drink is better yet. Serve with glasses half filled with cracked ice.

TO RISE IN BUSINESS LIFE.

Some Few Essentials Must Be kept in Mind, and One of These Is Advertising.

A man may have several carloads of ability. He may have brains and ideas and other desirable things. But all the ideas ever "ideated" will not avail to raise a man who neglects that all important item of advertising. You simply must get attention. Of course, you can get attention by firing off a revolver during office hours, or you can do it by wearing loud clothes and proclaiming your kinship in the sporting fraternity. But most men who have risen from the ranks have carefully neglected to use methods of this kind.

Every office man must act as his own salesman. He must first prepare himself by increasing his efficiency. He must be able to do the work for which he is hired. Not only should he do that for which he is hired, but he must do that work better than it ever was done before. When that item has been attended to it is then time to look about for more work.

The wise employe will keep his eye on the job ahead, or, better still, will look at a job which does not exist, but which should exist for the good of the business. The next step is to think out a selling talk that will get the attention, arouse the interest, create a desire, and bring about in the mind of the employer a desire to do what the live employe desires him to do.—The Bookkeeper.

WAS NOT STRENUOUS WORKER

Youth Forced to Confess That His Duties Were Not What Might Be Called Arduous.

The son of a rich father quit college a few weeks ago—he was in love, he explained, and couldn't keep his mind on his books. He wanted to go to work and make a place for himself in the world. So his father got him on the payroll of a bank in which he was a director. The young man's sweetheart—in her second year at Vassar—kept writing him how proud she was over his independence and asking just what position he held so she could tell the other girls. The young man side-stepped the question as to his prominence in the bank's organization, until, finally, his intended wrote him a peppery letter, saying that if he didn't give her the information by return mail she would be real angry. Then, after much thinking, the youth wrote her this:

"I've wanted all along to tell you about my position and would have done so before had I known myself. About all I do here is to raise a window when I come in the morning and put it down when I leave in the afternoon. The rest of the time I read or watch the others work. I don't know just what you could call my job. Better tell the girls that I'm the draught clerk. That will come the nearest to describing my duties."

Where Caesar Crossed Thames.

Where did Julius Caesar cross the Thames? This sounds like one of the questions set by staid old examiners in search of information they failed to acquire in their youth. There are perhaps as many places claiming to be the site of the famous fording as there were claiming to be the birthplace of Homer. This week Brentford has stolen a march on other places and has erected a monument commemorating Caesar's crossing of the Thames there! Most historians and topographers agree in placing the point of crossing at Halliford at a point known as Cowey (i. e., Causeway) Stakes, and but little support is found for the Brentford theory. To many people a monument is the most convincing of evidence, and though there is little tradition to support the Brentford column, that column will no doubt serve to strengthen the tradition.—London Chronicle.

As Dr. Johnson Said It.

George Augustus Sala's eloquent testimony to the superiority of English viands reminds us of Dr. Johnson's outburst after examining a French menu.

"Sir," said he to the faithful Boswell, "my brain is obfuscated with the perusal of this heterogeneous conglomeration of bastard English ill spelt and a foreign tongue. Bid the rascals bring me a dish of hog's puddings, a slice or two from the upper cut of a well roasted sirloin and two apple dumplings."

Communications.

Roselle Park, Aug. 10, 1909.

Board of Chosen Freeholders:

Gentlemen—I have been instructed by the Street Committee of the Borough of Roselle Park to communicate with you and to fix a date to meet said committee to arrange to improve the approach to Walnut street on Westfield avenue, at an early date as possible.

Yours respectfully,
A. M. WOODRUFF,
Borough Clerk.

Received and referred to the county road committee.

August 11, 1909.

To the Honorable Board of Chosen Freeholders of Union County N. J.

Gentlemen—During the many years the Central Railroad of New Jersey operated a safe and convenient line of stanch steamboats between Elizabethport and New York, touching at Mariners' Harbor and Bergen Point, there was a good deal of talk heard with regard to a bridge between this county and Staten Island.

But when in the year 1890 the boats were abandoned, there were promises made that the proposed Baltimore and Ohio R. R. bridge at Elizabeth, would in time provide some adequate accommodation for the people desirous of crossing to the ocean front.

The present ferry lines are dangerous, as no doubt you are perfectly aware. The last time I happened to cross the boat was down to its guard in the water, and badly listed to port. I have had many years of practical experience in bridge and dock construction on Staten Island Sound and neighboring waters, ad whilst there are many others of even greater knowledge from a theoretical standpoint, I know the conditions thoroughly.

My plan when writing to your honorable body a few days ago was entirely practicable, but I have since thought out a better one because it will not only be cheaper but also more prompt in getting safe and reliable results. I propose with your co-operation to hire a few car floats or scows; to firmly secure one of them near the mouth of Morse Creek and the other diagonally across at the mouth of Old Place Creek; to have two or three others firmly connected together and then operated by some suitable mechanism as a floating draw bridge between those fixed points.

There are good roads leading to both places. I believe the War Department would not have the least objection to a plan of this kind, for the reason, it will not constitute a permanent obstruction to navigation although it will provide a free right of way to the thousands of people of this county and Staten Island who may wish to cross these waters for pleasure or business.

If your honorable body could find it within your power to appropriate a small sum of money and entrust this work to me, I will undertake the solution of this problem on very short notice, and also agree to supervise the construction of this temporary bridge in a manner which I am confident will be most effective and satisfactor in every way.

Yours very truly,
WILLIAM H. HOOVER, JR.

On motion, received and placed on file.

Reports of Committees.

By the committee to settle with the county collector:

Elizabeth, Aug. 13, 1909.

To the Board of ChOsen Freeholders of the County of Union:

Gentlemen—Your committee to settle with the county collector would respectfully report that they have examined his books showing his receipts and disbursements, together with his vouchers, bonds and coupons paid, and bank-books, and they find the same agree and are correct in every particular.

His total receipts from January 1, 1909, to August 7, 1909, are	$929,923.42
Total disbursements	909,724.49
Leaving a balance in the bank of	$ 21,198.93

JOHN N. CADY,
Committee.

On motion of Freeholder Cady, received and placed on file.

By the jail committee:

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union:

Gentlemen—Your committee on Jail Inspection would respectfully report that it has visited the jail and inspected the books of the warden.

Number of prisoners in jail August 1	60
Number received during August	78
Number discharged	75
Number in jail Sept. 1	63
Number days' board	1,780
Cost per day per prisoner	$ .3431
Cost of maintenance of jail for month of August:
Salaries	$233.00
Provisions, clothing, drugs, etc.	378.82
Total	$611.82

That the system now in force whereby the freeholders purchase the provisions for feeding the prisoners will prove successful is evidenced by the fact that, although the salaries have been increased and the prices of provisions advanced, the books show a gain over the old system from November 11, 1908 to July 31, 1909, of $426.09.

Respectfully submitted,
JOSEPH PERRY,
J. HERVEY DOANE,
JOHN H. STEPHAN,
Committee.

On motion of Freeholder Krouse, received and placed on file.

By Committee on Soldiers' Monuments:

On motion of Freeholder Doane received and recommendations adopted.

By committee on bridges in Westfield.

To the Board of Freeholders:

Gentlemen—Your committee appointed to investigate and report as to the need of new bridges on Bradford and Cedar avenues, Westfield, N. J., would respectfully report that it has examined the situation and finds that these two streets are part of a new subdivision of the town, and are graded and have been accepted by the town of Westfield. The town is about to lay sewers in them, and the owners contemplate extensive improvements, as concrete curbs and sidewalks, macadam roads, etc., when the sewer work has been done.

Your committee is of the opinion that both of these bridges are necessary, but owing to the shortage in the bridge funds your committee would recommend that but one of these bridges, that on Bradford avenue, be built at this time. This bridge will be 66 feet long, and about two feet by three feet in size, and will cost not more than $250. Your committee would therefore recommend that this bridge be constructed the cost to be not more than $250.

Respectfully submitted,
JOSEPH PERRY,
AARON D. CRANE,
GEORGE B. CLADEK,
Committee.

On motion it was ordered on roll call that the report be received and recommendation adopted.

By committee on Fairview avenue bridge, Westfield:

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders:

Gentlemen — Your committee would respectfully report that it has examined the site of the proposed bridge and find that the street is newly graded and has been macadamized; it has also been accepted by the town. The stream runs across the street diagonally, and the bridge will probably have to be 100 feet in length, although the street is only 66 feet wide.

We would recommend that a new bridge be built across the avenue, at this point, to be about two feet by three feet in size, and to cost no more than $350.

Respectfully submitted,
JOSEPH PERRY,
JOHN H. STEPHAN,
CHARLES J. JENSEN,
CCommittee.

On motion the report was received and the recommendation contained therein adopted on roll call by an unanimous vote.

By committee on Pine Grove avenue bridge, Summit.

The Board of Chosen Freeholders:

Gentlemen—Your committee on the Pine Grove avenue bridge would respectfully report that the contract for the work has been awarded to the Commonwealth Construction Co. of Summit, for the sum of $2,650.

Respectfully submitted,
JOHN N. CADY,
CHARLES A. SMITH,
W. H. SWAIN,
Committee.

On motion the report was received and placed on file.

By committee on Chatham turnpike bridge, Summit.

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders:

The Jersey Dress.

The jersey dress has been met with, but it has not been carefully introduced. Its credentials have not come with it, and it is misunderstood. It is hardly to be regarded as a coming fashion—it is here. Whether or not it will be found a favorite and encouraged for any length of time, its place is within the present fashion period, and its time is now. It is not put forth as a dressy garment, but as a fairly lowpriced and convenient one for the lover of the cuirass, or fitted princess, and for the buyer of things new. Its happiest expression is a beaded, glittering surface and a well-tied sash.

No Recommendation.

"Mary, after the week is out I shan't need your services," the boarding house keeper told her cook, "your cooking doesn't suit me."

"But the boarders seem to like it, ma'am!"

"Yes. That's why I must get another cook."—Bohemian.

Smith flared up.

"No. I can't do everything at once. What do you think I am? We'll get to it in a few minutes."

"It's got to come out now," declared Pinckney angrily. "Sommers is here in the office. He thinks we aren't able to run this job, and he's come to see his gun go into the bath."

The drunken foreman's face convulsed with rage.

"Oh, he has, has he?" he yelled. "Well, if he comes bothering around me you know what he'll get? He'll get what O'Leary got. That's what'll be coming to him."

Pinckney shook his head.

"No, that won't do, Smith," he commanded sharply.

Out in the works where he was practically boss the foreman could not be so easily controlled.

"Oh, it won't do, won't it?" he yelled. "I'll show you whether it'll do or not."

He doubled up one of his big fists, shaking it menacingly. And now Pinckney let him rage without check.

A daring idea had come to the desperate schemer. Perhaps, after all, if Smith attacked Sommers it might not be so bad. It would be up to Smith. He would suffer; no one else. At any rate, Sommers must not see that gun go into the tempering bath. Pinckney decided to irritate his drunken foreman a little more.

"Better be careful, Smith. He's in a position to make trouble for us all. He's an officer of the navy, you know; has a right to inspect the work. We've got to treat him well. Besides, this Sommers is a pretty bad fighter himself. He's got an idea he can lick anybody around these works."

That was enough. Smith's fury was keyed to the fighting stage now. It only needed the presence of Sommers and a little provocation to start real trouble.

"Think's he's a fighter, does he?" he roared. "Let him come in here—I'll show him who's a fighter. I don't have to treat him well. I don't have to treat you well, Pinckney. I don't have to treat anybody well. I'm independent. I am. I don't crawl for nobody."

"Smith, you're drunk," declared the general manager. "You're drunk or you wouldn't talk that way."

"I know I'm drunk," roared the foreman. "But I'm the best man in the outfit, drunk or sober. Just let that navy duck show up."

Inside Pinckney was smiling, well pleased, but he kept a straight, stern face.

"I know you're the best man, Smith," he confessed. "But why do you want to fight with me?"

"Who's fighting with you?" blustered the bully. "There wouldn't be enough of you to carry away if I was fighting with you."

Pinckney laughed powerfully.

"All right," he said. "Now, remember, Sommers must not see that gun come out of the furnace. He's sore on us, and he'll make a bad report on the job if he gets a chance. You know what would happen to you then."

"He tried to get my job," roared the foreman. "Try to take an honest man's living away from him? I'll show him."

He turned to the workman near the furnace, yelling, "Here, take that Sommers gun."

Pinckney caught the foreman by the arm.

"Wait a minute; wait, Smith," he commanded. "Here's Sommers now."

The naval lieutenant was coming down the long furnace room, shielding his eyes from the terrific heat and glare of the furnaces as he passed.

Smith lurched out to meet him just as he stopped in front of the furnace which held the Sommers gun. One quick look assured the navy man of the foreman's condition.

"How soon do you take the gun out, Smith?" he asked.

The foreman lurched up, thrusting his face close to the officer's.

"None of your business," he retorted. "I take it out when I get good and ready. Maybe at one time, and then again it may be another."

The answer was enough. Every muscle in Sommers' powerful frame set for action. Already he had the foreman's protruding jaw measured for his right hand, and Pinckney's voice checked him.

"I say, Sommers, come here, please, will you?"

The naval man turned without a word and walked over to the general manager.

"Perhaps you can explain this, Mr. Pinckney?" he demanded sternly.

Pinckney smiled apologetically.

"I hope you won't mind Smith. You can see he's been drinking."

The officer's eyes narrowed. The fighting look was still on his face.

"And that's the kind of a man you allow to be in charge of important work?" he demanded.

Pinckney was still apologetic.

"It doesn't often happen, I'm glad to say," he explained. "But Smith is a very valuable man, one of the best I've ever known. I'd hate to lose him. He is thoroughly competent, even though he seems drunk. Liquor only makes him quarrelsome and impertinent. It doesn't affect his ability as a workman.

"I don't have to treat anybody well. I'm independent."

"He was just the man for this job. That's why I put him in charge and let him stay on even though drunk. You can depend on it, he'll do the work all right."

Sommers accepted the explanation with a shrug.

"Well, you're the general manager, Mr. Pinckney," he said. "If that gun is ruined in your place the Durant works will be responsible. Personally I think, valuable as Smith may be, it would be a good thing to lay him off until he sobers up."

Pinckney nodded.

"I understand your feelings," he said, "but I'll stay out here myself to see that the gun goes through all right. Smith's nasty now. It might be as well if you didn't stay any longer. It upsets him to have outsiders about."

For the first time a real suspicion of foul play took hold of Sommers. They were all too obviously anxious to get him away.

"Don't worry," he said shortly to Pinckney. "I'll take care of myself. I've got time to get into my working togs, haven't I?"

He turned away and started back to the office just in time to meet Marsh approaching. He had sized up Marsh for an honest, well meaning fellow, so he didn't hesitate to stop him.

"Oh, I say, Marsh, what time did that gun go into the fire?"

The head draughtsman looked up and down and everywhere but at Sommers' face.

"I—I don't know, Mr. Sommers, exactly," he hesitated.

"Don't know!" exclaimed the officer. "What's going on here anyhow? It looks to me like there's something wrong. Didn't you tell me that gun went in at 6 o'clock?"

Marsh was thoroughly frightened now.

"Did I say 6 o'clock? I've forgotten. Mr. Pinckney will know. I'll ask him."

Suspicion had become practical certainty in Sommers' mind now. He saw he, too, must be diplomatic. He must not let these people realize what he suspected. He shook his head eagerly.

"Oh, don't bother Pinckney, Marsh. I'll be back in a moment, just as soon as I get on my working clothes."

And, leaving Marsh in a cold sweat of fear, the naval man hurried into the office. As soon as the door had closed after him Pinckney rushed over to Smith.

"Now, Smith, go to it quick," he commanded.

In a moment the roar in the big furnace room had increased tremendously. Smith began to bellow his orders. The men realizing the important time had come went to work with a will.

The hugh traveler was rushed over above the trap furnace as fast as it could be moved. The chains were being lowered into the trap to draw out the gun when Marsh caught Pinckney by the arm.

"Mr. Pinckney, don't—don't try it," he exclaimed. "Sommers suspects."

Pinckney shook off the restraining touch.

"Let him suspect," he exclaimed contemptuously. "What difference does that make? Once get that gun into the bath without his seeing it, I can beat him, no matter what story he tells in Washington."

"But you can't get it in," expostulated the frightened draughtsman. "He'll be back in a minute. He knew you couldn't beat him or he wouldn't have left. He's gone to put on his working clothes."

For reply Pinckney shook himself free and shouted to Smith:

"Here, Smith, Sommers has just demanded that you be discharged. He says you can't handle the job. He's gone to change his clothes, and he'll be back in a minute to boss the job himself."

That was enough. The drunken foreman's rage was as fierce as one of his own furnaces now.

"He has, has he?" he roared above the noise of the furnaces and the clanging steel. "If he comes in here I'll throw him in the furnace!"

"I don't blame you," supplemented Pinckney. And Smith, seeing now the general manager was behind him in whatever he might attempt, was ready for desperate work.

EVERYTHING IN CANDIES!

"Here!" he shouted. "Take my signal whistle. I'll go over by the door and wait for that guy. When he shows up you signal the men to take out the gun."

"When he comes in!" exclaimed Pinckney, amazed. "How can you stop his seeing you?"

The foreman laughed brutally, then, stooping over, picked up from the floor a short piece of iron, already blood stained at one end.

"O'Leary," he said briefly, and, turning with the bar in his hand, lurched across, drunkenly confident, toward the path which Sommers must cross on his way in the office to the trap furnaces that contained the Sommers gun, now ready to be hoisted and transferred to the tempering bath.

Marsh had already hurried away. Possible murder was more than he had counted on when he allowed Pinckney to bully him into becoming his fellow conspirator.

Pinckney stood ready with the whistle in his hand, while the men at their places waited, ready to hoist when the signal should be given.

The trap was laid. All was in readiness when Pinckney saw a raggedly dressed girl with a shawl over her head hurrying down the furnace room from the door through which the men were accustomed to enter.

"Here!" he shouted. "What are you doing here? Who are you? Get out!"

Instead of answering the girl ran on until she had come facing him. Then she stopped short and threw back the shawl from her head.

Pinckney started back in amazement, for instead of Lucy Smith, as he expected, he looked into the blazing eyes of Frances Durant.

CHAPTER X.

TURNING A DIRTY TRICK.

PINCKNEY started at first, too amazed to speak. Finally he managed to pull himself together.

"Frances! What are you doing here?" he exclaimed.

The girl's reply was a contemptuous sneer.

"I don't have to ask what you are doing here."

"You know?"

"Yes," she cried. "I know you are trying to ruin Mr. Sommers' gun, and that's why I'm here—to prevent it."

Her hatred of dishonesty, her love for Sommers, her pride in the honor of the Durants, had all combined to drive the girl into a fury of passion that Pinckney had never seen before. He could not fight against it. He knew that, and so he had to temporize. Instead of showing anger he only smiled with apparent surprise and pity.

"What could have put such a ridiculous notion in your mind, Frances? It's too foolish to discuss. Who told you?"

"Don't try to explain, Edward," the girl exclaimed angrily. "Lucy Smith told me. O'Leary told her. He was hurt because he wanted to be honest.

At the bottom of the steps the naval officer turned on the manager of the works.

She came to the house to find Mr. Sommers, and I borrowed her dress to come here quickly and warn him."

Pinckney was smiling now with relief. He saw he had a chance if he could only get the girl out of the way.

"And you believe such a story?" he protested in a hurt tone. "Why, my child, O'Leary was delirious. Smith was drunk and struck him while they were fighting—a plain, ordinary fight between hot headed workmen.

"What possible reason could I have for wanting to injure this gun? To have it a success means as much to your father and to me as it does to Sommers. Think of the reputation of the plant, of these works, that your father has spent his life in building up!

"Why, Sommers is here now looking after the gun himself. If he were to hear such a story it might ruin your father's business. You don't want to ruin your father's business on the word of a delirious workman, sore on his foreman for beating him? Don't you see how wrong you are?"

The girl hesitated. It did seem plausible. O'Leary was hurt. He had been fighting. And then she did not imagine any one could be so contemptible as to fight a rival in the way Pinckney must be doing if he really had planned all that O'Leary charged.

The girl felt that perhaps she had been too hasty. She felt just a bit foolish, coming there in Lucy Smith's clothes and possibly exposing herself to ridicule before the men. She hesitated, looking at Pinckney.

From the other end of the furnace room, where he had gone to intercept Sommers, Smith had made out Lucy, as he supposed, talking to Pinckney. The drunken rage of the foreman changed instantly to this new object of attack.

Why should Lucy be talking to Pinckney? What was she doing there? He had warned her time and again to keep away from the works, and especially from Pinckney and the office, because Smith knew Pinckney and the advantage which he had taken of his position more than once to injure girls whose fathers and brothers depended on him for their livelihood.

The general manager was a little czar in the town. Mr. Durant did not come into close personal relation with the men in the plant, and Pinckney could take on and put off, make and ruin men at his will. He had ruined some, and others, Smith knew, had risen from the works through complaisance and pretended blindness to the actions of the general manager.

But the independent foreman did not propose to put himself in that class. He loved his family when he was sober, and no matter what he might do himself he was determined that his wife and daughter should go straight. No wonder, then, the sight of his daughter talking to Pinckney in the works before all the men enraged him. With the bar in his hand he lurched down the long room.

"Hey, there!" he shouted when he had come close. "What do you mean talking to this fellow? Haven't I told you I didn't want you hanging around the works and not to talk to him? Now, you get out of here quick!"

Frances turned, and Smith stepped back aghast.

"Miss Durant!" he exclaimed. "Excuse me, miss. I thought you was Lucy."

"That's all right, Smith," exclaimed Pinckney hastily. "No trouble now, remember." And he turned back to Frances. "Come to the office, Frances. Come away from here. I will explain everything to you fully."

Puzzled and a bit uncertain as to Pinckney's real attitude, the girl obediently followed him up a short flight of steps and into a little overseer's office that jutted out into the furnace room. Pinckney closed the door after him.

"Mr. Sommers' gun is just going into the tempering bath," he said. "He is here superintending it. So you understand all must be right. Just wait here a few moments, and then you can see Sommers himself."

The suggestion seemed reasonable. Frances nodded acquiescence.

"All right. I will wait," she said.

Outside in the furnace room a furious bustle followed the closing of the little office door. Smith gave the signal, and the big gun, caught in the chains from the traveler, began to rise slowly out of the trap furnace and hung suspended, a huge mass of white hot steel.

"Hustle it up, quick, into the bath!" yelled Smith, for already Sommers had appeared at the end of the long furnace room and was coming quickly toward him.

The men, driven on by their drunken boss, worked desperately fast. The huge traveler carrying the Sommers gun moved slowly toward the waiting oil bath. It was halfway there when Smith, the iron bar still in his hand, met Sommers.

"So you're coming to take charge of this job, are you?" he sneered.

The naval officer tried to push by, but Smith got in front of him.

"See here," exclaimed Sommers angrily, "wait until you are sober before you talk to me. Now, get away and attend to your work!"

The order enraged Smith all the more.

"Who are you giving orders to?" he yelled. "Come on, now; get out of here! You'd better beat it up in the office." He jerked his thumb toward the little overseeing office. "Get in there and talk to Pinckney. He's locked up there with a lady friend of yours."

Sommers' quick temper had begun to flare at the insolence of the foreman. He had not come out from the office in time, and he did not know that it was his gun which the traveler was slowly bearing to the waiting oil bath. He saw only in front of him an insolent, drunken workman, who should be discharged for coming on duty in such condition.

"You drunken blackguard! I'll see Pinckney, and if he doesn't discharge you I'll kick you out of here myself!"

He flung the foreman aside and, running up the steps to the office, tried the door. It was locked, and his knock brought no response.

Down below the men looked at each other and, taking the cue from Smith, laughed at the navy man. Slowly Sommers came down the steps. What was wrong? He could not make out exactly. He saw Marsh, who had been standing uneasily far in the background, and motioned to him.

The head draftsman came slowly. He knew how important it was to keep Sommers diverted from the main object and was nerved to play his part until the gun should be disposed of.

"I wouldn't go in there if I were you, Mr. Sommers," he suggested. "Mr. Pinckney's in there with a girl."

Sommers had been about the works long enough to know Pinckney's reputation among the men, but this open flaunting in their very faces was worse than anything he had imagined.

"Who is it?" he asked contemptuously.

"I think it's Smith's daughter, Lucy," hesitated Marsh.

OF GOOD USE WHEN IRONING.

Tubes Easily Put Together Save Articles Liable to Be Crushed on the Clothes Rack.

When you iron waists, one-piece dresses and articles liable to crush on the clothes rack, make a number of tubes with newspapers, tie with stout strings and slip the blouse or dress on these holders and hang them on a nail or convenient hook. Once dry, they will not crush so easily, and can be hung in the closet on these holders. Mailing tubes are the best for the purpose, but an old magazine or two papers rolled tightly together answer the purpose. Do not hang ironed towels over each other, for they will not be smooth if packed while still damp. Hang men's shirts by the lower portion, exposing the bosom, neckband and cuffs to dry. Petticoats should be folded but once and hung up to dry around the waistband, which retains some dampness. Handerchiefs and starched collars should be laid upon paper or napkins near the fire to dry or in the sunshine. A slight scorch will disappear if the article is placed in the strong sunlight. Iron lace waists upon the wrong side, and when dry fold the waists and cover with old pieces of sheets or wrap in paper. The best plan is to save all shirtwaist boxes for the purpose and keep them filled with tissue paper. A packed shirtwaist is prettier than one that hangs limply in the closet to accumulate dust each day.

GETTING BREAKFAST ON TIME

Little Hints That Are Time Savers and Worth Being Kept in the Memory.

Do not be two or three hours getting breakfast every morning. Brush the crumbs from the supper table, wash and relay the needed dishes, cut the meat, and prepare the vegetables you wish for breakfast. Baked potatoes are nice and will cook in less than an hour, even in the morning. You can bake gems at the same time if you watch your fire. If you like hot cakes stir them up at night and put in a little yeast. Add the soda in the morning and see how light and tender your cakes are with neither eggs nor cream. It will save many minutes in a week to put a half bushel of potatoes in a tub of water and wash them with a broom or stick. Let them drip in a basket for awhile, then remove to a box containing sticks to keep potatoes from the bottom and you have a supply ready at a minute's notice. You will find it is planning ahead as well as quick steps that brings meals on time, as well as other things.

To Do Up Lace Curtains.

A good way to do up lace curtains that are badly worn out and will not stand stretching: After carefully mending all holes wash and starch. Then, instead of putting on stretchers, measure on your line the length you want your curtains and tie a cord so curtains will not slip over mark; then put your curtains on and fold through the center so that the edges are even. Pull out each scallop and smooth the curtain with your hands. The smoothing will bring out the pattern and the curtain will dry while you are working at it. Be careful to keep the ends square. Your curtains will look like new.

Fruit Dumplings.

One-fourth cup of butter; beat to a cream; add three-fourths cup of sugar, beat again. Break in one egg and beat all together. Then add half a cup of rich milk, with one and a quarter cups of flour, sifted with one teaspoonful cream of tartar, half teaspoonful soda and beat all together until creamy. Butter five teacups and put into each a large tablespoonful of preserve. Strawberries, peaches, quinces are nice, or any favorite preserve may be used. Then divide mixture equally in the cups and put in steamer, put cover on tight and steam half hour wituhot removing the lid.

Steamed Fruit Pudding.

Mix a cup of seedless raisins, the same of cleaned currants; the same of shredded citron, and the same of chopped suet. Dust over four tablespoons of flour. Add four tablespoons of brown sugar and a half cup of molasses, into which you have stirred a half teaspoon of soda, dissolved in a tablespoon of water. Stir in a pint and a half of rolled oats, add two well-beaten eggs, a teaspoon of cinnamon, pinch of nutmeg. Pack into a mold, cover and steam for two or more hours (continuously). Serve with liquid pudding sauce. It is very good.

Raspberry Cream Tarts.

Butter some patty or individual pie pans and line them with a light pie crust. Have ready enough raspberries, carefully picked over and all stems removed. Sprinkle them with sugar, fill the pans and cover with another layer of crust. Bake them in a quick oven. Beat the yolks of three eggs with half a pint of cream and sweeten slightly. When the tarts are cooked lift the covers and pour in the cream. Place them again in the oven for six or seven minutes. The tarts may be served hot or cold, as desired. They are delicious.

Marlboro Pie (Fine).

Peel and grate six large apples, melt six ounces butter and mix with apples. Add two lemons, the juice and the grated rind, and three eggs, keeping out the whites of two for a meringue; beat eggs well with eight ounces sugar and add to above mixture. Beat altogether and bake with bottom crust only. When cool, beat whites up stiff, add three tablespoons granulated sugar, spread the meringue over pie and brown quickly.

ENTHUSIASM MARKS THE CLOSING HOURS OF CHRISTIAN ENDEAVORERS' CONVENTION

The twenty-third annual convention of the New Jersey State Christian Endeavor Union ended with the benediction of the Union amid a hushed gathering of deeply impressed people in the First Presbyterian church last night at 9:30. State President John T. Sproull presided and more than 1,250 persons were in the building when Dr. Francis E. Clark began his speech.

After the song service of fifteen minutes the devotional service was led by Rev. L. R. Howard, pastor of Hope chapel. Following this came the presentation of banner, reports of auditors and committees, election of officers and a consecration service by counties. Many telling points were announced to have been discovered during the smaller conferences, will be used to further the intentions of the various unions to raise a twenty-five per cent. increase in the membership and in the number of societies during the next two years. No accidents nor other mishaps to delegates have been reported and they leave with a kindly remembrance of the hospitality of the "City Beautiful."

The Junior Parade.

About six hundred cheering girls and boys marched in an auspicious Junior parade yesterday afternoon from the Crescent avenue church to the convention hall. With flags flying and headed by a band of a dozen pieces the gallant six hundred passed in review before Dr. Francis E. Clark, who had just arrived from Boston and was whirled from the railroad station straight to the starting point of the parade.

Those in charge of the church divisions were Mrs. R. V. Kinney, Trinity; Rev. A. E. Finn, Miss Arline Brown and Mrs. W. L. Lowrie, Park Avenue Baptist; Miss Sue Valentine, Third Presbyterian of Elizabeth; Miss Ida Spicer and Mrs. Langworthy, Seventh-Day Baptist; Rev. C. L. Goodrich, Congregational; Miss May Randolph, First Methodist; Mrs. Edward Baker, Temple Baptist; Mrs. J. O. McKelvey, Warren chapel; Miss Nettie Beeching, Grace Methodist; Mrs. Robert Lee and Miss Charlotte Aldrich, Monroe Methodist; Robert Love, West End Tabernacle; Miss Ruth Gardener, New Market Baptist; and Mrs. Schneider, Dunellen Presbyterian. The children were all provided with American flags. Alice and Johnny Cottrell, aides, rode upon cream white ponies.

Greeted the Founder.

They waved their flags with a vengeance when, seated in the convention, they were greeted by Dr. Clark a second time. He told them of a world trip he is going to start upon in a few weeks and declared that it would impress upon him more strongly than ever before in his life the fact that all men are brothers.

Miss Elsie Dayton, a junior, delivered the address of welcome. Mrs. Dukes responded. Then came a pretty drill by the Trinity boys on the platform. Dr. F. Y. Pierce, of New York city, addressed the juniors on "The Life Beautiful," showing crayon illustrations in connection with his talk. "America" and "Onward Christian Soldiers" were the songs of the session.

Charmed By City.

Following his talk to the juniors, Dr. Clark made the following statement to a Daily Press reporter.

"I would like on the occasion of this convention to repeat, through the Plainfield Daily Press, to the Christian Endeavorers of America our new motto: One Million New Members and Ten Thousand New Societies by 'Atlantic City 1911.' That is, I want to note that much progress within the next two years.

"Usually a convention is said to be the greatest ever. Sometimes this is true, and sometimes it isn't. But a record of facts and figures in the possession of State President Sproull gives the Plainfield meeting as the bona fide banner convention in the Endeavorer history of New Jersey.

"I hear on every hand of how hospitable and kind your men and women have been to the delegates to this convention. This is but a natural condition, for you have a beautiful city and, it follows, a considerate people. I saw some of the beauties of Plainfield in a short ride around it in an automobile. I am glad I took the ride; the city boasts some fine points that a stranger ought not to miss.

"In the course of my ride I reviewed the children's parade. I marveled at the enthusiasm of the little ones; also, at their orderliness. I trust that when they grow up they, too, will bring a Christian Endeavor convention here, and that I will be able to attend it."

Award Banners.

At the evening session the awards of banners was as follows: Essex County Junior Union won the increase banner with a percentage of 48. The Intermediate banner went to Mercer county. The senior increase banner was awarded to two societies—Emanuel Baptist, of Paterson, and Bergen Reformed, of Jersey City, each to possess the banner for six months their percentages being equal—100. In the award for the largest increase in numbers honors were divided the same way between Emanuel Baptist, of Paterson, and First Presbtyerian, of Cape May City.

The auditing committee reported that the examination of the treasurer's books had been made and found correct. The committee on resolutions among other things introduced a resolution thanking the local papers, and the Newark Evening News and the Elizabeth Journal for the splendid way in which the convention had been reported and for the valuable space devoted to it. They also expressed their confidence in State President Sproull, which brought out long continued applause. It was also resolved that the greetings of this convention be extended to the Indian convention to be held in Bombay next November. Dr. Clark will convey the greeting.

Officers Elected.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, John T. Sproull; vice-presidents, Rev. W. D. Shults, of Manasquan; Rev. George B. Jones, of Atlantic City; and A. Harry Moore, of Jersey City. Secretary, Miss Ida B. Stevens, of Hackettstown; associate secretaries, Miss Emily Edwards, of Hackensack, and Miss Nellie K. Foote, of Elizabeth. Treasurer, A. R. Baxter, of Trenton. It was also voted to hold the next annual convention at Trenton in October, 1910.

Mr. Sproull Accepts.

After the vote had been recorded President Sproull accepted his reelection in a few appropriate words and said he hoped the different societies would stand by him during the coming year as it had in the past. It is no easy task which you have imposed," he said, "but I will assume the risk with your co-operation."

Dr. Clark's Speech.

When Dr. Clark arose to speak he was greeted with the Chautauqua salute. He said he was going to carry the campaign to the far east including China, Japan and the Philippines. He congratulated Jersey for having retained Mr. Sproull in office and said that New Jersey had won the distinction of getting the next International Convention away from Texas, Missouri, Indiana and Minnesota, through his great influence. Referring to the site chosen for this great convention in 1911, Dr. Clark said that, notwithstanding its wide-openness, Atlantic City was the most beautifu seaside city in the world and that the influence of the preponderating temperance hotels would offset the bad influence of the others. New Jersey, he declared, would be the centre of Christian Endeavor work for the next two years. Essex county by all odds carried away the honors for attendance at this session. When called upon to respond to the roll call of counties they did so with a hymn, "Throw out the Life Line" and with so much vigor and enthusiasm that the whole convention soon joined in. Newark, of course was there "with the goods." The convention came to a close at 9:30 with the endeavor benediction and a moment of silent prayer. 1,250 delegates were seated when Dr. Clark began his speech and many had to stand.

COUNTY ROADS' MONEY

Union's Freeholders to Issue Bonds for $70,000 Worth of Improvements.

MUCH WAS DONE IN A YEAR.

Many Fine Thoroughfares Built and Repaired Throughout Union County.

The Union County Board of Freeholders overestimated the amount of money which the county would be required to pay out this year for road work. At a meeting of the board Thursday a resolution passed on May 6 calling for the floating of bonds to raise $100,000 for road work, was rescinded. Immediately afterward another resolution was adopted which authorizes the issuing of bonds for $70,000.

It was stated in the resolution that the road committee had learned that the amount of work to be done and now being done would not exceed the $70,000 asked for and that therefore it was thought advisable to cut down the original estimated amount to that actually needed. This was recommended by the bonding company to avoid any complication which might arise.

The issuing of bonds to raise money for road work was begun by the county to relieve the taxpayers of additional burdens. The procedure is taken under an act to provide for the permanent improvement of public roads in the State. This act provides that the county where work is done pays two-thirds of the actual cost and the State the other third.

Instead of certifying to the county board of assessors the estimated cost of roads and having the amount included in the assessment of county taxes, the Freeholders issue bonds to raise the amount required. The bonds are known as "Road Improvement Bonds" and are payable in thirty years. Interest is at the rate of four per cent. and is payable semi-annually.

Road Work During Year.

Since the original resolution authorizing the raising of $100,000 was passed, the Board of Freeholders contracted to construct several roads or sections of roads in the county. Among the work was the improvement of the following highways:

Jefferson avenue, at a cost of $2,471; Terrill road, $26,044.28; Walnut and Central avenues, $15,483; Edgar road, Lemington and Milton avenue, $43,309.64; Washington avenue, Edgar road, $18,949.50.

This work, which called for an expenditure of $106,254.42, was estimated before the resolution was passed. The committee expected to do further work during the year. It has been decided now, however, that Union county's share of the expense for road work will not be within $30,000 of the original estimate.

With an idea of saving money for the county the Committee on Public Grounds and Buildings successfully recommended the installing of a water plant in the Courthouse. The committee was authorized to go ahead with the plans for the plant, and if thought advisable to build it at a cost not exceeding $2,500.

In reporting on the matter the committee stated that by owning its own plant the county would save about $1,400 a year. The plant, which will consist of driven wells connected with up-to-date piping and plumbing, will supply the water for all of the county buildings, including the Courthouse and county jail.

Roselle Park Makes Complaint.

Another matter to come before the board yesterday was the consideration of a communication received from Mayor Louis Ebert, of Roselle Park, regarding the payment of money due the county for the building of county roads. Mr. Ebert stated that County Collector Leavitt had urged the borough to pay $8,680, the indebtedness of the municipality for the construction of roads. The Mayor, in behalf of the borough, argued that the amount was larger than the share which the borough should pay.

The county roads, he said, were built when Roselle Park was a part of Union township. When the roads were built the municipalities were to pay one-third of the cost and the county was to pay two-thirds. When the borough was incorporated, Mr. Ebert said, a meeting was held with representatives of the township for the allotment and division of liabilities and liens. It was decided at that time, he contended, that Roselle Park was to pay for the county roads in proportion to the length of county roads within the borough limits, and that the township was to pay, in proportion to the length of the county roads outside of the borough limits, but in the township.

The matter was referred to the

SNEAK THIEF VISITS HOOK'S APARTMENTS

When Harry Hook, of 147 West Front street, reached home at 10 o'clock last night, he found the door of his flat open. When he got inside the apartments he failed to find several articles of small value which had been there when he left for business in the morning.

The missing articles were a silver watch and a gold chain, which had been reposing on a dresser, and were valued at about $25 all told. The man that carried them off is supposed to have made his entrance to the Hook apartments in the afternoon with the aid of skeleton keys.

Luckily something happened to scare the burglar away, or his conscience began to bother him, for he neglected to pick up a few other articles of value that were within his reach. In fact, so suddenly did he bid the Hook apartments goodby that he forgot to shut the door.

Chief Kiely received word today that a pair of sneak thieves visited several houses in Easton yesterday.

SECTION HAND KILLED; IS STRUCK BY A TRAIN

While tightening bolts on the track near the Berkman street bridge at 8:20 o'clock this morning, Alexander Gerka, a Jersey Central section hand, was struck by westbound mail train number five, and instantly killed. He was thirty-five years old and unmarried.

Gerka was particularly noted for his superstitous nature. He had long predicted that he would meet with a serious accident on a Friday, and he was always more careful than usual about his work on that day.

When he reached his home at 213 Suydam avenue, Jersey City, last night he told his friends that he felt "safe for another week. But he judged his fate wrongly.

Gerka was a favorite among the section hands and track men of the Jersey Central. The body was taken to Cole's morgue, whence it was removed to Jersey City after County Physician Westcott granted a burial permit.

MRS. EMMA R. MATHEWS, AGED FIFTY-SIX, DEAD

Mrs. Emma R. Mathews, widow of I. Walton Mathews, aged 56 years, died last night at her home, 904 West Fourth street, from diabetes. She had been acutely ill but a few days, although she had been complaining for more than a year. She was born near New Germantown, and came from Whitehouse to this city, seven years ago. She was a member of the Monroe Avenue M. E. church.

Surviving are one son, two married daughters, Mrs. Charles Smith, of Basking Ridge, and Mrs. Samuel Dent, of this city; also three unmarried daughters, the Misses Minerva, Annie and May Mathews, who live at home. The funeral service will be held from the late home tomorrow afternoon at 4:30 o'clock. The burial will be at New Germantown.

ON THEIR HONEYMOON, NABBED FOR SPEEDING

Mr. and Mrs. Elwood Wilson, of Grandmere, Quebec, are newlyweds. They are spending their honeymoon in a whirl about the country in an automobile. Yesterday was their third day out and it brought them to Plainfield. Also, to the Plainfield police court.

It appears that they were speeding their automobile for all it was worth and that's an unpardonable thing, even in honeymooners. The watchful city police got a line on the whizzing car and stopped it before penetrated any great distance in the city. The honeymooners didn't seem to understand that there were any "fool things" like speed regulations for them, but the coppers disillusioned them.

Judge Runyon did not want the heavy hand of the law to slap the honeymooners too hard, so he gave Mr. and Mrs. Wilson a warning and suspended sentence upon them. Whereat the bride remarked that he was just too sweet for anything and resumed love's journey—at slow speed.

Mrs. Charles Huff, of this city, has been visiting friends at Centreville.

EASTERN STAR CHARTER

Officers to Be Chosen on Friday Night, December 24—Chapter is Prosperous.

Lydia Chapter, U. D., Order of the Eastern Star, which was organized here four months ago, received an official visitation from the Grand Lodge officers in the Masonic Hall Association rooms last night. In all there were about two hundred women present, including the visiting officers. The chief purpose of the visitation was to ascertain whether the local chapter had progressed sufficiently since organization to receive a charter. It was learned that it had and the Grand Lodge officers spoke words of praise of the work.

During the business session the degrees were conferred on five candidates in a manner that called forth nothing but words of praise. Among the Grand Lodge officers present were Most Worthy Grand Matron Mrs. Eliza Atkinson, of Paterson; Most Worthy Grand Patron Maurice Bauer, of New Brunswick; Associate Conductress Mrs. Mildred Lynn, of Elizabeth; Most Worthy Grand Secretary Mrs. Mary Martin, of Paterson; also delegations from Eureka Chapter, of Elizabethport; Augusta and Lucinda Chapters, of Elizabeth; Golden Link Chapter, of Newark; Germania Chapter, of Paterson and the New Brunswick Chapter.

The officers-elect of Lydia Chapter are as follows:

Matron, Mrs. C. H. Rugg; associate matron, Mrs. Elvina Weaver; conductor, Mrs. Margaret Wynkoop; associate conductor, Mrs. Elsie Bayer; treasurer, Mrs. S. B. Joseph; secretary, Mrs. H. W. Marshall; points of the Star, Mrs. Bertha Neagle, Mrs. Emma Brokaw, Mrs. Marget Pace, Mrs. Margaret Steiner, of Somerville; Mrs. Margaret McVoy; chaplain, Mrs. D. C. Adams; warder, Mrs. W. W. Warnock; organist, Mrs. Elizabeth Woodhard.

It was decided to hold the regular election on Friday night, December 24. The meetings of the chapter will be held every second and fourth Friday in the month.

After the business session an adjournment was taken to the banquet room, where refreshments were served by Caterer W. W. Warnock. The tables were attractively decorated, pink and green being the prevailing colors.

As the local chapter is still under dispensation, although it has received its charter, the number for the chapter has not yet been selected. This will be done later.

MRS. MARY KIELY SUES HUSBAND FOR DIVORCE

Through her counsel, Charles Kalisch, of Newark, Mrs. May Kiely, formerly of this city, but now a resident of East Orange, has applied to the Court of Chancery for a divorce from her husband, Charles Kiely, of Plainfield. Mrs. Kiely charges desertion.

In her bill of complaint Mrs. Kiely states that she was married to her husband in New York city on November 7, 1900, and lived with him in New York until December, 1906, when they removed to Plainfield. They continued to live together until January 6, 1907, when it is alleged that Kiely left his wife and has since refused to live with her or contribute to her support.

The petition is accompanied by an affidavit signed by Mrs. Kiely in which she declares that there has not been any collusion between herself and husband in connection with the application for a divorce.

Miss Anna R. Bartlan a Bride.

Miss Anna R. Bartlan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. August R. Bartlan, of Richmond street, and Walter E. Lane, of this city, were quietly married Thursday night by Rev. Dr. C. E. Herring, of the First Presbyterian church, at the home of the bride's parents. Miss Elizabeth H. Bartlan, sister of the bride, was the bridesmaid, and the best man was Peter Delgyer. The bride was formerly employed as bookkeeper for the Endress Meat Company for eight years, while Mr. Lane is now in the employ of the company.

Peddler Fined $5.

Abraham Stecker, of Elizabethport, was fined $5 by Judge Runyon this morning for peddling without a license. He said he had no money, but after he was taken to a cell he changed his mind and paid.

MARRIED FOR 25 YEARS

Mr. and Mrs. Lindau M. Leek Celebrate Silver Wedding Anniversary.

THEY RECEIVE MANY PRESENTS

Musical Program Followed by a Supper—Many Relatives at the Celebration.

Some seventy-five friends and relatives, a goodly number of them coming from Newark for the occasion, joined with Mr. and Mrs. Lindau M. Leek in the celebration of their silver wedding anniversary at their home on South Second street last night. Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Martin assisted in receiving. An informal program of music was one of the particularly enjoyable features, the artists being Miss Myrtle Ayres, of Morristown, and Irving Martin, pianists, and Edson C. Martin, of this city, violinist.

Among the guests were Rev. F. A. Johnson, of New York, who performed the wedding ceremony twenty-five years ago, and Mrs. Harvey R. Sturgis, of Basking Ridge, daughter of the celebrants, and their little grandson, Harvey, Jr. Other relatives in the party were an aunt, Mrs. A. J. Abbey, and their cousins, Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Abbey and Mr. and Mrs. James C. Pope, all of Newark.

Mr. and Mrs. Leek are natives of Chester, Morris county, where they were married on October 8, 1884, Rev. Mr. Johnston officiating. She was Miss Mary Budd Leek, but the two families were not related. It was on Mrs. Leek's motion that the first C. E. society in New Jersey was organized at the First Congregational church, Chester, when Mr. Johnson was pastor, and several of the guests last night were among the first officers. After the wedding, the couple spent their honeymoon at the home of his cousins, Mr. and Mrs. William C. Leek, who then resided at Montrose, Pa., and now live in Newark. The latter were present last night to extend congratulations.

An elaborate supper was served during the evenng's festivities. The couple received numerous handsome silver and cut glass gifts.

MR. AND MRS. M'INNES HOPE HOME DEP'T HOSTS

Mr. and Mrs. Donald McInnes entertained the members and friends of the recently-organized Home deber of over one hundred, to the number of over one hundred, at their home, 824 West Third street, last night. It was one of the best socials given by members of the chapel, and was a pleasing demonstration of the chapel spirit. Donald MacPherson, Donald McInnes, John Slorah, Jack Le Poidevin and Alexander Doig, rendered a number of Scotch ballads in the approved Harry Lauder style and won great applause.

In the donkey party game, Miss Ruth Kenney received first honors, Miss Le Poidevin second and Rev. L. R. Howard was presented with the booby prize. He caused much merriment when he opened it and displayed a "lolly pop."

A number of parlor games were played, after which refreshments were served by Miss Kennena Hansen, Miss Florence Millar, Mrs. Thos. Hendry, Mrs. F. A. Weber, Mrs. William Gray, Mrs. Harry Vogel, Mrs. Willard Cook, Mrs. Margaret Hansen, Mrs. Donald McInnes, Messrs. Thomas Hendry, William Taylor and Donald McInnes. Mrs. William Busby headed a committee which received the guests.

CASE AGAINST KERWIN POSTPONED BY COURT.

John Kerwin, son of Lawrence Kerwin, proprietor of the "Guinea Egg" Hotel, and John Kerwin, a brother of the hotel man, were arraigned before Judge Runyon in the police court this morning on the complaint of Fred Boland, who alleged that the pair had cursed and threatened him upon the street.

At the request of William G. DeMeza, counsel for Boland, the court ordered the case postponed until next Saturday.

FOUR ARE INJURED BY GAS EXPLOSION

Gas Producer Engine Goes Wrong at Rushmore Dynamo Works.

CAUSE OF ACCIDENT UNKNOWN.

An explosion in the gas producer engine in the engine room at the Rushmore Dynamo Works at 1:45 o'clock this afternon, caused serious injury to four employes, who happened to be in the room at the time.

The injured men are John Tobin, James Denitzio and Michael Topack. Cornelius Guinee, another employe, received a slight injury of the hand, but was able to go home.

The three men were hurried to Muhlenberg Hospital, where an examination showed that Tobin and Topack are not so seriously injured, while Denitzio is badly burned about the face, hands and arms.

The explosion caused such a loud report that it was heard throughout the big works. As soon as it was learned that the men were injured, telephone messages summoned a majority of the physicians in the city. The ambulance and police patrol were the first to arrive and by the time the physicians reached the scene, the men had been removed to the hospital.

Rumors of a terrible catastrophe were soon heard all over the city, hundreds of people were attracted to the works.

Just what caused the accident is no known. A reporter for The Daily Press found but three men at the works a half hour after the accident, but they knew but little concerning the affair.

Producer gas is used as a motive power at the works and it is believed that something got wrong with the engine causing the explosion. As near as can be learned, the injured men were standing close to the engine.

When the men reached the hospital they were all suffering greatly from burns about the face, hands and arms, as well as shock. Later it was learned that Denitzio seemed to be in the worst condition, suffering chiefly from shock.

S. W. Rushmore, owner of the works, together with his wife, is now travelling abroad.

BITTER FIGHT OVER THE HETFIELD ESTATE.

More than twenty witness were examined in the contest of the Hetfield will in the Orphans Court at Elizabeth before Judge Atawater. The witnesses examined testified in behalf of the proponent.

The case involves the will of Cora O. N. Hetfield, of Alton, who last spring died and left his money to Joseph Gallagher, the proprietor of a Rahway avenue hotel. Hetfield was living with Gallagher at the time of his death. He left about $20,000 and ignored all of his relatives in his bequests. The case has been pending since May.

Judge Newcorn and Assistant Prosecutor Hetfield represent the defendants.

"THE PANTHER" TONIGHT AT THE LOCAL THEATRE.

The "S. R. O." sign was hung out earlier than usual at the Plainfield theatre last night when Charles K. Champlin & Company presented "he Lamb and the Brute." PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

The anti-saloon people only won a partial victory at Elizabeth yesterday as the court granted the licenses of William Lee and William Deegan, the only one refused being Lynus Walpole. The town was pretty well stirred up over the question, but the majority wanted license, claiming that the town needed hotels and if the anti-saloon element wanted to make a fight, not to make it against the granting of all licenses, but to get the evidence against any of the hotel men who did not comply with the law and make the fight to have his license revoked.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS.

In "A Knight for a Day," due here Monday night, a small town expressman by mistake delivers a case of champagne to a self-appointed steward he encounters on the grounds of a young ladies boarding school. The confidence man in his eagerness to bear away his sparkling prize, accidentally drops the wine down a well, where the bottles break and the nectar changes the water. A simple slavey attached to the college drinks from the well unwittingly and, of course, becomes intoxicated. The inebriation scene is said to be one of the most delicate, yet convincing manifestations of feminine exhilaration yet offered on the stage. Reports say that audiences in Chicago, New York and Boston have laughed immoderately for three or four minutes steadily over the maid's plight.

The Plainfield theatre makes an extraordinary bid for fashionable patronage in offering that great racing comedy, "Wildfire," which will be presented here on Saturday afternoon and night next, with the famous American beauty, Pauline Hall, as the central figure. "Wildfire," which is acclaimed the greatest dramatic story of the race course ever written, is the product of those two distinguished playwrights, George Broadhurst, author of "The Man of the Hour," and George V. Hobart, who wrote Marie Cahill's present successful starring vehicle, "The Boys and Betty."

A well known author went to see "This Woman and This Man" at the Maxine Elliott theatre in New York last season and confessed that he came away in a chastened mood. "Do you know," he said, "I thought every tear in me had been dried up ten years ago by the cruel realties of our city life, but Minnie Victorson found one lurking somewhere. My only regret is that I didn't see her months ago, for I assure you that I would be a frequent worshipper at the feet of that simple governess since then." "This Woman and This Man" has been booked for a single performance in this city on Friday, October 15.

ELIZABETH BRIDE FOR A STUYVESANT SCION.

Miss Isabelle Williamson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Beasley Williamson, of Elizabeth, and Guy Stuyvesant Brandreth, a descendant of the original Stuyvesant family, of Manhattan, were married Thursday afternoon in Trinity Episcopal church. The ceremony was performed by Rev. John R. Atkinson. Following the ceremony, there was a reception at the home of the bride's parents, in Union avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. Brandreth will go to Italy on their honeymoon.

Daily Health Hint.

Moistening the finger with the lips, to turn the leaves of a book, or particularly to count money, affords a ready means of infection. It does not follow that all who do this will be infected by a contagious disease. The act may be done ninety-nine times without a bad result. Prudence suggests, however, that even the one hundredth chance should not be taken, particularly since the custom, even though it be not directly prejudical to health, is at best uncleanly. To avoid even the remote danger of harm is so easy that the slightest chance should not be taken.

Apply Jelly.

Cut up the apples in pieces, put on the fire with very little water and cook slowly until soft, then put all in a jelly bag and let drip until the next day. Take equal parts of the juice and granulated sugar. Put the juice on the stove and let boil hard for twenty minutes, then add the sugar which has been warmed through in the oven. Let this come to a boil and pour in jelly glasses. To keep the glasses from cracking when pouring in the jelly, place a tea towel in a large pan and set the glasses on this, pour hot water around them.

SPORTS HERE AND THERE

GOLF.

This is a red letter day at the Plainfield Country club, when the organization is entertaining the members of the Watchung Hunt, Park Golf and Park club, representing the athletic and social life of the city. A reception and tea is being held this afternoon at the clubhouse and there will be a dance tonight.

Special trolleys will be run on the Arlington avenue line, and stages will meet all cars during the afternoon and evening. There will be general play at golf on the course and tennis on the club courts, all club privileges being extended to the guests.

The enlarged and improved conditions at the Plainfield Country club makes today's entertainment a real pleasure. More than 200 persons can be accommodated in the large dining-rooms, and the accommodations for dancing are ideal.

In view of the entertainment at the Plainfield Country club, today, there will be practically nothing doing at the Park Golf club. The weekly competition for the President's, Golf club and Oakmont cups is scheduled and will probably be played sometime during the day so as not to let the competition by default, but otherwise the members will be at the other club.

BASEBALL.

The Elizabeth Athletic Club, with "Flick" Luyster in the box, will meet the Plainfield Baseball Club at Crescent Oval this afternoon. This will probably be the last game of the season for the local aggregation and a large crowd is expected to witness the contest.

The Somerville and Bound Brook teams will meet today at Bound Brook. The home aggregation expects to retreive the honors lost last week when "Lou" Wiltse's team won out by a score of 7 to 1.

By the way Manager Newhouse's club never did make much of a showing away from home. The team played here a few times, but always lost. Wonder if there is a magnet hidden about the Bound Brook grounds.

East Millstone can tell the fans something about the umpire system at Bound Brook that would help to explain some of the victories for the home club.

Either Randolph or Brewer will pitch for Plainfield today against Elizabeth. It's about time Randolph won a game. He lost the last two with McNulty Bros.' team.

Pittsburg, 4; Detroit, 1.

The first engagement in the series of games for the chief honors in baseball took place on Forbes Field, Pittsburg, yesterday afternoon, and was won by the Pittsburgs. The National League pennant winners defeated the Detroit team, three-time winners of the American League championship, by 4 to 1. They were superior to the Tigers in fielding and in the timeliness of their hitting and won for that reason.

Neither side did anything impressive with the bat and did not wield the willow as becomes the best in their respective leagues, but the pitching on both sides was of strictly championship calibre and the fielding of the Pirates was in every way up to the standard expected from champions. Steadier than the Detroits in supporting their pitcher, the Pittsburgs also performed without a mistake in the field, whereas the Detroits made three errors and each of the three was costly.

The score:

Pittsburg.

New York, 4; Boston, 2.

Despite the fact that the Boston Red Sox outbatted the Giants, the latter were able to take the opening game of the series with their American League rivals, at the Polo grounds yesterday afternoon, the score being 4 runs to 2.

The vistors really handed the game to the New York team, for it was their errors which allowed McGraw's men to tally three runs and sew up the game. It was in the fourth that that trio of tallies was recorded.

With one down Devlin caught one on the nose and sent it to left for a single. He promptly stole second, and then Bridwell was passed. Pitcher Wood tried to catch Devlin off second, but made a bad toss and Devlin moved to third, Bridwell taking second. Lord got Tenney's bounder and threw to the plate in time to catch Devlin, but the latter dodged back and Lord, after getting the ball for the second time, dropped it and Devlin scored, Bridwell going to third base and Tenney to second. McConnell threw Meyers out at first, Bridwell scoring and Tenney tallying. Doyle forced Matty at second. The score:

Kidney troubles, urinary troubles follow.

A Plainfield citizen tells you how to cure them all.

A. C. Lazzi, 44 Elm place, Plainfield, N. J., says: "I have used Doan's Kidney Pills off and on for five years and from my experience with them, I feel that I cannot give them too much praise. I have to do a great deal of standing at my work and I think that my kidneys became weakened in this way. I suffered from a dull, grinding pain in my back and also had attacks of rheumatism. Another source of annoyance was irregular passages of the kidneys secretions. I finally began using Doan's Kidney Pills procured at Randolph's drug store and I was soon in good health. Since then hard work has brought on one or two slight attacks of backache but a few doses of Doan's Kidney Pills have never failed to give me instant relief."

BLOOMFIELD SHORT ON POLICE.

On account of the number of trolley cars, wagons, automobiles and other vehicles constantly passing the Watessing and Berkeley schools, the police mommittee of the Town Council of Bloomfield has been requested to station a policeman at each school during the hours of assembling and dismissing the pupils. Councilman Walker, chairman of the committee, replied that a policeman could not be spared for that work.

"There are only nine patrolmen on the force, and eight of them do duty at night," he said. "The other one patrols Bloomfield Centre during the day."

DOG ON GUARD IN RUNAWAY AUTOMOBILE.

James H. Legg, an electrician who has a place of business adjoining the Montclair Postoffice, narrowly escaped being chewed by a bulldog that inadvertently set its mistress' automobile going while the owner was away from the machine and then attacked Legg when he sought to prevent a runaway.

The dog accompanied two women who drove up to the Postoffice shortly before noon. The women entered the office, leaving the dog in charge of the automobile, the engine of which was running. The bulldog became restless and in jumping about the machine landed heavily on the starting tread. The automobile started off.

Legg, who saw what had happened from his place of business, dashed out to stop the automobile. When he approached the car the dog assumed an aggressive attitude, and when Legg reached forward to seize a lever he made a dash at the electrician. The man avoided the dog, but as the automobile was gaining headway down the hill Legg made another attempt to stop it.

The dog, more savage than before, again frustrated his attempt to prevent the runaway. Legg, however, finally succeeded in grabbing a plug by which the power was cut off.

SCHOOL TO BE PROUD OF.

G. A. R. Men Dedicate Roselle Park's New Building.

Roselle Park last night dedicated a public school that is without a peer in any municipality of corresponding size. General Charles Burrows, of Rutherford, delivered the oration that marked the evening exercises.

Through the activity of Past Department Commander Alfred Atkins, of the Grand Army of the Republic, funds were raised for the purchase of a marble and bronze tablet bearing the Gettysburg address of Lincoln, to be placed in the building. In the name of Ulric Dahlgren Post 25, G. A. R., of Elizabeth, the tablet was last night presented to the school. Department Patriotic Instructor Uriah Seely, of East Orange, delivered an address in unveiling the tablet, which was on the platform of the auditorium and covered with a flag.

Frank Bergen, general counsel for the Public Service Corporation, a member of the local Board of Education, was a speaker, as were also State Superintendent of Public Instruction Charles Baxter, Assistant Superintendent J. Brognard Betts, and City Clerk James F. Connelly, of Newark, department commander of the G. A. R.

The Junior Order of United American Mechanics today presented the school with a flag and Bible.

JURY INDICTS GAS COMPANY.

Escaping Fluid in Paterson Believed to Have Caused an Epidemic.

Gas escaping from the mains and tanks of the Public Service Corporation is believed to have caused an epidemic of illness in the Riverside section of Paterson. A delegation headed by the Rev. Father Stein, pastor of the Catholic Church of Our Lady of Lourdes, at Paterson, visited the Grand Jury yesterday afternoon, and related the experience of Riverside citizens. The Grand Jury voted to indict the corporation.

"It is too bad," declared Father Stein after he left the Grand Jury room, "that in dealing with matters of this kind there is no one person to approach and make appeal to. Never before did I realize what a hard proposition it is to get justice from a corporation. We wish no harm to the corporation, but we do insist on our God-given right to breathe fresh air."

LOCAL MAN FIGURES IN MILLIONS' CORPORATION

The Continental Telegraph and Telephone Company was chartered at Trenton yesterday, with $50,000,000 authorized capital, to take over the telephone lines in New York and in New Jersey, but how the charter does not state. The stock is half preferred and half common.

The incorporators are William M. Clark, of Woodland avenue, this city, and Powell Carichton and William Conley, of New York city. Mr. Clark is a son of William A. Clark, president of the Borough National Bank. While it is believed that the company is in opposition to the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, no further details are obtainable at present.

The purpose of the new company, as shown in the articles in incorporation, is to amalgamate as many telegraph and telephone lines as possible. Anothed clause provides for the company to send messages with or without wires. In fact there is hardly any contingency that is not provided for in the articles filed yesterday. The papers state that the new company is organized "to unite and consolidate any telegraph, telephone or cable lines and systems into one or more systems, and to equip, maintain, operate, rent, sell, or otherwise dispose of all or any part of any such consolidated system or systems."

"I can assure you that the company is the real thing and that work will be commenced at once,' said William M. Clark, 507 Woodland avenue, Plainfield, one of the incorporators. "I am not at liberty to go further than is put forth in the papers. We will begin at once both to construct new lines and consolidate old ones, but just what these will be I cannot tell you."

When pressed as to who would be the officers of the Continental Telegraph and Telephone Company, Mr. Clark said that all the officers had not been selected.

HOME FINANCE

In these days of strenuous business methods it is very necessary that women should know how to manage the Home Finances.

A great many women know all about their husband's business. Every woman, at least, should know how to keep an ACCURATE BANK ACCOUNT.

There is no better place to learn the "How" and "Why" than at the

PIANO CONTEST FAKES EXPOSED!

IMPORTANT FACTS FOR HOLDERS OF GOLD BONDS, PIANO COUPONS AND DISCOUNT CERTIFICATES.

There are several Piano houses which have no prices for their goods except grossly inflated ones arranged expressly for fake discounts in connection with schemes of various kinds. These houses seem to find it impossible to dispose of their pianos in a legitimate, straightforward way, but instead resort to one scheme after another—catch-penny devices, so crude as to be positively insulting to the intelligence of the public. These schemes usually take the form of guessing contests, drawing puzzles, and various feats of little skill. In all of them the object is identical to mislead the prospective buyer into the belief that he is getting something for nothing, while at the same time prices are arranged sufficiently high to off-set the allowance to which his prize certificate entitles him.

EVERYONE WHO MAKES A GUESS GETS A PRIZE!

If you have ever answered one of these ads you received a discount certificate. EVERYBODY DOES. It matters not whether the answer is good, bad or indifferent, from adult or child it draws a prize in the shape of a certificate or due bill (generally from $65.00 to $100.00) to apply on the purchase of a new Piano. Of course the price of the Piano is fixed accordingly and the purchaser pays a high price even after the amount of certificate is deducted, usually a much higher price than an instrument of similar quality could be secured for in any legitimate music store.

To test the value of one of these certificates present it in payment for something other than a new piano—say a low priced used piano, music cabinet or a bench, and see how quickly the dealer will turn you down. He will not even give you 50 cents worth of music for it. Try the experiment!

AT $185.00 WE WILL SELL A BETTER PIANO THAN THE SCHEME HOUSES ASK $325.00 TO $400.00 FOR! Such well known and high grade makes as Haines Bros., Brewster, the Genuine Mathushek and others too numerous to mention.

LOWEST PRICES AND EASIEST TERMS. CALL AND BE CONVINCED.

SOME STATE NEWS BRIEFS

While Mr. and Mrs. Harry Lewis were visiting friends in Philadelphia burglars looted their home in Bivalve and escaped.

The Cumberland County Prohibitionists and the Socialists have decided to make nominations by petitions for county offices.

After careful investigation temperance people have estimated that the amount of beer shipped into legally "dry" Millville is 4,000 cases a week.

The fall meeting of the Gloucester County Historical Society will be held in the courthouse, Woodbury, next Tuesday afternoon.

Edward B. Gaunt, of Williamstown, picked nearly two quarts of strawberries from his garden Tuesday. The berries were large and of excellent flavor.

Daniel L. Pine, eighty-two years old, one of Woodbury's oldest citizens, has just returned from a trip through the Southern States, which he made alone.

There is to be a lively "shake-up" in the Millville fire department, as it has been discovered that some members have not reported for duty for a year.

Woodbury Creek is temporarily closed to navigation. A barge laden with fertilizer sank at the Crown Point bridge and lies directly across the stream.

A Chinese in irons, who had attempted suicide by hanging and also by swallowing fishhooks, is a member of the crew of a boat which arrived at the powder works, Gibbstown.

Gloucester City Council Thursday night decided to issue bonds to pay off the floating indebtedness of the city amounting to $87,500. A new hosehouse will be stationed in the Second ward for the fire department.

The banks of Maurice River have been overflown and Millville's new $22,000 sewage disposal plant is under three feet of water. The Council claims that the construction of the plant is faulty, and will hold up the contractors' money.

Dan Wilkes, a valuable racehorse, the property of J. W. Gyles, of Paterson, the horse trainer, was found with a broken leg in a box stall of the Gyles stable on Bank street, that city Thursday evening. It is not known how the animal's leg was broken. Dr. Pierce killed the horse. Mr. Gyles valued the animal at $1,000.

A "Peeping Tom" has been making his rounds in Richwood, his last visit being at the home of Enos Kier, where he was discovered by V. D. Clark and Wilmer Madara, of Pitman, but he got away. The man uses a light ladder, and evidently knows the town well, as he only peeps into the windows of homes where the men are away.

Thieves Thursday cut the cables of the twenty-six-foot auxiliary sloop Navajo, owned by John Nicholson, of 71 Bayview avenue, Jersey City, as she lay off the Robbins Reef Yacht Club at the foot of Forty-sixth street and New York Bay, Bayonne, and towed the boat away. They made an attmept to steal the thirty-foot launch Amanda H., but after towing it a short distance let it go, and the boat drifted ashore.

Counsel for Felix Isman, Philadelphia real estate operator, who purchased the Windsor Hotel property, Atlantic City, will appear before the special beach commissioners appointed to secure strand for the ocean-front park to protest the proposed award of $100 a foot offered for the Isman frontage at Illinois avenue. Isman claims the price is too low and threatens to carry the matter into the courts if attempt is made to condemn the land.

The large barns on the John P. Whitney farm, at Glassboro, occupied by George Rowan, were destroyed by fire of supposed incendiary origin Thursday night. Five horses, one of them a valuable trotter, and six fine cows perished, and all the stock of hay and grain was consumed. The loss is from $7,000 to $10,000. The buildings were fully and the stock and contents partly insured. Mr. Rowan had had trouble with thieves, and it is believed the buildings were deliberately fired.

On his way to school in Jersey City Thursday fourteen-year-old John Logan, of 245 Whitman avenue, climbed a tall tree on a dare. As he was afraid to come down a man threw a rope to him. This proved unsuccessful, and Fireman Philip Seaman, of Engine Company No. 20, sounded an alarm, and with the use of extension ladders of No. 5 Truck Company, the boy was rescued after being in the tree two hours. He was almost exhausted and had to be treated in a drug store.

Representing the widow of Alonzo P. Jones, who was killed by a trolley car on August 9, counsel in Camden Thursday began action in the Supreme Court against William C. Scull, a well-to-do coffee dealer; F. W. Farcy, of Marietta, Pa., and the Public Service Corporation to recover $20,000. Jones was riding a motor-cycle when, it is alleged, he was "pocketed" between the automobiles of Scull and Farcy, which resulted in him running in front of the company's trolley car. He was instantly killed.

Securing the entire beach of Atlantic City for park purposes has brought out a new problem, for local contractors and builders will be compelled to pay for building sand and freight from distant points, while millions of tons of the chief ingredient of mortar and cement lies within a few hundred yards of their operation. Under the new law, neither the city nor the owners who deed their land to municipal control will have legal right to allow carting of sand off the beach.

Testifying in his own behalf in the Camden Criminal Court Thursday, where he was charged with selling liquor to Earl Scott, a minor, Thomas McDonald, a former saloonkeeper, of Ninth and Walnut streets, said the youth's mother, Mrs. Kirk, had offered to settle the case for $100. Rising to her feet in the court room, Mrs. Kirk shouted, "You're a liar!" The woman was told that if she made any more outcries she would be hustled from the room. McDonald was convicted.

Word was sent to the Camden City Hall Thursday that a Polander was flourishing a revolver in a saloon in the southern section of the city, and that he remarked that he intended using the weapon on Rev. Father Tarnowski, of St. Joseph's Polish Catholic church, at Tenth and Liberty streets. Sergeant of Police Snow found the man on Broadway, hurrying in the direction of the church. He was arrested and at the City Hall gave the name of John Fox, of Philadelphia. In his possession the police found a revolver. Three months in the county jail on a charge of carrying concealed deadly weapons was the sentence imposed on him.

VICE-CHANCELLOR HOLDS NO MAN NEED BE IDLE.

Jersey City, Oct. 9.—Vice-Chancellor Garrison has made a ruling that a man thirty-seven years old, who is in good health, has no business to wait for a steady job to turn up, if he is a married man, but must do something to support his wife. The vice-chancellor delivered himself of this dictum when Jacob C. Wagner gave his inability to get a steady job as the reason why he should not pay his wife alimony during the pendency of her suit for divorce.

Wagner lives in Ferndale, Bergen County, and his wife is at present living with her brother, Frederick Knobloch, at 143 Pavonia avenue, Jersey City. They were married March 7, 1894, at St. Matthew's Lutheran church, by Rev. Dr. Peterson.

In March, 1908, Mrs. Wagner says, she and her husband had a quarrel over his refusal to get out and work. They separated, Mr. Wagner going to live with his sister at Ferndale. Mrs. Wagner says she made numerous attempts to get her husband to live with her, and that he told her he would as soon as he got steady employment. She says he has not done so, and that now she is dependent upon her brother for support.

When Mr. Wagner's lawyers answered the complaint with the assertion of Wagner that he could not get steady employment, Vice-Chancellor Garrison read a lecture on the present state of prosperity in this country. He said it was foolish to assert that an able-bodied man thirty-seven years of age could not get work if he wanted it.

"He has married this woman and he has got to support her," said the vice-chancellor. "Why, I have to hunt around to get men to work for me—they are all so busy."

Mrs. Wagner was granted $5 a week.

CHARGES THAT STREETS ARE SHODDILY PAVED.

City Comptroller Charles E. Annett, of Bayonne, took a step Thursday that may lead to an investigation of the repaving of Broadway. That the contract is being violated is a matter of current rumor. At the intersection of Ninth street Comptroller Annett stepped into the roadway, where a concrete foundation was being laid. He picked out two small cobblestones and stepped back upon the sidewalk. The foreman demanded the reason of his action.

The concrete foundation is supposed to be made from two-and-one-half-inch broken stone. When Comptroller Annett saw what was going on he took the two specimens of rock into the Bayonne Trust Company, of which he is a director, and told a clerk to put them in a safe. Then the comptroller returned to the street, and, seeking out the foreman, he delivered himself of a speech that may lead to litigation over payment for the improvement.

"I will sign no warrant for payments of that work," said the comptroller. "The contract is not being carried out, and I have evidence to that effect."

Comptroller was appointed three years ago by Mayor Garven. His action of Thursday may lead to the investigation asked for by Democratic Councilman George Russell at the last Council meeting Tuesday night.

Biggest Policeman Dead.

"Archie" Colvell, Elizabeth's biggest policeman, and probably the biggest in the State, died yesterday of typhoid pneumonia. He weighed nearly 400 pounds and was six feet three inches in height. He was born in Scotland and at one time had a reputation as an athlete.

Robert Hilliard in "A Fool There Was," with the entire original cast combined by Frederic Thompson, and the complete scenic production, comes to the Grand Opera House, the week of October 11. One of the great dramatic successes of recent years is this odd and powerful play by Porter Emerson Browne, inspired by Kipling's wierd poem of the vampire woman who was only "a rag and a bone and a hank of hair." It runs the gamut froc comedy to tragedy and has placed Mr. Hilliard in the front of our representative actors. It is a remarkable supporting company that includes William Courtleigh, Katherine Kaelred, Nanette Comstock, Emily Wurster and all who shared in Mr. Hilliard's original New York success last spring.

Prosperity at the Hippodrome continues in the shape of capacity business which has been the rule ever since the opening week at the big playhouse. The three big spectacles, "A Trip to Japan," "The Ballet of Jewels," and "Inside the Earth" please the public fancy mightly and Messrs. Shubert & Anderson feel assured that the present season will be the banner one in the history of the Hippodrome. Seventeen splendid scenic changes are shown during the performance. Amongst the most impressive being the fine panoramic vista of New York harbor at night, the wonderful waterfall in which the bodies of living women are seen to mingle with the foam of waves. The departure of the giant ocean liner—a remarkable bit of stage mechanism—the Mikado's Garden with the colorful fete of chrysanthemums, the Iridescent Cave of Gems introducting the glittering Jewel Ballet and last but by no means least the mystifying march of an army of men and maids into the sea. The manner in which the armor clad soldiers disappear beneath the water is an ever-recurrent surprise to the audiences.

Margaret Anglin is this season appearing at the Savoy Theatre, New York, in a new emotional play entitled "The Awakening of Helena Richie," dramatized from one of Margaret Deland's stories of Old Chester, familiar to all readers of popular novels. Miss Anglin is proclaimed the greatest emotional actress now appearing on the American stage and in the role of Helena she has made the success of her career. The strong appeal of the play is notable, brought forward as it is by magnificent acting on the part of Miss Anglin, who, never before has had so full an opportunity to give largeness of expression to her intimate powers of emotional feeling. The play is intensely interesting from the rise of the curtain until the conclusion of the fourth act. The heart interest is unusually strong, occasioned by the introduction of an adopted child upon whom Helena has bestowed all the maternal instinct of which a woman is capable and is the cause of separating her from the man she should marry. No play has ever been more handsomely mounted or more capably played.

Alan Dale in the New York American says: "I shan't write a tract about Mr. Leo Ditrichstein's adapted German play at the Belasco Theatre, called 'Is Matrimony a Failure?' I could do it easily, with perfectly brilliant allusions. Although this new play is a laugh from start to finish—and one of the best kind of laughs, for it comes from the very innards—there never was a 'merry comedy,' as it calls itself, or a farce that was really so serious. Philosophers have written many an abstract treatise on the very topic that we roar at at the Belasco. When Ibsen made Nora quit her home, and bang the door after her, every one got up on his toes and discussed the curious ending of 'Doll's House.' The best member of the excellent company at the Belasco is Miss Anne Sutherland, by a long sight. Her work was irreproachable. It was sound, sane and delightful."

SCATTERS NUMBERS OF ANY AUTO IN MISHAP.

Trenton, Oct. 9.—A contrivance, whereby automobiles figuring in accidents will automatically scatter at the scene of the mishap cards bearing their license number, was submitted to State Motor Vehicle Commissioner J. B. R. Smith yesterday by the inventor.

The invention calls for a large box on the front of the machine, in which are hundreds of tags bearing the number of the machine, the cards so arranged that whenever the machine strikes anything a piston is depressed and opens the box, and the cards fly out. The inventor was of the opinion that in this way there would be no escape for the autoist who does not care to give his number when he is in trouble.

The commissioner listened, but is it unlikely that he will recommend to the Legislature the adoption of this invention.

Elks' Bazar Sure of Success.

The Elks' bazar was continued at Elizabeth last night, with another large attendance. The committee in charge is anticipating a remarkable success.

—Mr. and Mrs. B. A. Hegeman and daughter, Miss Virginia Hegeman, removed yesterday from Myrtle avenue, the borough, to 145 West Fifty-eighth street, New York, for the winter.

Sommers' face flamed with anger. He understood now, he thought, why Pinckney had been willing to leave Smith on the job, even though he was drunk. It all seemed simple. Smith must buy immunity from punishment in this shameful fashion.

Contempt for Pinckney and rage that he should run the risk of being ruined by the dirty work of such men roused Sommers to fierce anger. He turned back and ran again up the steps to the little office, knocking fiercely this time on the door.

"Pinckney, come out of there at once!" he shouted.

The command was so fiercely given the general manager could not but obey. He opened the door, coming out slowly and, in response to Sommers' gesture of command, followed him down the steps.

Frances, her face partly covered with the shawl, came after Pinckney. At the bottom of the steps the naval officer turned on the manager of the works with fierce contempt.

"No wonder you keep Smith drunk on the job!" he exclaimed. "Haven't you got sense of shame enough not to take his daughter in that office before all these men?"

Pinckney understood the mistake, but it was anything to gain time now.

"What business is that of yours?" he retorted angrily.

"Well, I'll make it my business," came the fierce reply. "It's my business when such conduct threatens to ruin my work as well as ruin a girl's name. You ought to be ashamed of yourself. Now, get her out quick. Then take Smith off this job."

He turned his back contemptuously on Pinckney and the girl just in time to meet the blazing, wrathful face of Joe O'Leary.

The assistant foreman had been fixed up by the doctor and now, with a bandaged head, had returned to the works just in time to see Pinckney and the girl with Sommers at the bottom of the steps. O'Leary, too, misunderstood.

"Mr. Pinckney," he yelled, "watch me! I cross myself. I know what you've done to others, but you can't do it to my girl. I cross myself, and with it goes an oath that I'm going to kill you with my bare hands!"

He rushed forward, and Pinckney jumped back before his fierce attack. But escape would have been hopeless had not Frances, throwing back the shawl from her head, stepped in between, so that she faced both Sommers and O'Leary.

The wounded O'Leary stopped, aghast.

"Miss Durant!" he said slowly, in amazement. Sommers stared, startled, not knowing what to say. Then he saw the expression on the men's faces, and that forced him to speak.

"Mr. Pinckney, explain all this at once, for the sake of O'Leary and these men."

Pinckney shrugged his shoulders.

"There's nothing to explain," he said. "Miss Durant wanted to see the Sommers gun made, and she borrowed one of Lucy Smith's dresses so as not to excite comment, that's all."

His tone was cool, collected, with just a touch of surprise in it that any explanation would be needed.

O'Leary stepped back awkwardly.

"Yes, sir. I beg your pardon for me hasty speech."

The general manager turned to Frances.

"Come! Let's go, Frances."

The girl had been looking at Sommers and he at her. Both knew that something more was needed. Something more must be said before the perfect understanding between them could be restored.

Finally, with a half sigh, she turned and started to walk away. Sommers stepped close to Pinckney.

"If you don't explain aloud at once why you attempted to put Miss Durant in an awkward position by locking that door I'll break your head. How dared you lock that door? You—with your reputation about these works! Speak!"

"The door wasn't locked," retorted Pinckney aloud.

Frances heard. She stopped short, her face flushed with shame. Was it possible that Sommers thought there was anything wrong in her being there? Then anger at herself for coming and at him for letting himself provoke a scene swept her to action. She turned and stepped back quickly to the two men.

"Don't say a word, Mr. Pinckney," she ordered sharply. "I forbid you to speak. Lieutenant Sommers can think for a moment what his manner seems to imply. I refuse to give him any explanation. I must also refuse to even see him in the future."

Sommers looked at her aghast.

"Miss Durant, you don't understand," he exclaimed.

The girl looked him coldly up and down.

"I do understand, Mr. Sommers. Good day." And, turning, she walked quickly away.

Sommers looked after her for a moment, then, seeing the hopelessness of the misunderstanding, turned back to the furnaces. As he did so for the first time he noticed his gun being transferred to the tempering bath.

"Here! What's this?" he shouted. But before he could say more Smith had stepped in front of him.

The foreman was wild with drunken glee now. He had won, he felt, and there was nothing to do but hold Sommers off a minute longer.

"What do you think of it now?" he shouted. "Your girl was locked up with him, wasn't she? Lots of chance you stand against the general manager when she'll lock herself in the office with him."

As the last jeering word came out Sommers swung wildly. Smith staggered, then came back with the iron bar raised. In an instant he had brought it crashing down upon the lieutenant's head. Then, as the naval officer fell, in rage Smith bent over and seized him.

"What are you doing?" shouted Pinckney.

But Smith, insane from rage and the sight of blood, was beyond managing.

He lifted the half dazed sailor and staggered with him toward an open furnace.

He lifted the half dazed sailor and staggered with him toward an open furnace.

Naval men are used to hard knocks, Sommers came to. He had dodged partly, and the bar caught him only a glancing blow. Now he realized his danger and with a desperate effort tore himself loose.

Smith had dropped the bar. It was an even thing now. Wildly the foreman rushed, but a straight left stopped him, and then a fierce right uppercut, delivered close, brought him to his knees.

He arose only to meet another swing that dropped him senseless, and as he fell his head struck the ground just under the big trip hammer.

The hammer was coming down when Sommers with a quick jerk dragged his man out just in time. Then as he stood above his senseless antagonist he heard the voice of Pinckney joyously triumphant:

"All right! The Sommers gun is in the bath!"

The dirty trick had been safely turned.

CHAPTER XI.

FRANCES GOES TO SEA.

THREE months had passed following the casting of the Sommers gun, three months that had brought many changes to those whose lives had been for a short time tangled in the intricate maze of pride, love and ambition.

The gun had been taken to the proving grounds and there had stood the test. The naval board was enthusiastic over it. All that remained was for the weapon to prove its efficiency on shipboard at target practice and it would be adopted by the government.

Orders on the Rhinestrom gun were still held up pending the result of target practice.

Lieutenant Sommers had been ordered back to sea duty. Apparently he had achieved his ambition. The future looked bright for him in his chosen profession. Fellow officers envied him. He was considered a wonderful young man, and a bright future in the service of his country seemed in store.

All this on the side of ambition, but on the other side life was not so bright. He knew that no matter how high he might rise in his profession happiness could not be his. He had lost irretrievably the girl he loved, and satisfied ambition meant little to him compared to that.

On the morning after the sensational events in the furnace room Sommers had called at the Durant house. Frances had refused to see him. He wrote her a letter, and it was returned to him unopened. Finally he managed to meet her on the street, but she passed him by without speaking.

Next morning the young officer reported back in Washington for duty.

And how about the girl? She had hurried away from the works that night burning with shame and raging with anger. She determined never to see Sommers again. She hated him! She knew she did! And to make it sure she told herself so over and over again.

The next day she was still enraged when he called. It cost no effort to have him turned from the door. When his note arrived she started impulsively to open it, then checked herself. She would be firm; she would punish him.

And so with some slight effort she handed the letter to the servant with instructions to return it to Lieutenant Sommers at his hotel.

Passing her old lover on the street had been an effort, but that, too, she managed to do. It took the last of her anger, however. The reaction had come. She began to regret, then to forgive and finally to long once more for the one man who, she felt sure, could make her happy.

A little discreet questioning had brought out the cause of his anger. She found out the real reputation of Pinckney among the work people. The discovery shocked her.

She understood then why Sommers had been so enraged. She saw it was not against her or brought about by any doubt of her, but merely fierce, uncontrollable rage against Pinckney that he had dared—a man of his kind—to put her in a position that his character at once made questionable.

When she had finally come to a real understanding the girl longed to write, but Sommers by that time was away on sea duty, and she could not reach him. Against her own judgment she had longed for and expected some word from him. But the naval officer's pride was too great to pursue a further intrusion after so signal a rebuff.

Then the girl began to grow pale and to worry. Her parents noticed the change without realizing the cause. No one had any suspicion of the real relation between Frances and the young naval officer. That "good night" on the vine covered porch was a secret—a tender memory locked in her heart and in his, to be brought out by each, regarded fondly and mourned over when alone.

Sommers had his work, but Frances had nothing to distract her mind. No wonder she grew paler and seemed to lose interest in everything! Mr. and Mrs. Durant became alarmed. They consulted doctors, but there was nothing wrong physically with their daughter. Finally one big expert proposed a sea voyage, and for the first time Frances showed some sign of interest. Mr. Durant paid a double size bill cheerfully, thinking that doctor a wonderful man.

The Durant yacht, the Irvessa, was got ready as quickly as possible. Mr. Durant could not go himself, and he decided it would be a good plan to send his wife and daughter away for a cruise in charge of Pinckney.

Now for a month they cruised, but Frances showed little sign of interest.

Pinckney was the only one who seemed to get real enjoyment out of the trip. He now felt that victory must in the end be his.

He was not deceived by the result of the first test of the Sommers gun. It had stood the first test safely, but in his heart the conspirator knew that soon the badly tempered gun must fail, perhaps with shocking results.

That mattered little to him. The worse the accident the greater the disgrace of Sommers and the surer the result in his favor. The government must then accept the Rhinestrom gun and probably would give a bigger order than ever.

He had no fear of an investigation. That had been well attended to. Smith, under another name, was working far away. There was no one else who knew anything except Marsh, and he could be depended on to keep quiet.

The ultimate success of all that he had planned now seemed to the general manager certain. He gave himself up to the enjoyments of the cruise, dreaming now and then of the time to come when he and Frances as man and wife should go on long trips together.

The first sign of real interest the girl showed after starting was when the yacht cast anchor in the broad harbor of Ponce, Porto Rico, and she learned quite by accident that the cruiser Roanoke was expected there in a few days.

Then, to the intense astonishment of Mrs. Durant and Pinckney, Frances once more asserted herself. She declared that she loved the old Spanish town. Even the dirty plaza, two miles away from the main city, interested her. She insisted on staying over, because, she declared, she was determined to study the town and the people and even ride over the famous military road constructed by the Spaniards at a terrible cost of labor and life from Ponce through the mountains to San Juan.

Nothing that her mother or Pinckney could do would move her. She was interested, excited, eager all the time, and each day, without the knowledge of the others, she managed to slip over to the government house to find out when the cruiser Roanoke was expected.

It was a very pretty game of hide and go seek that the girl and Pinckney played without realizing it. Pinckney also every day had inquired about the coming of the Roanoke. He knew that Sommers was attached to the cruiser, and he was determined that the naval officer and Frances should not by any chance meet.

His orders were quietly given, and the captain of the Irvessa was ready the moment the Roanoke should appear in the harbor to get up steam preparatory to leaving.

Then, with these plans all laid, Pinckney began his own plans for departure. First he approached Mrs. Durant and found her only too glad to go. At his suggestion she spoke to Frances, only to meet a flat refusal.

"I don't want to go yet, mother," protested the girl. "I'm having a splendid time here in my own way, and I can't see any reason for leaving. I'd like to ride up to Coamo and try the Spanish baths and then go on through to San Juan. It's an easy ride, and I can meet the ship there.

"Suppose you and Edward go around by ship and let me come through the other way. I think that would be a splendid plan."

Mrs. Durant looked at her daughter, startled.

"Frances, I think you must be out of your head!" she exclaimed. "How could you come through alone? Probably you are planning to have Lieutenant Sommers take charge of you?"

Frances' expression showed only amazement, but her heart was beating hard.

"Lieutenant Sommers?" she asked, with well simulated surprise.

Mrs. Durant made an impatient gesture.

"Now, don't pretend, Frances, that you are ignorant of the fact that the Roanoke is expected here in the harbor, and he is on board.

"Is he?" said Frances, still seeming surprised. "Why, how nice that would be!"

"Nonsense!" snapped her mother. "Frances, I don't care for that young naval officer, and I don't see why you can't get him out of your head."

The girl's face flushed hotly.

"He isn't in my head!" she exclaimed.

Her mother was not to be put off so easily.

"Humph! Maybe he isn't in your head, but sometimes I've feared he's in your heart, which is worse. Now, Frances, don't be foolish. You know Edward cares for you, and you know that your father and I would like to see you two married."

The girl shook her head decisively, and her tone was very firm when she answered.

"I'm very sorry, mother, to disappoint you and dad, but I must tell you once and for all I wouldn't marry Edward Pinckney if he were the only man on earth."

The mother looked at her daughter, amazed.

"Frances Durant, I'm ashamed of you!" she cried. "Here you've had me enduring that horrid yacht for a month past merely because I thought it would help to bring this match about, and now you tell me you'll never marry him! I've never been so treated in my life!"

Frances could not help laughing. She slipped her arm about her mother's neck affectionately.

"I'm awfully sorry, mother, dear, but I don't see how I can help you. You wouldn't have me marry a man I don't love, would you?"

"No," agreed her mother uncertainly; "I don't want to force you."

"Then I expect it's settled," decided the girl, with a long breath of satisfaction. "We won't say any more about it."

Mrs. Durant knew Frances well enough not to try to argue the matter. She still had some hope, for she had dwelt on the prospect so long that she could not at once give it up entirely. One change of scene had failed to work. She would try another.

"Well, then, for goodness' sake, Frances, let's go home," she said eagerly. "I want to get settled in my own room and feel the floor stay still."

The girl sighed.

"Very well, mother; we'll go home whenever you wish," she agreed.

Down in the courtyard of the old fashioned Spanish hotel Pinckney was talking to the captain of the Irvessa anxiously.

"You say the Roanoke is in?" he asked.

The captain nodded.

"Yes, sir. She cast anchor in the harbor an hour ago," he declared.

"Then get up steam at once, captain," ordered Pinckney. "We will leave tonight."

The officer from the yacht hesitated.

"Of course, if you say so, sir," he agreed, "but I would strongly suggest waiting over a bit. There is a bad storm brewing, and storms in this latitude are apt to be awkward. Don't you think you'd better lay over until the weather clears up?"

Pinckney whirled on him angrily.

"I'm giving the orders," he snapped.

Still the seaman could not quite agree. He knew his business, and he felt a grave responsibility at the thought of taking the wife and daughter of the owner into danger.

"Certainly, sir, I'm under your orders," he said, "but we have the ladies on board, and they might not like a storm."

"Nonsense," snapped Pinckney. "You're too cautious. We leave tonight and dine on board. Get up steam at once."

The captain saluted.

"Certainly, sir," he said. "The responsibility is up to you."

Mrs. Durant and Frances came down into the courtyard a few minutes later, just as Pinckney was reading a cable that a messenger boy had handed to him.

"Bad news?" asked Mrs. Durant anxiously.

Pinckney looked up.

"Only that I must return at once," he said.

"What's wrong?" asked the other two together.

The man smiled at their alarm.

"Nothing very wrong," he said. "In fact, this cable brings good news. The government has notified us to go ahead on the Rhinestrom gun order."

"Then the Sommers gun, of which you were afraid?" suggested Mrs. Durant.

Pinckney looked at her in his most superior manner.

"We were never afraid of the Sommers gun," he said. "It was only his influence in Washington."

It was Frances' turn to flush angrily.

"There was no reason to be afraid of that," she declared, as haughtily as though her own father's honor had been impugned. "Lieutenant Sommers would scarcely do anything dishonorable."

The man shrugged his shoulders. He could not, even though it were policy, suppress his hatred of Sommers.

"I'm glad you think so," he sneered.

P. H. S. NOTES.

The new manual training class for girls at the Plainfield High School, has proved a great success. Already the class is filled and many have been turned away. It is the first time it has ever been attempted and it looks as if the girls enjoyed the work as well as the boys. She girls work only in brass and copper, and are making candlesticks, lamps, bowls, etc. The class meets every Monday afternoon.

A new rule has been made at the High School in the girls' athletics, in which the basketball team, never before allowed to play outside of their own building, will visit the various schools, as East Orange, Cranford, Westfield and Elizabeth, to play return games.

Fred Loizeaux, business manager of the High School Oracle, announced in chapel yesterday that the first paper would be issued next Wednesday. He urged every one to subscribe and went on to say that the school had started the paper and it was their duty to support it. He said there were three ways in which to show their loyalty to it, first, by subscribing, second, by getting advertisement and last, by supplying material for it.

The first fire drill was held today, during the first of the morning. The building was cleared in a very few minutes and Mr. Best was very pleased with the record made.

Tone Overton Making Good.

Tone Overton, of North Plainfield, is playing a great game on Rutgers football team. Last Saturday he was put in at half-back in the game against Fordham and though he only played in the last few minutes of the second half, he distinguished himself by his aggressive work. Today he will probably get into the game against Annapolis. Rutgers squad left yesterday for Baltimore, and remained there over night, going to Annapolis this morning. The team does not expect to win from the cadets, but hopes to score. They have a crack drop kicker in Alverson, a tackle, and he may "slip one over" on the middies. Overton was among the players who left for Baltimore.

Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, K. of P., at its meeting last night conferred the second degree on three candidates.

Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Kirch have returned from a trip in Maine.

GOVERNOR MAY ATTEND CO. K.'S CELEBRATION

Governor J. Franklin Fort will be invited by Co. K to attend a reception which the company plans to give to the members of Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., and all veterans, during November. On this occasion the rifle trophies won at Sea Girt and on the company range will be presented and it is hoped that the Governor will be able to make the presentation.

An entertainment, consisting of a drill, dance, to be followed by a luncheon, will be held on Monday night, October 25. It will be an invitation affair and is being arranged by the officers of the company.

The company has eight vacancies in its ranks just now, due to the discharge of men whose terms expired, and an effort will be made to fill up the ranks. Under the direction of the company a cadet corps, composed of boys from 14 to 18 years of age, is being organized. It now numbers about eighteen members and Co. K will give the cadets the use of its hall and an instructor.

STRAWBERRIES IN JERSEY.

Mild Indian Summer Brings Out a Heavy Fall Crop.

Balmy October weather has brought strawberry festivals into fashion again and strawberry shortcake is a common dessert among the folks who have gardens of their own near Freehold. The fruit common to June has made its second appearance here for the year. Not a strawberry bed for miles around but has a crop. The berries have reached the market in such numbers that they are selling at 10 cents a quart.

The berries on the J. A. Haskell farm, near Freehold, are larger than they were in June and are drawing fancy prices. Rice A. Brown is also harvesting a gratifying crop of the fruit, which, he says, has a superior flavor to that of the early Summer. He is making a study of the peculiar situation and says he will make an effort to reproduce it next fall.

MAJOR LENTZ COMPLAINS.

Gets State Departments to Investigate Assessors' Secretary.

The refusal of Irvine E. Maguire, secretary of the State Board of Assesors, to appear before the State Board for the Equalization of Taxes, last Wednesday, at Hoboken, has three State departments very much "in the air." The two boards are considering the matter, and the Attorney General has been appealed to by President Carl Lentz, of the Equalization Board.

Mr. Maguire holds that the Equalization Board is entirely without authority to compel him to attend its hearings, and that it might be against the best interests of the Boards of Assessors for him to do so. He feels that a precedent established in this matter would have an important bearing on hundreds of cases involving vast sums.

PAYS $1,000 FINE FOR KILLING.

Charles M. Streeter, Arraigned in Hackensack for Manslaughter, Escapes Prison Sentence.

Charles M. Streeter, of Peetzburg, pleaded non vult to an indictment for manslaughter in the Hackensack court yesterday and Judge Demarest imposed a fine of $1,000 and costs. The fine was promptly paid.

Streeter killed his friend, Louis J. Seimer, in a fight August 29. The former was pitcher of the New Milford baseball club and Seimer was the manager. The men quarrelled during a game the Saturday previous and it was resumed on the night of the fight.

Prosecutor Wright asked for leniency, saying there was no malice behind the assault.

FORMER MAYOR IS ARRESTED.

Robert A. Sibbald, of Park Ridge, Is Accused of Embezzelment.

While in the Hackensack Court House yesterday Robert A. Sibbald, former Mayor of Park Ridge, was arrested on a warrant charging him with embezzlement. The complainant is John O'Brien, of Park Ridge, who says that Sibbald converted $221 of O'Brien's money to his own use. The former Mayor, who denied the charge, was held under $1,000 bail.

State Museum Report Out.

The annual report of the New Jersey State Museum for the year 1908, which has just made its appearance in bound form, contains many things of interest to the residents of that State. Silas R. Morse is the curator of this State department, and the volume he has published includes a report on the birds and fishes of New Jersey, illustrated by almost a hundred plates.

Get Their Automobiles.

J. C. Moore, Albert King and Charles E. Vail have just received their new 1910 Chalmers cars. These are the first 1910 cars delivered in Plainfield. They certainly are high class cars. They resemble closely the small Packard car.

WORK IS STARTED ON A MUCH NEEDED ROAD

Through the influence of Freeholder William Demler, of Watchung, work was started today by Joshua Doughty, county engineer of Somerset, surveying the county aid road extending from Watchung to the Passaic river, a distance of three miles. This is known as the Smalleytown road, and when completed will afford one of the most attractive country roads in this part of the State.

Freeholder Demler took the initiative in this proposed improvement and it was through his efforts that the consent of the State was induced to lend its aid. The road was recently ordered surveyed and Engineer Doughty commenced the work today.

McLane went to that city a week ago and advertised for a valet. When a young Greek applied for the job the old game of demanding a cash security was disclosed. The police put the basket over the aged swindler and then his record was revealed. He was sentenced to thirty days in jail.

Cream of Celery Soup.

Rinse and wash half cupful of rice, grate the white stalks of a head of celery and cook with the rice in one pint of milk with a little salt. If necessary add sufficient milk to produce a creamy consistency. Season palatably with salt, white pepper and a little grated nutmeg.

Golf and Tennis During the Day—Dancing and Music at Night—Biggest Success Yet.

The Plainfield Country club had a formal opening of its enlarged clubhouse on Saturday and the festivities of the day were enjoyed by over five hundred people. It was the largest social event in the history of the club, and the house committee, very ably assisted by Superintendent John Hilton, who had entire charge of all the details, are to be congratulated on the successful way in which everything was put through.

Members and guests, numbering about four hundred, attended the afternoon reception and tea. They found the asembly room beautifully decorated with flowers and fall leaves. There was music on the piazza throughout the afternoon, and refreshments were served indoors and on the verandas as well. At the same time the golf course was crowded with over a hundred enthusiasts from the home club and the Park Golf club, and the eight tennis courts were in constant use, many people being obliged to await their turn to play.

Mrs. Henry C. Irons was in charge of the decorations and entertainment, aided by her associates on the house committee, Mrs. Harry V. Borden, Mrs. Daniel C. Ginna and Mrs. Leighton Calkins. The following women assisted: Mrs. John B. Dumont, Mrs. Jabez Gilbert, Mrs. W. L. Righter, Mrs. George A. Beaton, Mrs. W. B. Tyler, Mrs. S. D. Lounsbery, Miss Grace Kaufman, Mrs. A. H. Atterbury, Mrs. John Stevens.

The dining rooms were thrown open at 7 o'clock and there were 150 persons served to an excellent dinner. The orders were limited to that number, as this was the first large dinner since the completion of the addition of the clubhouse, and the committee were anxious not to put the kitchen and dining room facilities to too hard a test. This rule disappointed between thirty and forty members who had placed their orders, but another time Mr. Hilton will be able to accommodate about two hundred, when the service outfit has been added to. Everybody commented on the promptness with which everything was served, and on the efficient corps of waitresses, all experienced and about twenty-five in number. An eight course dinner was served and it was an excellent menu.

The old dining room, which accommodates about fifty people without crowding, opens into the new room so well that the effect is really that of a large room. The new room is about fifty feet square, held one hundred persons Saturday night, and can easily be made to accommodate thirty more, by a little arrangement of the tables.

This room is also an extension of the assembly room, making it possible to seat as many as three hundred at dinner. Of course, the only limitation is in the kitchen facilities; but the new kitchen is a room forty feet by thirty, equipped with a large new French range with three fires, three large ovens and grill attachments, so that the club is splendidly equipped for high-class restaurant service. The serving pantry itself is a large room, twenty-two feet by eighteen, containing among other things a modern dishwashing machine.

The dinner on Saturday was a two-hour affair. A five-piece orchesera, an unusually good one, too, provided music during the dinner. At 9 o'clock the big dining room was promptly cleared and thrown open, together with the assembly room, for dancing. Three hundred members and guests attended, including the on-lookers on the piazzas. The dance lasted until nearly midnight.

Members of the three invited clubs took full advantage of the hospatalities extended to them and attended the reception and dance, many of them being seen at dinner. Those able to spend the entire day at the club for golf and tennis had luncheon there as well, an excellent lunch being served for about fifty members and guests. The officers of the club were well pleased with Superintendent Hilton's able management of the affair. He attended to every detail and overlooked nothing. Plainfield can now boast of having a country club with an up-to-date and well-appointed clubhouse and a high class restaurant, as well as a good golf course and tennis courts. It is understood that the courts will be rebuilt in the spring, and another season will also see the links extended to the full championship length.

AUTOS STRIKE BOYS, NONE BADLY HURT

Two boys were struck by automobiles within the same hour and within comparatively short distance of each other yesterday afternoon.

Jack Gough, the eight-year-old son of Thomas Gough, of Grandview avenue, was hit by an auto on Somerset street near Grandview avenue at 4 o'clock. Less than an hour later Morris Bender, twelve years old, son of Henry Bender, of Somerset street, was tumbled from his bicycle by a speeding car on West Front street near Somerset.

Young Gough was crossing Somerset street with a number of playmates when struck. In the automobile were Mr. and Mrs. R. B. McEwan, of Plainfield, and they placed the boy in the car and carried him to his home. Dr. Dundon was summoned and found that the lad had sustained bruises on right arm and leg.

The Bender boy was knocked from his wheel by the auto that hit him and is receiving medical attention. His father has placed the case in the hands of Judge William Newcorn. He says that he is not sure as to the identity of the owners of the offending auto, but that he knows the number of the car.

INTOXICATED IN SALOON; FLOURISHED REVOLVER

As usual on a Monday morning a number of drunk and disorderly cases came before City Judge Runyon in the city court this morning. Edward Kiley, of 12 Steiner place, North Plainfield, was given a sentence of $10 or twenty days for being drunk and carrying a revolver, which it was said he was flourishing in a saloon on Somerset street Saturday afternoon.

Clarence Johnson, of 1238 Columbia avenue, a youth who should have known better, was arraigned on a charge of drunkenness and disorderly conduct, the latter being attempts to escape from Patrolman Meyers while being conducted to the lockup. He was fined five dollars.

Mike Garass, an Italian of Scotch Plains, got in the toils for being drunk on West Front street Saturday night. He was repentant this morning and was discharged, it being his first offense.

ARREST BROKER WILSON

Former Councilman Charged With Alienation of Wife's Affections.

DAMAGES PLACED AT $50,000.

Alleged He Lived With Washington Lawyer's Wife at Deal Lake and Elsewhere.

Former Councilman Theodore D. Wilson, a member of the Consolidated Stock Exchange in New York city, was arrested Saturday afternoon by a private detective on a railroad train near Matawan, on a writ issued by Supreme Court Commissioner Daniel Harvey, Jr., to answer a suit for $50,000, brought against him by Malcolm Hufty, one of the best known lwayers in Washington, D. C., who charges him with alienating the affections of his wife, Mary Page Hufty. The detective saw Wilson board a train in Jersey City, and when he was sure he was in Monmouth county he placed him under arrest and took him to Asbury Park in the train. Being unable to furnish $10,000 bail, the prisoner was sent to the jail in Freehold.

Theodore D. Wilson has not lived here for more than three years. The whereabouts of his wife is not known. Wilson was a member of the Common Council here for two of the five years he lived here. His home was in No. 1332 Evergreen avenue. His wife was a handsome woman and moved in the best society of this city.

The troubles of Wilson and the Huftys have been of long standing. Many years ago Wilson and Hufty were the best of friends and Hufty was best man at Wilson's wedding. Hufty married several years ago, after obtaining a divorce for the woman from her first husband. Before her marriage, as Mary Page, she was prominent in society in Alexandria, Va. On the death of Mrs. Hufty's mother Wilson became one of the administrators of the mother's estate, and as such often visited the Hufty home in Washington.

Two years ago Hufty went to Canada on business, and when he returned his wife had left the Washington home with their two sons, three and six years old. He traced her to Atlantic City, and was surprised, he says, to find Wilson there. Wilson made his home at No. 203 Seventh street, Asbury Park. Mrs. Hufty and the two children also were seen about the house. Then a bungalow was hired in Wanamarsa. When Mrs. Hufty and her children were living in the bungalow last summer Hufty appeared with two detectives, kidnapped the boys and took them with him to Washington, where they now are living with him. At that time Mrs. Hufty threatened to sue him for divorce, alleging cruel and inhuman treatment.

Following the kidnapping of the children, Hufty made a complaint and warrants were issued for the arrest of Wilson and Mrs. Hufty. Before the papers could be served, however, Mrs. Hufty fled from Deal Lake and her whereabouts is unknown. It is believed she is living in or near Washington. Two weeks ago Wilson was arrested and released in $500 bail on Hufty's charge. Then the suit for alleged alienation was begun, but Wilson did not come to New Jersey until Saturday. The paper by virtue of which he was arrested alleges that Hufty fears Wilson will leave the jurisdiction of the Monmouth county courts and cause the suit to be postponed indefinitely.

PHYSICIAN FOUND BEAN IN SMALL BOY'S NOSE.

Harry Schwartz, the five-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Schwartz, of Plainfield, underwent a rather unusual and delicate operation, Saturday afternoon, when Dr. P. Zeglio removed a lima bean form his nostrils. It is not known how long the bean had been in the nose, and it was not discovered until that member began to disclose a painful sore. The physician was barely able to see one end of the bean.

The child is now improving and will recover speedily.

Visited Old Parishioners.

Mr. and Mrs. G. Herbert Condict, of Central avenue, entertained Professor and Mrs. Charles R. Erdman, of Princeton, during the Endeavor convention. Dr. Erdman was Mr. Condict's pastor at the Germantown Presbyterian church, and they are warm personal friends. Dr. Erdman is now professor of practical English Biblical study at Princeon Theological Seminary, and he delivered one of the principal addresses of the convention.

HONE CASE IS SETTLED

Defendant Placed Under $200 Bonds to Pay Wife $5 Per Week for a Year.

THE CASE MAY BE REPEALED.

Affinity in Pottstown Cause of Trouble Which Originated in Year 1908.

Judge William Runyon rendered his decision in the city court this morning in the case of Overseer of the Poor Alexander D. Ayres and Mrs. Catharine Hone against Hone for non-support, in favor of the complainants. Hone was put under $200 bonds to pay his wife $5 per week for a period of one year and was released in the custody of his counsel, Robert Newton Crane, until tomorrow morning to allow time for the getting of a bondsman.

The case has occupied the time of the court for the past three weeks and witnesses for both sides examined, both from this city and Pottstown, Pa., where the trouble between the couple originated in 1908. Hone's infatuation for one Jennie Huff, a silk mill operative of Pottstown, was named as the cause of the couple's trouble and A. A. Farrringer, superintendent of the mill where Hone and Miss Huff worked together came voluntarily from the Pennsylvania city to testify for Mrs. Hone. It was shown at the hearing of the case on last Wednesday morning that Hone had been unduly intimate with the young woman and he had denied that he was Mrs. Hone's husband while occupying apartments in the house at 317 Park avenue, owned by John Manley.

The case was admirably handled by counsel on both sides. J. Henry Crane appeared for the Overseer and Mrs. Hone. Hone may appeal the case.

SUNDAY SCHOOLS HOLD CONVENTION ON OCT. 21

The twenty-ninth annual convention of the Union County Sunday-school Association will be held in the First Presbyterian church, Cranford, Thursday, October 21, with morning, afternoon and evening sessions. In the afternoon, Rev. A. E. Finn, of this city, will make an addres on the topic, "The Home Department and its Relation to Church Efficiency," and in the evening James E. Church, of this city, who is State superintendent, organized adult class work, will address the convention on "The Oragnized Adult Class." He will also conduct a conference on the same topic from 5:45 to 6 o'clock in the afternoon.

Rev. Franklin K. Mathiews, of Scotch Plains, is second vice-president of the association and James E. Church is secretary of the first district. The association is in excellent condition financially and spiritually and the coming convention is expected to be one of the best in recent years. All of the local Sunday schools will be largely represented. The annual convention of the New Jersey Sunday-school Association will be held at East Orange, November 17-19.

LATTON'S TROUBLES END; WILL SUPPORT CHILDREN.

John F. Latton and his wife Louisa (colored) aired their troubles in the city court this morning before Judge Runyon. Latton claimed that since he has been compelled to live apart from his spouse she has made life miserable for him, tearing his clothing off his back and otherwise maltreating him. He is a small man and has fared the worse in all the family jars. He has, according to his story, offered to support his two children, but wants to do so away from the mother.

After hearing both sides of the story Judge Runyon imposed a sentence of thirty days on each, but suspended execution and advised the couple to keep apart from each other. Latton promised to use a third party in sending money for the support of his children, thus ending the controversey.

Girl Evangelist Spoke.

Kittie Duncombe, called the Little Joan of Arc of the Salvation Army by her admirers, delivered a stirring sermon to a large audience at Salvation Army Hall last night. Wearing a flaming red sweater and with her hair flowing loosely over her shoulders, the girl made a pretty picture as she spoke on the final triumph of the spiritually successful life over the worldly successful life. Kittie's mother, Mrs. Florence Worth Duncombe, a former actress, also spoke.

FIGHT OVER P.S.C. POLES

Westfield's Answer to Electric Light Co.'s Demand for Injunction Filed.

OF MUCH IMPORTANCE HERE.

Westfield Contends Plainfield Can Also Be Supplied Without That Transmission Wire.

The town of Westfield, through its counsel, Paul Q. Oliver, has just filed in the Court of Chancery an answer to the application of the Public Service Corporation for an injunction restraining the municipal authorities from removing a large number of poles from Grove street, Rahway avenue, Alston road and Scotch Plains avenue, which were erected several months ago for the purpose of carrying wires to convey electric current from the Cranford station to Fanwood and Plainfield for lighting purposes. The town authorities deny the contention of the Public Service Corporation that it has the right to erect the poles without first securing permission from the municipality.

In its petition for the injunction the Public Service Corporation claimed that the charter of the Suburban Electric Company which was later merged with the United Electric Company, the latter concern now being one of the subsidiary corporations of Public Service, possessed the omnibus right to erect poles and string wires without let or hindrance from governing boards of towns and townships. The Public Service Corporation insists that those rights and privileges now belong to it by reason of original company having been merged with the United Company and the latter now being under lease to the petitioner.

In answer to this contention, Westfield claims that so far as it is concerned the right of erecting poles at will under the old Suburban charter ceased to exist when the municipaility was organized into a borough form of government, and that under present conditions the Common Council has the right to order down all poles erected without special permit from that body.

It is claimed also by Westfield that Plainfield and Fanwood can be adequately supplied with electric light without the operation of the transmission line from the Cranford station. It is pointed out that the receiving station can still be used for generating current if the Public Service Corporation desire to do so.

SPECIAL MUSIC AND ORGAN RECITAL AT GRACE CHURCH.

That interest in organ music is increasing was evident by the large attendance at Grace Episcopal church yesterday afternoon. The large edifice was nearly full when Oragnist S. Frederick Smith's opening number ended. This pathetic sonata in C minor is a dufficult and weird composition, but was played with due regard for the nuances and teemed with human feeling. The chromatic coloring was finely executed.

Of the other compositions Frysinger's Nocturne was full of tender delight, charming the senses and soothing the mind, rendering it receptive for the following choral service. A great improvement was noticed in the singing by the male choir, the pitch being maintained to a greater degree. Mr. Smith deserves the encouragement of the music loving public for his meritorious work.

HELD SUNDAY SCHOOL RALLY AT FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH.

The annual Sunday-school rally was held at the First Baptist church, yesterday, when an unusually large membership was present. The exercises which were of a special character, consisted of appropriate songs by the school, the teaching of the lesson by Rev. Franklin K. Mathiews, and addresses by Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, pastor of the church; Rev. S. F. Davis, of Elizabeth, president of the Union County Sunday-school Association, and Superintendent G. H. Batchelor. Each person attending the rally received a souvenir.

Preached a Strong Sermon.

Rev. Dr. Charles E. Herring, of the First Presbyterian church, last night exchanged with Rev. John Y. Broek, pastor of Trinity Reformed church. He delivered a strong sermon on the topic, "The Power that Makes for Righteousness," in which the different spheres and abilities of the Christian man or woman were definitely outlined. His text was taken from Eph. 6: 10.

HOLY NAME SOCIETIES PARADE IN ELIZABETH

Members of the Holy Name Society of this city joined in the special services held in St. Patrick's church in Elizabeth yesterday. They marched 125 strong from St. Mary's church to the North avenue station, where they entrained for Elizabeth. A band of music from Jersey City headed the procession in this city and played marching hymns throughout the line of march, which was through Eighth street, to Park avenue, to Fourth street, to the station.

On arriving at Elizabeth they joined the other societies numbering two thousand men and marched to the church where services were conducted by Very Rev. Dean Martin Gessner, pastor of St. Patrick's. A large choir of vested acolytes chanted the music of the service after which the hymn "Holy God, We Praise Thy Name," was sung by the entire congregation.

The committee in charge were assisted by Judge O. P. Mahon, of Elizabeth, who also headed the parade. Speeches were made by Rev. Edward Quirk, of Newark, and Michael William Byrne, of New York city.

MRS. VAN DOREN WAS FOUND DEAD IN BED

Mrs. Emma Van Doren, widow of Charles Van Doren, formerly a resident on North avenue, this city, was found dead in bed on Saturday afternoon, by members of the family upon their arrival to their home in Flatbush, L. I., from business. It is supposed that a final attack of apoplexy, from which disease she had at times suffered, was the cause of death.

When Mrs. Van Doren was found she was lying across her bed, with a book in one hand and an apple in the other, indicating that there was evidently no suffering and that the end was peaceful and quiet. Miss Ada Van Doren, her daughter, returned home about 2:30, instead of 5:30 as usual, when she found her mother dead.

Mrs. Van Doren was, for many years, a member and regular attendant of Trinity Reformed church, of this city, and had been a resident of Plainfield for seventeen years, removing to Brooklyn about a year ago. She is survived by three children, Ada, Clarence A. and Herbert Van Doren, of Brooklyn. The funeral will be private at her late home, 300 Lincoln road, Flatbush, tomorrow.

"JOY RIDERS" PAID $13 FOR THEIR FUN

Norman Nelson and Peter Roesell, 25 and 35 years of age respectively, were out on an automobile "joy ride" Saturday night, and while trying to reach their homes at Lambert's Mills, about three miles from Fanwood, ran the machine into a bank on Martine avenue, near Midway, Fanwood. Roesell was thrown out and was found in an unconscious condition by Marshall William J. Logan, while Nelson was discovered sound asleep in the auto. Both men who were intoxicated, it is said, were taken to the borough lockup and yesterday morning were arraigned before Recorder Charles Sheeden.

Nelson, who resisted arrest and was abusive, was fined $8, while his companion who considered silence golden, got off with a fine of $5. The auto which belongs to Nelson's father, was a wreck, and had to be towed home yesterday. It was between 12 and 1 o'clock yesterday morning that the men were found by Marshall Logan.

FUNERAL SERVICES OF MRS. CAROLINE CLARK.

The funeral of Mrs. Caroline Compton Clark, wife of Jacob A. Clark, was held yesterday afternoon from the residence of her brother, Cornelius Compton, on Duer street. Rev. A. E. Finn, of the Park Avenue Baptist church, delivered an impressive funeral sermon. The pall bearers were Joseph Bogart, Alexander Thorne, Charles Dutcher and Charles Ammerman.

Many friends of the departed attended the services and many beautiful floral tributes were tendered in honor of her memory. The burial was in Hillside cemetery.

Chalmers 2nd Fairmont Park Race.

Philadelphia—The automobile race here Saturday was a big success. 90 H. P. Simplex first, Chalmers Detroit close second, Apperson third, 28 minutes behind the Chalmers; Chadwick fourth, Isotta fifth. Twenty-two of the fastest cars were entered which furnished plenty of excitement every minute. ***

COLONEL WILSON DIES SUDDENLY AT 'TUNLAW'

Venerable and Highly Respected Former Mayor Passes Away Unpectedly.

OFFICER OF THE CONFEDERACY

Colonel John Farmer Wilson, one of the foremost citizens of North Plainfield, who was admired and respected by all who knew him for his many sterling qualities, died suddenly yesterday morning at his estate, "Tundaw," on Greenbrook road. But recently he recovered from a critical illness and had gained sufficient strength to walk and drive about the city. His sudden death was a great shock to a large number of warm personal friends.

morning and the members of the family were summoned. He seemed to realize that the end was near, for during his intense suffering, he offered up a short fervent prayer before he passed away about 7 o'clock.

Colonel Wilson was a retired merchant and served one term, two years as Mayor of North Plainfield, being elected in 1897 and continuing in office until 1899, when he was succeeded by Newton B. Smalley, who served the borough as an executive for eight years.

He was at all times actively interested in civic matters and he was elected as Mayor as the candidate of all parties.

During his term of office his administration was marked by an aggressive spirit and a "cleaning up" of a number of things that had long been a stigma on the borough. Perhaps, the greatest achievement was the straightening out of the financial affairs of the office of Newton Spencer, who was tax collector for a great many years. Colonel Wilson's administration was noted for its clean, straightforward methods and numerous reforms were introduced, which redounded to the honor and credit of the borough. He was a man that could not be swerved from his purpose when once he had made up his mind. This applied to his business, as well as private life.

Colonel Wilson possessed a kindly nature and a generous spirit. He was philanthropic and it will never be known how much good he accomplished in a charitable way. He always had a warm greeting for his friends, and visitors to his handsome home were always treated in a princely fashion.

Among the monuments to his name as well as that of his wife, is the Mary E. Wilson Memorial chapel, at Watchung, which was established by Colonel Wilson in memory of Mrs. Wilson. He always took a kindly interest in the good work performed there and kept in touch with its progress. Aside from the time he was Mayor of North Plainfield, Colonel Wilson never held public office, preferring to live in retirement and enjoy the fruits of his labor.

Colonel Wilson was born in Baltimore, Md., May 22, 1832, the eldest child of John H. and Susannah Farmer Wilson, and was descended from Col. Benjamin Wilson, an officer in the Revolution and a member of the Virginia Convention. He was a Democrat of the Cleveland type, yet broadminded to a fault. He could always see some good even in those who might have opposed him, and was charitable in his views.

At the age of one year he removed with his parents to Alabama, where

BAMBERGER'S

"THE ALWAYS BUSY STORE"

MARKET, HALSEY & BANK STS.

New Jersey's Greatest Mail Order Organization.

We are justly proud of our mail order system. We feel that it is one of the strongest links in the chain of this great store's success. We want you to use it—test it thoroughly and allow us to demonstrate its many splendid advantages. The Bamberger mail order system is not the result of a day, but the culmination of years of painstaking effort. In fact, this branch of our business is so perfectly organized that you may shop as quickly by mail as in person. There are no delays—no errors—satisfaction is snugly packed with each parcel we send out. If you are not a patron (which is highly improbable) send in a trial order and you'll quickly realize the truth of the foregoing statements.

ASKS COURT TO REDUCE OCEAN GROVE LOT LEVY.

Application for a writ of mandamus to compel the Ocean Grove Campmeeting Association to reduce an assessment levied upon property within the campmeeting limits of Ocean Grove, owned by James R. Stewart, of Orange, was made to Chief Justice Gummere, Saturday by James R. Stewart, Jr., a son of the applicant. The court did not act on the application, but advised Mr. Stewart to renew his motion next week. In the meantime the chief justice said he would consider the matter.

The property in question is located at 38 Seaview avenue, and was purchased for $50 at the time the association was formed. A lease was given by the association, and it contained a stipulation regarding the assessments to be made. The lot had been subjected to an assessment of $10.50 this year. Mr. Stewart declared that under the lease this was just three times the amount agreed on when the purchase was made, and that the assessment levied was a violation of the lease. Mr. Stewart added that other assessments for which the property was liable aggregated $26.

FINE OF $1,000 ENDS CASE OF MANSLAUGHTER.

Charles M. Streeter, of Pittsburg, who killed Louis J. Seimer, his best friend, in a fight at that place on the night of August 29, was fined $1,000 and costs Saturday by Judge Demarest at Hackensack.

The defendant was pitcher and Seimer was manager of the New Milford Baseball Club, and the fatal fight began at a baseball game. Seimer fell unconscious after receiving a blow on the head. The grand jury indicted Streeter for manslaughter. The trial was set for Friday. Streeter pleaded not guilty. Prosecutor Wright said he did not believe there was any malice behind the asault and believed the State would be satisfied with a fine. Streeter was released in time to be home for dinner.

THE FORUM.

Editor, The Daily Press:

In your issue of September 29 you have published and extract from a lecture delivered in San Francisco which is an attack upon Mrs. Mary Baker Eddy, the leader of the Christian Science church. We desire to say on behalf of our leader that the charges against Mrs. Eddy which you have published are entirely without foundation. It must be remembered that Mr. Peabody lectures against Christian Science wherever he receives a compensation for so doing. This being the case, no doubt the lecturer's work is biased by the fact the more bitter his attack upon Christian Science. We learn, however, that such is not the case, and that many knowing the good which Mrs. Eddy has done, and knowing that the charges are untrue have experienced a reversion of feeling at these very lectures and are investigating Christian Science.

The time worn charge that Mrs. Eddy's book, Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures, has been compiled from many parts of the manuscripts of Mr. P. P. Quimby, has been repeatedly refuted in the public press, and Mr. Quimby's son has never been able to produce any authentic manuscripts of his father's We would also like to state that it is not the custom for Christian Scientists to enter into public debate with those who oppose their teachings.

WILL PROBE FURTHER IN AUTO CRASH CASE.

Further evidence is to be taken and more searching investigation made in the proceedings taken by J. B. R. Smith, State commissioner of motor vehicles, against William Mack, of Mack Brothers, Brooklyn. Mack was commanded to show cause why his automobile license should not be revoked. Henry Krause, of Roselle, is the complainant.

According to Krause, while Mack was driving a party of six on September 19, on the way to the fair at Allentown, Pa., he ran into a car occupied by the complainant, near Schooley's Mountains, in Morris county. Krause, who had three ribs broken, asserted Mack and his party were not only negligent but abusive. Mack said Krause's daughter was driving her father's car and that the accident was due to her unsteady hand.

The members of the Mack party denied having been disorderly and also that they were abusive.

Mr. Krause was represented by Nathan R. Leavitt, of Elizabeth, and Mack by Adrian Riker, of Riker & Riker, Newark.

Commissioner Smith continued the case until it can be investigated by Inspector Shinn.

COL. J. F. WILSON DIES

he spent the next fifteen years. Returning to Baltimore at the age of sixteen years, he engaged in mercantile pursuits until the outbreak of the Civil War. Immediatly after the commencement of hostilities he went to Richmond, Va., and offered his services to Hon. Pope Walker, Secretary of War of the Confederacy, as a result of which he served with the Army of Northern Virginia through the entire war.

Returning to Baltimore, he engaged in business until 1866, when he took a position in New York city with the Lehigh & Wilkes-Barre Coal Company. He remained with that company until 1892, retiring from active business in that year. He had been a resident of the borough since 1873, and his handsome estate was one of the show places of the borough.

Colonel Wilson married Miss Mary Elizabeth Farmer, of Baltimore, on April 14, 1855. She died in 1886, and of the twelve children born to them, but two survive, W. B. Wilson, of Baltimore, and Mrs. J. P. Truitt, who since her husband's death in Philadelphia, had made her home with her father. There is also one grandson, J. Alexander Wilson, of Grove street.

The funeral service and burial will be at Baltimore, at the convenience of the family, and Maryland Lodge, No. 120, F. & A. M., of which Col. Wilson was a member, will be in charge of the services.

AUTOMOBILIST HAS A NARROW ESCAPE.

James F. Parker, of Grove street, while on his way to the North Avenue station in his automobile, this morning, had a narrow escape from serious injury while turning from West Front street into Madison avenue. The street was well soaked with water, causing a muddy condition, and in trying to turn the corner the wheels of the machine skidded in such a way that Mr. Parker made a complete circle.

The auto struck the sidewalk next to Harry Dreier's store, ran up on the walk next to the Jackson building, escaping the hydrant and hit the electric light pole at the corner headon. The front of the machine was wrecked and the front axle twisted. Mr. Parker remained at the wheel, doing the best he could, but it was not until the auto hit the pole that he was able to stop.

Mrs. Mehlenbeck, mother of Chas. F. Mehlenbeck, of East Sixth street, returned to Plainfield Saturday afternoon after a three months' tour of California and Seattle, Wash. She traveled over 10,000 miles without a single mishap.

ELECTION LAW OPINION

Attorney-General Holds That City Clerk Should Have Delivered Boxes.

NOT UP TO DISTRICT CLERKS.

No Obligation on Part of the Local Board to Insure Delivery of Paraphernalia.

In answer to a request from the Union Board of Election and Registry, Attorney-General Wilson has rendered an opinion stating that it is the duty of municipal clerks to deliver ballot boxes to the precinct election officers within the territory served by the former. In some cities a controversey has arisen as a result of city clerks insisting that election officers should call for ballot boxes and the latter maintaining that the law requires that the boxes be delivered to the voting places.

The Attorney-General's opinion was given as a result of two complaints formally made to the county board of conditions existing at the Fourth ward, second district, polling place at the primary election. Because of the absence of the ballot box, then in the custody of City Clerk MacMurray, the polls were over an hour late in opening.

City Clerk MacMurray declined to deliver the box at the polling place, holding that it was the duty of the district's clerk to get it at his office. The district election clerk declared that it was not his duty to go after it though such had been the custom.

The attorney-general's opinion says in part:

"It is true, of course, that the municipal clerks do not provide the ballot boxes, these being, under the law, furnished by the board of chosen freeholders. Still, the municipal clerks are the custodians of these boxes at such times as they are not actually in use for election purposes, therefore such boxes must by some means be transferred from the offices of the municipal clerk to the polling places; and while it is not distinctly and determinately stated, still I am convinced that the purpose of the act is that the ballot boxes be in the possession of the clerk, and must be delivered by the clerk to the boards of registry and election, and that the obligation does not rest upon the board of registry and election to procure themselves such boxes from the offices of the municipal clerk.

"The provisions of the election with reference to all the other paraphernalia of election, ballots, envelopes, books and blanks, very clearly place upon the municipal clerk the duty of delivering these things to the boards of registry and election at the polling places at the proper time, and the language of Section 62, 'all other blanks and supplies necessary for the proper carrying into effect of the provisions of this act,' seems to be broad enough to include unquestionably as 'supplies necessary' the ballot boxes; and when the act provides that the clerk shall cause the same to be delivered,' it seems to me clear that the burden of delivery is placed on the municipal clerk and that it is his duty to provide the board of registry and election district, at such times as will enable the provision of the election act to be fully carried out, not only with the ballots, envelopes, books and blanks, but also with the other supplies necessary to hold an election, that is to say, the ballot boxes themselves."

NEIGHBOR'S LIVE STOCK FED IN HIS GARDEN.

Dirk D. Hass, of Rock road, Washington Valley, appeared before Justice Snape this morning as complainant against Paul Klieber, of the same section, whom he charged with trespass. It appears that Klieber's pigs and chickens paid frequent visits to DeHass's garden.

Finally it came to pass that Klieber's horse wandered into the DeHass garden and there DeHass's patience ended. He made complaint before Justice Snape, and after a hearing this morning Klieber was placed under a $100 peace bond, after he had promised the court to keep his animals off the DeHass property.

LIQUOR MEN WORRIED

Recent Convictions in Union County Court Causes Some Alarm.

STOPS MANY VIOLATIONS.

Puts End to Wholesalers Selling in Other Counties and New York Department Store Proctises.

Members of the New Jersey Liquor Dealers' Association are showing great concern in the final outcome of the prosecutions instituted in Union county at the instigation of the authorities of the city of Plainfield to enforce the provisions of the Morris act of 1907, which prohibits a licensed wholesale liquor dealer in one county from selling his goods in another county. Interests is also intense in the case of the prosecution and conviction in the Union county court of employes of New York department stores who have delivered and received payment in Plainfield for liquors shipped from New York.

In the convictions recently obtained in Union county under the administration of Prosecutor C. Addison Swift, and his able assistant, W. L. Hetfield, Jr., are sustained in the higher courts on appeal, prosecutors in other counties of the State will then take steps to secure similar convictions. This phase of the situation is an important one to the big Philadelphia department stores which deliver large quantities of liquor all through South Jersey on proctically the same basis as has been followed by the New York stores, and which has resulted in convictions when the question was threshed out in court and left to a jury to decide.

It was reported that some members of the New Jersey Liquor Dealers' Association will make an effort during the next Legislature to secure the repeal of the Morris act, as there is hardly a wholesale dealer in any county in the State that does not do more or less business with patrons located in adjacent counties. While they appreciate that the law affords them protection from competition outside of their own communities, they at the same time feel that at almost anytime under the Morris law they may be hauled up for an accounting before the law for an alleged infraction on their own part. Considering it from the average of conditions that prevail in their trade they would much prefer the law be wiped out. However, it is the general policy of the organized liquor men to discourage tampering with laws concerning their business. As a rule they are content to let well enough alone in matters of legislation, as is evidenced in the fact that they seldom go before the law-making body on any affirmative proposition.

JERSEY CENTRAL CRASH KILLS TWO ENGINEERS.

One of the worst freight wrecks in the history of the Central Railroad of New Jersey occurred at Siegfrieds, near Allentown, Pa., Saturday morning in a heavy fog. A freight train carrying seventeen carloads of cattle and twenty-three cars of grain to tidewater, was run into on a cross over by a drill engine. Two men are dead and one man was injured.

The dead: Peter Young, of Mauch Chunk, married, aged forty-two years, engineer of the stock train, ground to pulp under his engine; Nathan Moyer, of Bethlehem, aged sixty years, oldest engineer on the Central system, died at the Allentown station.

Sarah Brinkman and Alice Dotterer, servant at the Allen house, were gored by bulls that escaped from the train. Miss Brinkman was tossed by one and had both legs injured. Her corset saved her body from being lacerated.

A bull tried to toss Miss Dotterer, and one of its horns tore her shirtwaist and grazed an arm.

SYKES TO GO FROM PRISON TO COURTROOM.

John Sykes, formerly a lawyer of Trenton, who is serving a term of fifteen years in the State prison for embezzlement of trust funds in his hands, will be taken from the prison to the State house Wednesday morning to testify in the case of Charles G. Cook and others, substituted trustees, against Charles, Jack, Theodore S. Stryker, Margaret A. Stryker and Lavinia H. Stryker.

The charge in the suit is that Sykes fraudulently executed certain mortgages in the name of Jack, who is alleged to have been a fictitious person. Stryker had the mortgages duly recorded in the office of the county clerk. It is claimed that the mortgages constitute a cloud upon the title of the plaintiffs to certain real estate, and this suit was brought to have the mortgages set aside as null and void.

Tomorrow will be Columbus Day and as it is a legal holiday the banks and schools will be closed. The Italian union barbers announce that they will close their shops. The postoffice will remain open all day.

AMONG OUR NEIGHBORS

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

"Lessons from the Falling Leaves" was Dr. W. A. Knox's autumnal subject at the Methodist Episcopal church. It was a pretty theme, well handled. Dr. Knox drew "lessons from the falling leaves" of an exceptionally instructive nature and of a kind that will not soon be forgotten.

The Holy Name Society of St. John's church attended holy communion in a body at the 7:30 o'clock morning mass. In the evening a regular business meeting of the society was held. Routine matters were transacted.

A warm attack on gambling and gamblers was made by Rev. Ernest R. Brown in his sermon yesterday at the Presbyterian church. He entitled the sermon "The Losing Game or the Folly of Chance," and he showed that even if a gambler won financially, he lost in other ways.

Yesterday afternoon's rally day exercises at the Methodist Episcopal Sunday-school were interesting to a marked degree. Rev. Dr. C. M. Anderson of the First Methodist Episcopal church of Plainfield, delivered the address before a large assembly.

Under the lead of Miss Eva Schneider, the Presbyterian Christian Endeavor Society discussed the subject "How Can We Help Our Pastor" yesterday. Several ways to do this were devised and will be given a trying out.

The Methodist Brotherhood holds an open meeting in the church at 8 o'clock this evening. Besides a musical and literary program, there will be a lecture by William A. Rinker on "The Twentietn Century Skyscraper."

The following were recent visitors to New York: Miss May Ross, Mrs. Mary Runyon, Rev. Father Dunphy, J. W. Gangloff, Peter Ratti and Valentine McLaughlin.

The subject of yesterday's meeting of the Epworth League was "The Forgiven, Unforgiving." The leader was George T. Schenck.

Leroy Jennings is now connected with the Galbraith Plumbing Company of Plainfield.

FIGURES VERSUS STYLES.

Since the long lines of the figure are being followed by the dictators of fashion, perhaps a word anent proportion in dress may not be out of place. If this important element of beauty was considered when a woman selects her gown, the beautiful in dress would grow conspicuous by its presence on the streets or in the home. But how often is the attractiveness of a woman diminished by a frock which emphasizes her shortcomings or exaggerates the long lines of the figure? And how many times is the beauty of a gown lessened because a woman lacking in a sense of the eternal fitness of things has been unfortunate enough to wear it?

There are certain things which a stout woman must deny herself. The draped polonaise, for instance, increases the appearance of width in the skirt and correspondingly cuts down the height. Materials with crosswise designs should be shunned by the woman who must make the least of her embonpoint, and she should not wear horizontal tuckings or trimmings with the lines in designs or trimming running up and down.

The thin woman must not wear a dress that is absolutely plain. It must cover up any angularity, which is certainly not beautiful. This is not decrying the simplicity which is always good form, but an appearance of fullness can be gained by making lines run in a horizontal direction. The bertha effect softens any sharp lines and adds attractively to an angular figure. The draped sashes cause the eye to follow a curved lateral sweep, and this detracts from a painfully thin effect.

Injured Stealing a Ride.

James Doyle, of East Orange, while stealing a ride on a train through Plainfield, en route to Philadelphia, today, fell off and sustained abrasions of the head. Three stitches were sewed in Doyle's cranium and the lucky East Oranger wen smiling on his way.

Theatrical Men Return.

William J. Counihan, former managter of the Plainfield theatre, and his partner, Michael Shannon, was was former manager of the Majestic theatre, Perth Amboy, returned Saturday from their trip abroad.

Miss Lucy Chaplin, of Ridgewood, will address the Bible Study Rally at the Young Women's Christian Association at 8 o'clock tonight. Miss Chaplin was one of the most popular Bible teachers in attendance at the recent Northfield Woman's Conference. She is also a prominent member of the Northeastern Territorial Committee of the Y. W. C. A.

PLAINFIELDERS FIGURE IN AN AUTO ACCIDENT.

An automobile driven by Charles Kingsley, of this city, and carrying six Plainfielders en route to Princeton, was wrecked at Somerville, Saturday, when the driver to avoid running down Mrs. Elmira Hoffman, of that place, collided with a trolley car. The occupants of the auto were not injured to any extent, although thrown out. Mrs. Hoffman, who fell through the force of the collision, also escaped injury.

Another machine was sent to Somerville to take the party on and the wrecked car was brought home.

Another Auto Victim.

An unidentified automobile struck Harry Hartley, an auto mechanic, while he was alighting from a trolley car at Franklin place and East Fifth street, Wednesday night. The chauffeur put on full speed and got away before his number could be ascertained. Hartley sustained severe bruises about the knee which will keep him confined indoors for several weeks.

Accidentally Shot Brother.

While practising at the target Saturday evening with his brother Fred, Dick Jeffery, son of William Jeffery, of Berkeley Heights, was shot through the left leg through the accidental discharge of his gun. Dr. Hedges removed the bullet at Muhlenberg Hospital and the boy is doing well.

PIANO CONTEST FAKES EXPOSED!

IMPORTANT FACTS FOR HOLDERS OF GOLD BONDS, PIANO COUPONS AND DISCOUNT CERTIFICATES.

There are several Piano houses which have no prices for their goods except grossly inflated ones arranged expressly for fake discounts in connection with schemes of various kinds. These houses seem to find it impossible to dispose of their pianos in a legitimate, straightforward way, but instead resort to one scheme after another—catch-penny devices, so crude as to be positively insulting to the intelligence of the public. These schemes usually take the form of guessing contests, drawing puzzles and various feats of little skill. In all of them the object is identical to mislead the prospective buyer into the belief that he is getting something for nothing, while at the same time prices are arranged sufficiently high to off-set the allowance to which his prize certificate entitles him.

EVERYONE WHO MAKES A GUESS GETS A PRIZE!

If you have ever answered one of these ads you received a discount certificate. EVERYBODY DOES. It matters not whether the answer is good, bad or indifferent, from adult or child it draws a prize in the shape of a certificate or due bill (generally from $65.00 to $100.00) to apply on the purchase of a new Piano. Of course the price of the Piano is fixed accordingly and the purchaser pays a high price even after the amount of certificate is deducted, usually a much higher price than an instrument of similar quality could be secured for in any legitimate music store.

To test the value of one of these certificates present it in payment for something other than a new piano—say a low priced used piano, music cabinet or a bench, and see how quickly the dealer will turn you down. He will not even give you 50 cents worth of music for it. Try the experiment!

AT $185.00 WE WILL SELL A BETTER PIANO THAN THE SCHEME HOUSES ASK $325.00 TO $400.00 FOR! Such well known and high grade makes as Haines Bros., Brewster, the Genuine Mathushek and others too numerous to mention.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

Among the gay bevies of good looking femininity accredited to the chorus ranks of the musical gaiety, "A Knight for A Day," to be seen here at the Plainfield theatre tonight are: The Sweet Girl Graduates, The Coslean Belles, The Grand Opera Prima Donnas, and the Candle Light Girls. The last ensemble is said to be a striking effect, suggesting something of the effect of an illuminated Rembrandt panorama. The girls are presented before a scarlet curtain, all lights of the theatre being reduced until the curtain is fairly in shadow. In single file, the girls appear from the wings and cross the stage in front of the curtain, their nether portions lost in blackness and their faces brought into striking relief by tiny lights, in the shape of roses that they carry, which they switch off and on with fairy-like effect.

"This Woman and This Man" is a beautiful play; it is simple, strong and poetic in the delicate beauty of its conception; it is new, because of the revivifying touch of art. It is a protestation against the spirit of commercialism with its insistent valuation of all that is best, against the inevitable of every emotion and passion, however nobler that would offer or demean any other than a money value upon love, honor—even life itself. Here on Friday night.

In the widespread influence of its central theme, a beautiful woman in trouble, lies the potency of the great racing comedy, "Wildfire," which will be presented with the famous beauty and star, Pauline Hall, on next Saturday afternoon and night at the Plainfield theatre. The story was not written with Miss Hall in view, but it fits as perfectly as if it had been, and her work is of a sort that establishes her in an entirely new field. No longer a queen of opera but referred to as the princess of comediennes, her work is a revelation to her legion of admirers. The character Miss Hall portrays is that of a widow making a game hard fight against impending disaster. It is intensely human and the quick appeal of the developing situations is not only because of dramatic effectiveness but also of the underlying tug that such a contest when waged with the spirit of such a pretty woman as Pauline Hall makes her, is sure to give to every heart.

"I don't think; I know," retorted the girl haughtily.

Pinckney smiled with triumph.

"Well, it makes no difference now, anyway," he said. "We get the order for the Rhinestrom gun because the Sommers gun has proved a failure."

Frances' face grew suddenly white as she turned away quickly. The Sommers gun a failure! What a blow it must be to him! Probably he didn't know it yet. How she would like to comfort him, and she could not! He would not listen to her. If she only could see him now! She was still so engrossed with her own thoughts that she scarcely heard Pinckney's question:

"Can you leave tonight?"

"I think so, easily," agreed Mrs. Durant. "What do you say, Frances?"

The girl turned wearily. After all, what difference did it make? She would not get a chance to see Sommers. His ship might not arrive for a week more. And, if she did see him, what could she say? It was all no use. She might as well agree to what they wanted. Why struggle longer? So she nodded indifferently.

"All right; I'll go whenever you wish."

Pinckney smiled his triumph, and Mrs. Durant beamed.

"I'll hurry right upstairs and pack," she said. "We can leave in an hour."

When Pinckney and her mother had gone, Frances sat down at a table by herself to think. She was so lonely, and everything was so hopeless! There was no chance of seeing Sommers, no chance of their ever coming together again.

And she loved him. She knew that now. The clutch at her heart when she heard of his misfortune made it very clear to her. It was no use to try to deceive herself any longer. She loved him. She wanted him, for he was the one man in all the world who could make her happy. Now she was miserable, and he was a failure.

"Pardon me, Miss Durant."

At the cool, penetrating voice Frances looked up. A big man with a shrewd face and clear, cold gray eyes that had the particular faculty of compelling and riveting attention stood beside the table with his hat in his hand.

"Can you tell me where I can find Mr. Pinckney?" he asked.

The man was so obviously not merely seeking to scrape an acquaintance that the girl had no hesitancy in replying.

"In the hotel, I think," she said coolly.

"You intend sailing almost immediately, do you not?" persisted the man.

The girl was surprised, but the questioner's manner was thoroughly respectful and yet seemed to demand a reply.

"I believe so—yes," she said and half turned away.

The questioner bowed.

"Thank you." He half turned to go, then stopped and, turning back, said coolly:

"By the way, it may interest you, Miss Durant, to know that the Roanoke anchored in the harbor an hour ago and that Lieutenant Sommers is expected at this hotel any minute."

Then, bowing coolly, he turned and walked off, leaving Frances staring after him in astonishment.

A slight noise back of her brought the girl to her senses. She looked up curiously.

CHAPTER XII.

A WIRELESS MESSAGE.

FRANCES and Sommers stared at each other, both at first unable to speak. Perhaps speech was unnecessary, for the face of each told plainly how much this chance meeting meant.

Of course it was the girl who recovered first. With an arch smile that was very close to tears of happiness she held out her hand.

"So you haven't quite forgotten me, have you? You do know my name! Won't you shake hands?"

The man came to her eagerly, seizing her hand and holding it with a grip that almost crushed it, while she looked all the things that he could not just then say.

"I can hardly believe it's really you," he exclaimed. "It's so strange to find you away off here."

Frances' heart was pounding with great throbs of happiness. He loved her! That was plain, very plain. Every look, every gesture, showed it. And with the knowledge there came to the heart of the girl a great confidence, a content that made her able, womanlike, to hide all her feelings and make him work for everything that in reality already belonged to him.

"Oh, mother and I are on a cruise," she said lightly. "We've been here several days. We didn't have an idea that we should see you. What a lucky chance!"

No one from her manner could have guessed the weary days of waiting for that cruiser, now just arrived.

"Is your father with you?" asked Sommers.

The girl shook her head.

"No; father couldn't come. Mr. Pinckney is with us."

The naval officer's face hardened ever so little.

"Oh, yes, of course," he said, and, inside, his evident jealousy made the girl just that much happier.

"Yes, of course we had to have some one," she agreed. "Won't you sit down? I'd quite given up all idea of ever seeing you again. I'm glad we've met."

"I didn't know that you would ever want to see me again," ventured Sommers as they sat down.

The girl's face flushed. This was the time when there must be some explanation, and her sense of squareness made her feel that the explanation should come from her.

"I've wanted to see you ever since that night in the furnace room," she said at last, "to ask your forgiveness."

Sommers shook his head.

"No; I have nothing to forgive, Miss Durant. It is I who must ask forgiveness. If I could only make you understand how much I've regretted that night and my outburst!"

The girl smiled with unconscious tenderness.

"You had every right to ask what you did. I had given you the right," she said softly.

The man sighed.

"Nothing could give me the right to act as I did that night," he said bitterly. "I've been punished for it."

Impulsively she held out her hand to him across the table.

"Let us forget all about that," she said. "I went to the works on a very silly errand that night. Some time I'll tell you all about it. We mustn't waste time about that now, though, when we have just a few minutes together."

"A few minutes!" exclaimed Sommers. "You don't mean that I'm only going to meet you to say goodby?"

Frances nodded.

"I'm afraid that's it for the present," she said. "We're sailing this afternoon."

"And I'll be on sea duty for two years," sighed the man bitterly.

It was just as hard for the girl, but the knowledge that she was loved helped to buoy her up.

"Then we must make the best of the time we have," she said. "Tell me what you've been doing since I saw you last."

Sommers shrugged his shoulders.

"Nothing to tell. Been at sea, that's all," he said.

"But surely you do something at sea?" persisted the girl.

He was still too disconsolate at the thought of parting to quite lift himself into her mood.

"Oh, we eat and sleep, and I've taken up wireless a little in my spare moments. I expect you know why. I've been interested in it ever since you gave me my first lesson in your workroom."

"Can you send and take?" she asked eagerly.

"A little, but I am slow at it."

The girl was leaning on the table now in her eagerness, for already an idea had occurred to her.

N. Y. STATE CHAMPS HAVE NARROW ESCAPE

The Plainfield Association Football club met the Brooklyn F. C., on the Marquette grounds, Brooklyn, Saturday afternoon, when the former was defeated by a score of 2 to 1. The game started at 3:30 o'clock and the two teams seemed to be taking each others measure, for they played carefully. However, the Plainfield boys began to get the better of the play, when a lucky run down-field by Brooklyn was rewarded by a goal, secured by Ridd.

After a half-hour of play, Gould sprained his ankle badly, which handicapped the team greatly. Notwithstanding his accident, Gould would not leave the field. No more scoring was done in the first half, the tally being 1 to 0 in favor of Brooklyn.

On resuming play the Plainfielders put up a fine game, and a clever pass to the centre, was caught by Hosie, who succeeded in equalizing. The Plainfielders continued to press very hard, but could not score, although they were having the best of the game. A long shot from McNeill came into the Plainfield goal and succeeded in getting past McNeice, making a lead for Brooklyn again. This set the Plainfield team going again, and although they played wonderful football they could not score. Time was called with a score of 2 to 1 in favor of Brooklyn.

The Brooklyns are the State cup holders, and they got the surprise of their career, in such a hard game, and they were lucky to win. A return game is to be played here on November 13, and the Brooklyns will bring their strongest team, for they know that they will have a hard game. This was Plainfields first defeat this season.

The lineups:

Plainfield—McNiece, goal; Gould, right back; F. Craig, left back; J. Craig, right half; Henderson, centre half; McComb, left half; Spalding, outsid right; Brabyn, inside right; Hosie, centre; Buckland, inside left; Sutton, outside left.

SOME GREAT BASEBALL TO BE SEEN TOMORROW

The Plainfield Country Club and Watchung Hunt Club baseball teams will clash at the hunt club grounds tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock. There is much rivalry between the two aggregations and both sides are expecting victory. Robert Abbott is announced to pitch for the country club, but being out of town it is doubtful whether he can. Captain W. T. Glenney has promised to make things interesting, however, and it has been intimated that possibly a "dark horse" may be seen in the box for the team.

Captain Morris J. Dumont, for the hunt club team, has picked a strong nine and will pin his faith in Duncan Bulkley to hold down the opposing side. The lineup will be as follows:

Plainfield County Club—Henry de Forest, c; Robert Abbott, p; Gordon Abbott, 1b; Arthur Wills, 2b; Arthur Lovell, 3b; Will T. Glenney, ss; Edward Stevenson, lf; Ames Brooks, cf; Owen H. Fleming, lf.

Watchung Hunt Club—Bulkley, p; Dumont, c; Arthur Otterson, 1b; Gilbert Fletcher, 2b; Schuyler Johnston, ss; Harry Butler, 3b; J. Hartley Mellick, lf; W. B. Tyler, cf; W. L. Righter, rf; John Greason, sub. Mylie Goodwin and Wylie Brown will be the umpires. A large crowd of rooters from the country club will be on hand to cheer their team.

SCOTCH PLAINS 8, NEWARK GIANTS 2

The Newark Colored Giants proved an easy proposition for the Scotch Plains team in the baseball game at the latter place yesterday afternoon, the Plains winning by a score of 8 to 2. The Giants were shut out until the ninth inning, when two runs were brought over the plate on a hit, a gift by MacLaughlin and two errors. The bad inning was due to darkness. MacLaughlin allowed but three singles and a scratch and fanned eleven men. The support was gilt-edge until the ninth inning. The lineup and score by innings:

Plains—Flannery, rf; Baldwin, cf; Alberts, c; Allen, 1b; Frentz, 2b; Reick, lf; Dodge, ss; Brown, 3b; MacLaughlin, p; Eller, rf; Miller, lf.

FINAL GAME OF SEASON

Lost by Plainfield Through Errors—Montross Contributes 3 Blunders.

ORTLIEB OUTPITCHES BREWER.

Seven Errors Tells the Tale—Brewer Hit Hard by Elizabeth—Boyd's Good Batting.

Plainfield suffered defeat at the hands of the Elizabeth team Saturday in the last game of the season. It was a loosely played game and hardly amounted to a contest, Montross' three errors at short contributing in a large degree to the loss of the game by the home team. Boyd had his eye on the ball making two two-baggers in four times at the bat, and contributing one single when it was most needed. The Elizabethans played a good game all around and Ortlieb held the home team to six hits. Seven errors in one game shows how the chances were all in favor of the home team's opponents. The score follows:

NEITHER TEAM SCORED IN BOROUGH CONTEST

A bitterly contested football game between North Plainfield High School and the Holy Cross Club resulted in no score for either side at the Cricket Feld Saturday afternoon. The most exciting stage of the game was toward the end of the first half when the Holy Cross boys brought the ball to the N. P. H. S. ten yard line but lost it on downs. Becker of N. P. H. S. was hurt in the first rush of the game and had to retire, thereby weakening his team considerably.

The N. P. H. S. line-up was: H. Smith and Pierson Bailey, r. e.; Percy Bailey, l. e; A. Stiglitz and J. McCullough, r. t.; L. Zeglis, r. g.; J. Abrams, center; Lindsey, l. g.; E. Scott and Pierson Bailey, l. t.; Conroy, q. b.; Becker and H. Smith, l. h. b.; C. Smith, f. b., and H. Stein, r. h. b.

SATURDAY'S RESULTS AT PARK GOLF CLUB.

Although many members of the Park Golf club availed themselves of the invitation to visit the Plainfield Country club, Saturday, when the "open house and field day" was the attraction at the popular club, a sufficient number engaged in the weekly competition on the borough links to count points for the three cups, the President's, golf club and Oakmont, now in competition.

There were a half-dozen good scores returned for the trophies, and the competition was close. These were posted:

J. B. Betts, 110, 30-80; W. V. Byard, 97, 14-83; H. D. Rowland, 94, 10-84; Nelson A. Miller, 108, 20-88; R. B. Titsworth, 102, 14-88; Dr. H. K. Carroll.

The next event of special interest at the club will be the final for the championship to be played on election day between Dr. H. K. Carroll and R. B. Titsworth.

DUNELLEN SECOND DEFEATED BY METUCHEN'S ELEVEN.

The Metuchen Football club defeated the Dunellen second team, at Metuchen, Saturday afternoon by the score of 6 to 0. Although only having two night's practice, the team made a creditable showing. Dodwell and Captain Logan, of Dunellen, played a fast game, as did also Corbin, Peck, Board and Trotter for Metuchen. Metuchen kept the ball in Dunellen's territory most of the time. The teams were evenly matched.

The touchdown was secured by Trotter on a juggled trick. Corbin kicked the goal. Next Saturday Metuchen will play Tottenville at the former place.

SECOND-STORY MEN ROB POLICE COMMISSIONER.

Second story porch men during the absence of Police Commissioner William R. Hopson and wife, Saturday evening, gained entrance to the commissioner's residence at 155 Fair street, Paterson. They made off with a quantity of jewelry, the total value of which could not be ascertained until the family had inventoried all the household equipment.

Entrance, to all appearances, had been gained by standing on the porch railing, from where an active man might easily draw himself up and then enter by the window opening into Mr. Hopson's study. The commissioner said that this window was left unbolted, and it was found open when he returned home.

TO OPEN FALL CONFERENCE.

Rev. John R. Davies, pastor of the Bethlehem Presbyterian Church, Philadelphia, will open the annual fall conference of the Princeton Theological Seminary this afternoon.

PITIFUL SCENE IN COURT

Mrs. Colucci, Abandoned in Baltimore, Finds Husband Here.

HUSBAND LAUGHS AT CHARGE.

Three Small Children and Deserted Woman Being Cared for by Kindly Neighbors and Court Attaches.

Through a fine piece of detective work this morning by Chief Kiely, Detective Sergeant Flynn and Patrolman Saffron, Ernest Colucci, a contractor formerly of Dover, and later of Baltimore, Md., was landed in police headquarters on complaint of his wife, who followed him from the latter city with two of her three children, the other, a girl, being left in charge of the Dover police. Colucci's affinity, Mary Jarrell, of Baltimore, was also landed in the lockup and both are being held pending an investigation.

The couple have been married ten years and were happy until Colucci became enamored of the Jarrell woman, who is neither attractive nor apparently has she any claims to education. It is one of the most pitiful cases that has come before the notice of the local authorities. In the court room this morning men were moved to tears at the recital of the wronged woman's story and a purse was made up to provide for herself and two emaciated children until some other provision can be arranged.

The couple were married in Garfield about ten years ago. Mrs. Colucci was a daughter of John Wood, of that place. Colucci's business of contractor took him from place to place and with each removal came an addition to the family until the three children became a burden to the father, but not to the woman who, with the faithfulness of a mother clung to them and the father's varying occupations until the change in his attitude arrived with the advent of Miss Jarrell. Mrs. Colucci says that since this woman's appearance on the scene of her married life it has been impossible to get anything from her husband but abuse and she and the children have had to live as best they could. In the meantime he has had all that money could buy and so has Miss Jarrell. The woman's appearance in court bore out her statement as to lack of support. She was practically devoid of the necessary clothing to properly cover her and the children looked as though they were strangers to food.

Colucci has been living with the Jarrell woman in apartments furnished at the home of Alphonse Galluchi in this city, and it is alleged he introduced the Jarrell woman in the house as his wife and it was never suspected that she was not. However, there is no doubt that the case merits the fullest investigation and upon receipt of advices from Dover it will be possible for a clearer understanding to be reached.

Mrs. Colucci in telling her story this morning, mentioned a Mr. Ferry, a contractor of Charleston, W. Va., as being one who was familiar with the actions of her husband during the last few years. Efforts will be made to get a statement from Mr. Ferry. Colucci left his wife in the railroad station in Baltimore, ostensibly to go and make arrangements for the removal of his household goods to this city, but he did not return and Mrs. Colucci was forced to seek the aid of the Mayor of that city to get to Plainfield.

This morning while Patrolman Saffron was directing the course of traffic at the corner of Fourth and Park avenue, Mrs. Colucci approached him on the run, pointing out a wagon going up the avenue, and yelling "there's my husband, get him." Saffron did not fully grasp the situation until a moment later. Then jumping on his wheel he rushed to headquarters and reported the circumstance to Chief Kiely, who knowing the facts, through the woman's complaint, promptly sent Saffron one way and Detective Flynn another and between them the man was hemmed in. In the meantime he sent for and had detained Miss Jarrell in a separate room and any defence that Colucci might have had collapsed when the woman was brought in and seated in the court room. A further hearing of the case will be had tomorrow morning.

The three children are Angelina, age 7; Louise, 3, and Annie, a baby of 18 months.

Miss DeMott's Wedding.

Miss Alice May DeMott, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry DeMott, of Somerset street, and Grover C. O'Neill, son of Mrs. John A. O'Neill, of New Brunswick, will be married at 8 o'clock tonight by Rev. Dr. Charles M. Anderson, of the First Methodist church, at the home of her parents.

JOHN MOODY TALKS ON TARIFF TONIGHT

At the Plainfield Democratic club meeting in Coward hall, 109 Park avenue, tonight, John Moody of Cranford, will say in his address on "The Tariff:" "I am going to specially emphasize the injurious effect of the present protective legislation upon the real business interests of the country; those interests which are generally supposed to assume that a high tariff is beneficial to them rather than the reverse. There is a prevailing mistaken notion among many Democrats as well as Republicans that whatever effect the tariff legislation of the last generation has had upon the wage-earner or the 'average' man, it has at any rate, been the one big asset which has encouraged 'legitimate business interests.'

"Of course, you know that this is not true; for while it has been of the greatest special value to certain beneficiaries in commercial and industrial lines, and has built up and fostered vast monopolies, it has been a frightful handicap to the great mass of business men who really represent the producing power of the nation and make our modern civilization possible.

MISS MABEL JENKINS NOW MRS. A. O. KNIGHT

Miss Mabel Jenkins, daughter of Mrs. Mary Jenkins, of 303 East Sixth street, and Arthur Octavius Knight, son of Mrs. Octavia Knight, of Fanwood, were married yesterday afternoon at 5 o'clock by Rev. Dr. Charles M. Anderson, pastor of the First Methodist church at the residence of the bride's mother. There were about sixty guests present from Washington, Allegheny, Hackettstown, Bethlehem, Pa., Brooklyn and Hartford, Conn.

The bride was attired in a princess gown of Benzi silk and carried a bouquet of bridal roses an lillies of the valley. The bridesmaid, Miss Mabel Vail, wore an elaborately embroidered robe of moire silk. George Horne, of Hackensack, was the best man. Catharine and Philip Jenkins, niece and nephew respectively of the bride were the ring bearers. The couple were married under a canopy of autumn leaves and the decorations of the whole floor were prettily arranged boughs of autumn leaves and potted plants. A reception and collation followed the ceremony after which the display of the many handsome and useful wedding gifts of silver and cut glass was visited by the guests.

Mr. and Mrs. Knight left this morning on a wedding trip of a couple of weeks after which they will make their home in Chicago, where Mr. Knight is a partner in the firm of Knight Bros., patent attorneys. The brothers also have an office in Washington, D. C.

Fined $5 for Unlicensed Dog.

Michael Dellego, an Italian, living and owning property at 1314 North avenue, was arraigned before City Judge William Runyon this morning for having an unlicensed dog on his premises. When asked to explain why he had not taken out a license for the animal he said that he thought that the tax bill for his property, which he exhibited, covered the dog. Judge Runyon did not believe the man and said that he had wilfully violated the dog ordinance and fined Dellego five dollars which the latter paid with bad grace. In addition he will be compelled to take out a license for the canine which has been complained against times innumerable.

Indiana Pastor Is Called.

The Rev. Clarence H. Wilson, pastor of the Centre Presbyterian church, Crawfordsville, Ind., has accepted the call to the Congregational church of Glen Ridge. The Rev. Mr. Wilson will begin his duties next month. He succeeds the Rev. Dr. Elliott W. Brown, who resigned nearly a year ago on account of ill health. After the resignation of Dr. Brown the Glen Ridge church called the Rev. Dr. W. R. Nottman, of Chicago, to the pastorate, but he died suddenly of heart disease in Bermuda two weeks before he was to have assumed his new charge.

Arrested for Trespassing.

Joseph Lang, 25, who gave his address as New York city, was arrested last night for trespassing on the property of the Central Railroad near the Pond Tool Works, but was discharged by City Judge Runyon in the city court this morning when Police Captain Gaffney, of the Central's police, did not press the charge against him.

Civic Club Has Meeting.

The Woman's Civic Club of Arlington opened its fall and winter meetings yesterday afternoon with a reception to members and guests.

POLICE PENSIONS AGAIN

Possible That an Enabling Bill Will Be Introduced in Legislature.

FOR PLAINFIELD'S BENEFIT.

The Present Statutes Not Considered Desirable—Laws' Committee to Act.

Although it has been decided by the Common Council that it is too late to submit the police pension proposition to a vote of the people at the November election, the matter was discussed last night at some length at a meeting of the Council as a committee of the whole It seemed to be the opinion that the law under which the city fathers were requested to act, was not a desirable one so far as Plainfield is concerned. In view of this fact, it was thought wise to take steps to have a bill introduced in the Legislature this winter which would meet local conditions more satisfactorily. This doubtless will be done.

The present law, while it provides that four per cent. of the police appropriation shall be set aside for a police pension fund, there is nothing to prevent future councils from increasing the percentage, if it so desires. This was one of the undesirable features referred to at the last meeting of the Common Council by Mr. Clay.

The whole matter has now been referred to the committees on police and laws and ordinances and the two committees will probably hold a meeting next week to take steps to have a bill introduced in the Legislature this winter so that advantage may be taken of it next year, if it is thought wise.

During last night's conference mention was made of the catering bill ordered in the name of the city for policement during the Charter Day celebration but no action was taken.

The city officials do not deny but that the caterer should receive his money for the food furnished. While the city fathers are delaying the payment of the bill by debating by whom and how the expense was incurred, the caterer is compelled, unjustly, it is considered, to wait for his money.

MISS CHAPLIN TELLS HOW TO STUDY BIBLE

Miss Lucy Chaplin, of Ridgewood, spoke to members of the Young Women's Christian Association last night on "The Best Things Our Association Has to Offer." Miss Mary Hubbell rendered two songs just before Miss Chaplin's address. The meeting was in charge of Mrs. Charles Tennant, chairman of the Bible Study committee.

Miss Chaplin spoke of the necessity of careful study of the Bible She said that it should always be read in an intellectual way as well as in a devotional way. She deplored the fact that the Mohammedan knows his Koran better than the average Christian knows his Bible. Miss Chaplin laid much stress on systematic and regular observation of the "books of books."

Mrs. Tennant told of the new Bible classes at the Y. W. C. A., and predicted popularity for the Bible class suppers to be held on Monday evenings. The first of these suppers will be given next Monday evening at 6 o'clock.

CITY RECEIVES $2,688.

SOMERSET'S SHARE $2,665.89.

Elizabeth's Portion $34,610, While Fanwood Township's is $1.90 — —North Plainfield Gets Nothing.

Union county municipalities will this year receive $42,793.25 from the State for second-class railroad property assessed in the county. According to figures compiled by the State Comptroller the total assessment of second-class railroad property in the State, as made by the State Board of Assessors and subject to the various rates of local taxation, amounts to $1,265,348.13. Of this amount the State has received $854,983.14, the balance being tied up in litigation over valuations made in Hudson county. A few small railroad companies are also delinquent in payment of taxes, one of them being the Rahway Valley Railroad, which runs from Aldene to Summit. As a result of the latter's delinquency the borough of Kenilworth and Springfield township have not yet been paid the part of the tax apportioned to them, which amounts to $80.58 and $51.09, respectively.

Elizabeth receives the bulk of the Union county assessment, its share being $34,610.43. Plainfield is next with $2,688.97. The tax is apportioned to other Union county towns as follows:

Rahway, $824.62; Summit, $1,377.87; Westfield, $434.04; Fanwood borough, $141.77; Garwood, $62.07; Linden, $60.33; New Providence, $37.86; Roselle, $256; Roselle Park, $478.58; Clark, $70.32; Cranford, $883.79; Fanwood township, $1.90; New Providence, $27.21; Union, $249.32.

Under the apportionment of the taxes Somerset county will receive $2,665.89, but North Plainfield borough, the largest municipality in the county, does not receive any benefit from the assessment for the reason that there is not any railroad property situated in the borough. North Plainfield township is also minus benefits for the same reason.

JERSEY ACCOUNTANTS TO DINE HERE TONIGHT

The October meeting of the Society of Certified Public Accountants of the State of New Jersey will be held at Truell Hall this evening at 7 o'clock, following a dinner to be served an hour earlier. The society will have for its guest of the evening J. E. Sterrett, president of the American Association of Public Accountants, which association comprises membership from twenty of the States, with a total membership of over 800. He will speak informally of things interesting to the accountants.

The New Jersey society has a membership of about fifty and this will be the first time in its history, now in its twelfth year, that it has met outside of Newark, Jersey City or Hoboken. Among the members are Edward L. Suffern, George Wilkinson and Stuart H. Patterson, of this city. The officers and trustees are as follows:

SISTERS-IN-LAW WILL AIR TROUBLES IN COURT

Mrs. Abraham Bender and Mrs. Aaron Bender are sisters-in-law. Their husbands have adjoining shops on Somerset street near Duer street. Mrs. Abraham's husband is a shoemaker; Mrs. Aaron's husband runs a grocery store. The two brothers have always been friendly and still remain so—they refuse to be drawn into their wives' quarrel.

The two Mrs. Benders, it is said, have been finding fault with each other quite frequently of late and they have exchanged many dark and meaning looks. But they never broke into hostilities until yesterday when, according to Mrs. Abraham Bender, Mrs. Aaron Bender loudly threatened to do her bodily harm.

Mrs. Abraham Bender decided to take no chances. She had her sister-in-law arrested, and this morning the latter was arraigned before Justice Snape in the borough court. The Justice ordered the case postponed until Friday, when Mrs. Abraham Bender, it is said, will tell all about the nature of Mrs. Aaron Bender's threat, and Mrs. Aaron Bender, it is reported, will say that she doesn't care enough about Mrs. Abraham Bender to waste threats on her.

SHE FOUND BURGLAR AT WORK IN PANTRY.

Mrs. Elizabeth Smalley, of Prospect avenue, Dunellen, returned from church last night just in time to frighten away a sneak thief who had entered her pantry.

Her entrance was so timely that the marader didn't get a chance to take a solitary thing away with him, or do any damage whatever except to knock over a few chairs that stood in the way of a hasty exit. Mrs. Smalley and her neighbors think he was a prowling tramp of whom several have been reported in the vicinity of Dunellen recently. Mrs. Smalley's adventure has put other Dunellen housewives on their guard and all strangers are being carefully watched.

SOMERVILLE BALKS PLAN OF BIG WATER SYNDICATE.

The Borough of Somerville has blocked the work of the syndicate which has expended $300,000 in Somerset county in acquiring water rights with the object of supplying towns and cities along the line of the New Jersey Central with water from the Raritan river.

The syndicate has laid the first mile of its trunk line at a cost of $60,000. Now the borough of Somerville refuses to permit it to lay its thirty-six inch main through the borough until it divulges its plans or assures the Council of an adequate and permanent water supply for fire purposes.

Will Form Young Men's Club.

Rev. L. R. Howard, pastor, was chairman of the meeting held at Hope chapel, Saturday night, for the purpose of organizing a Young Men's club. While nothing definite was accomplished, it was decided to hold another meeting next Saturday night, when committees and officers will be elected and by-laws and resolutions will be adopted. All young men of the chapel seventeen years and over are cordially invited to the meeting.

William Breem, of Somerset street, who was injured a few days ago, while riding his wheel, is confined at the home of his brother. He was in collision with a business wagon belonging to Powlison & Jones.

ABANDON JOINT SEWER

City Fathers, 'Tis Reported, Decide Against Proposed Joint System.

THE EXPENSE IS TOO GREAT.

Final Report, It Is Said, Will Be Made at the Regular November Meeting.

At a meeting of the Common Council as a committee of the whole held at the Council Chamber, last night, there was a thorough discussion of the sanitary sewage proposition, whereby it was planned to adopt a system that would include Plainfield, North Plainfield, Scotch Plains, Fanwood and Dunellen. It was finally agreed that the public affairs committee, in whose hands the matter has been placed, should make a report at the regular November meeting.

It is understood, semi-officially, that the report will recommend that North Plainfield, as well as the other surburban places mentioned in this connection, be allowed to take care of its own sewage and Plainfield will continue to do the same, thereby declining to enter into any agreement to provide a joint sewage system.

It seems to be the sentiment of a majority of the members of the Common Council that Plainfield has about all it wants to do to handle its own sewage through the present system and that the making of an agreement with other municipalities would only tend to complicate matters and result in an added expense which is undesirable at this time. The report of the public affairs committee in November will contain the findings of the committee and will present a detailed statement of facts as found by the councilmen.

When it is known that Plainfield recommends the above action, there will no doubt be regrets expressed especially on the part of North Plainfield, who believed that they could see a solution to an otherwise difficult proposition.

There were two or three propositions submitted to take care of the sewage of the several municipalities, one being to go to tidewater and also include Bound Brook, Somerville, Raritan and New Brunswick. Another plan was to locate new and enlarged sewage beds in the extreme western end of North Plainfield township and let them take care of the sewage from Plainfield, North Plainfield, Scotch Plains, Fanwood and Dunellen. By this plan, the city's present bed would be abolished, which was favorably received by the people of Dunellen, who ever since their establishment, have complained about the beds as being a nuisance.

Options on farm land in North Plainfield township were secured, but the announcement of these plans called forth a protest from residents in the township. However, it was thought that the objections could be overcome in some way. The representatives of the various municipalities have spent considerable time investigating the proposition, but now, it is understood, that the Plainfield Common Council has reached the conclusion that it would be unwise to enter into any agreement with other municipalities. All of the members of the Council were present except Messrs. W. W. Wilson and George S. Clay. Mayor C. J. Fisk also took part in the discussion.

A Case Deserving of Aid.

One of the most pathetic stories of abandonment and non-support which has ever come to the notice of the local police is printed in another column. The deplorable condition of the deserted wife in the case is worthy the sympathy and succor of those who hate wrong and who are willing to aid by their kindness and means. We refer to the case of Mrs. Colucci and her three children as revealed in the police court this morning.

Convention Endeavor Rally.

A "convention echo" rally will be held Friday evening of this week by the Park Avenue Baptist C. E. Society. The features of interest will be short talks on the various conventions by society members and special music in which the juniors will assist. All endeavorers having convention badges are asked to wear them at this meeting. All are cordially invited whether endeavorers or not.

SOMERVILLE.

William H. Cawley, Jr., celebrated his removal from Dover back to Somerville and again becoming an active member of the Lincoln Chemical Engine Company by treating that organization to a crab dinner at the close of its regular monthly meeting Saturday. About twenty-eight members attended the dinner. Howard Smith acted as toastmaster. Speeches were made by nearly every member present.

A slick stranger in some manner procured a private stamp used on checks by the Wilson Military Academy, and getting some blank checks victimized a number of the tradesmen of this place. It was not known until the checks were presented to the banks on Saturday for payment that the strangers had made good their escape. The amounts in each case were for ten and fifteen dollars.

The West End baseball team won the third game of the series and the Somerset county championship from the Bound Brook baseball team Saturday by the score of 7-4. The score stood 4-1 in favor of Somerville in the ninth inning, when Bound Brook tied the score. In Somerville's half three runs were secured, thus winning the game.

The Woman's Auxiliary of the Somerset Hospital will have a tag day on October 29, the day of the firemen's parade and the Hallowe'en parade. A large number of people will be in town that day, and a large sum of money will no doubt be collected.

Rev. W. A. Pfanstiehl had as his subject Sunday morning "The Father's Business." At the evening service his topic was "No More Sea," suggested by the great naval display in New York last week, and a sequel to last Sabbath evening's sermon.

The Wilson Military Academy football team met defeat in its opening game with Battin High School Saturday by the score of 10-0. Next Saturday the Wilson Military Academy team will have Princeton Prep as its opponent.

The Somerville A. C.'s football team was badly defeated by the Pennington Seminary team in the opening game Saturday afternoon. The score was 41-0.

C. A. Speer has removed the half finished brick wall on the west side of his property in Davenport street which he recently sold to the borough.

Thinks He Has Radium Substitute.

New York, Oct. 12.—Dr. J. B. Shober, a distinguished American scientist, reports through the journal of the American Medical Association the discovery of a substitute for radium as a thereapeutic agent. Since the discovery of radium laboratory workers have been striving to find an efficient substitute for this most costly adjunct to the outfits of physicians and surgeons. Dr. Shober's discovery resulted from his investigations of the radio-active property of cocoanut-charcoal.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

Miss Minnie Victorson will use for her vehicle for the coming season "This Woman and This Man," an emotional drama, described as "a love play." It deals with the love of a man and a woman, with the sanctitey of the marriage relation, and the splendid heroism and sacrifice of a noble woman, fighting for the good name and the happiness of her child. In this new play, Miss Victorson will run the gamut of the emotions. That she will do this with eminent success will not be questioned by those of her admirers who saw her work in "The Straight Road," "The Squawman" and "Under Southern Skies." Miss Victorson's new play was written by Avery Hopwood, one of the best known of the younger dramatists, author of "Clothes," and other successful modern plays. The show will be seen here on Friday night.

In the entire history of stage presentations, "Wildfire," the great racing comedy which will be seen at the Plainfield theatre Saturday afternoon and night, may be said to have outfooted all other plays of the race course as a popular success. The reasons for this phenomenal success are not far to seek. A theme of unwonted freshness and originality, and a vein of humor scarcely less spontaneous and unhackneyed, are combined in very attractive proportion with the charms of the favorite American beauty, Pauline Hall. The play is further enhanced by the best endeavors of the costumer and scenic artist. Harry Doel Parker, the enterprising manager who has the pleasure of introducing "Our Polly" to the dramatic field, had in mind, at the time he contracted for her appearance in "Wildfire," the fact that during the years Miss Hall was the brilliant ornament of the comic opera stage, critics praised her for her dramatic skill as well as for her vocal and physical charms.

GOLF.

Rival attractions confront the golfers this week. The stay-at-homes will turn their attention to the invitation tournament at the Montclair Golf Club, and early indications point to a large entry. Clubs in the district have been invited to send four players each. On this occasion the tournament, beginning as usual on Thursday, will extend over three days, a change from last year, when two days sufficed.

While attending the Lesley cup matches at Philadelphia recently and the women's national event there last week, Herbert Jaques, president of the United States Golf Association, and G. Herbert Windeler, a former chief executive, did missionary work in the interests of the invitation tournament which will begin today over the links of the Country Club of Brookline, near Boston. The professionals will have the call today and tomorrow; that is, the salaried brigade is expected to have things pretty much to themselves, although the amateurs are welcome.

As only one day will intervene between the open and the regular autumn tournament at Brookline, the chances are that the visiting amateurs will remain for the last named event. There will be the usual eighteen-hole qualifying round, the best sixteen to earn the right to continue on at the match game. While the three new holes will be the chief objects of interest at the Clyde Park links, the whole circuit will come in for more or less attention. The entire length is now 6,083 yards, and report has it that the putting greens are better than ever. The Country Club cup has been won by a Massachusetts player each spring and fall, with the exception of the victories of H. Chandler Egan, of Chicago, and B. W. Corkran, of Baltimore.

A number of the women who took part in the national event at Merion will attend the invitation tournament of the Huntington Valley Country Club at Noble, Penn., this week.

In this issue, The Daily Press publishes the first installment of Dr. Frederick A. Cook's own story of his conquest of the North Pole, special arrangements having been made for exclusive rights for this territory for the publication of this narrative. Do not fail to read it.

The death of former Mayor John F. Wilson robs North Plainfield of a whole-souled, broad-minded type of citizen, rare in the average community. During his entire residence of thirty-six years, he took a deep and unusual interest in civic affairs and ever was to be found with those who were working for the upbuilding and advancement of the municipality.

FROLIC ENDS IN ARREST.

Roselle, Oct. 12.—Six men badly intoxicated returned early Sunday from Elizabeth, where they had attended a wedding, and within two hours were arrested, charged with attempting to wreck a main line trolley car by placing an automobile belonging to Oliver Clements, one of the Standard Oil Company's officials on the car tracks.

Frank Seureak, one of the six men, fearing disastrous results from their actions, deserted his companions and was caught by Policeman Geisler trying to push the heavy automobile from the tracks.

He was compelled by Judge Van S. Roosa to take police officers to the homes of his companions, where they were arrested. They gave their names as Joseph Makawig, Toney Zavalack, Mike Phillips, Peter Goodick and Nick Mazezar. They were each fined by the judge and made to settle with Mr. Clements for damage done to his automobile.

Monkeys at Proctor's.

Mme. Diaz and her performing monkeys have been engaged for three days at Proctor's theatre and the "little hairy gentlemen," as she calls them, are wonders for acrobatic feats and amusing "monkey shines."

The children are delighted and will undoubtedly never see anything quite as much to their liking again. The balance of the program consists of Noble & Brooks in a travesty skit full of humorous chatter and songs; Barnes and Lee in a race horse misunderstanding entitled "Skettles," and Howe and Scott, Hebrew comedians, completes the vaudeville program. The Hudson-Fulton celebration pictures are shown for one day only and doubtless will draw a large and interested crowd.

CONCERT SEASON PLANS

Fifth Annual Series of Mc Intyre Chamber Concerts Begins Oct. 25.

HIS ARTISTS ARE ANNOUNCED.

Signor Campanari Engaged—Hans Lets Violinist, and Vladimir Dubinsky Cellist.

Plainfield's musical season will officially open on Monday night, October 25, when Joseph McIntyre will inaugurate the fifth season of the McIntyre Chamber Concerts at the Plainfield High School auditorium with one of his characteristically delightful entertainments. That the approaching season is to be a brilliant one is attested by the personnel of the patronesses and subscribers to these concerts, nearly every woman of social prominence in both Plainfield and North Plainfield having sent in her name as a supporter of this series.

Four concerts are to be given this year. The dates include October 25, November 15, December 6 and January 17. It will be seen from the dates (after consulting the calendar) that Mr. McIntyre has selected Monday evening for his concerts, believing that there are fewer social functions set for these evenings and in consequence lessening the chances for conflicting dates for those who wish to enjoy an evening in harmony's realm.

The personnel of this year's trio will be as it was last season. Mr. McIntyre, of course, will preside at the piano, while Hans Letz, the violinist, and Vladimir Dubinsky, cellist, will complete the trio. Last season marked the debut of Mr. Letz in Plainfield, but his work was so highly artistic that scores of congratulations were showered upon Mr. McIntyre for the acquisition of this artist. Mr. Dubinsky, of course, has been heard here for several years, and like rare old wine, he seems to ripen and improve with age.

In announcing his list of soloists for the approaching season Mr. McIntyre, with pardonable pride, refers to his achievement in procuring for a Plainfield hearing that incomparable artist, Guiseppe Campanari, baritone of the Metropolitan Opera House forces. While not as spectacular in his work, or mode of life, as Caruso, yet his voice has won him bravos and laurels from the crowned heads of the Old World as well as from the most critical of the devotees of music in New York.

Mr. McIntyre feels that he has landed the brightest luminary of the operatic firmament, and Signor Campanari will be heard at the November concert.

Miss Christine Miller, contralto; John Young, tenor, and Sidney Biden, baritone, rounds out the quartet of soloists for the season. Miss Miller created quite a furore here last season when she sang at the Lenten song recitals at Mrs. Stephen A. Ginnas. Her clear, pure and exquisitely placed voice quite thrilled her audience and there were many requests from patronesses that she be included in this season's galaxy of stars to be heard here.

Mr. Biden comes from Berlin and very recently he was heard at one of the Sunday night concerts at the Hippodrome, where his beautiful voice won for him a high place among the baritones of the new world, which country he will henceforth call home.

Mr. Young has many friends in Plainfield, who will welcome another opportunity of hearing his beautiful voice.

But it is not the soloists upon whom the success of the these concerts depends. After much thought, and no end of work in which the trio has rehearsed long and arduously all summer, Mr. McIntyre has selected these trios to be presented this winter. The most important announcement in this particular is that of Smetana, it will be readily recalled, is the composer of "The Bartered Bride," which opera was brought out at the Metropolitan Opera House two years ago with great eclat. Smetana is the most distinguished and talented of the Bohemian composer and his works will live long.

The beautiful B major trio by Brahms is another selection for Plainfield presentation, and among the most highly cultured musicians and music lovers it is known as among the greatest of this great composer's works. This trio will also be heard in Plainfield for the first time.

Tschaikowsky's trio, a "Memoire d' un Grand Artist," will be the third of the instrumental offerings in this series. This composition was played here by the trio two years ago. It is being presented this year upon the request of a number of Mr. McIntyre's most appreciative supporters.

Atlantic City's business men are preparing to make a strenuous fight to secure restoration of 150-trip books, which have been withdrawn from sale by the Pennsylvania Railroad during the winter. The City Business League, which met Saturday night, first condemned the action of the railway officials and then appointed a committee to act with similar bodies from the Board of Trade and the Hotel Men's Association in an effort to have the books restored.

MEN ARE AUTOMATONS

They Are Run by Push Buttons, Says Dean George E. Vincent.

EXPOUNDS NOVEL THEORIES.

All Their Actions Are Controlled by Pressure, Exclaims Former Plainfielder.

"The man who tips his hat to a woman is not actuated by sentiments of chivalry," said Dean George E. Vincent of the University of Chicago in an address to the Cook County Teachers Assocition in Chicago.

Dean Vincent spent his boyhood days in this city and was graduated from the local High School. His father, the late Bishop Vincent, was at that time pastor of the First M. E. church here.

"The woman's smile merely touches a button over his heart and off comes his hat. An imaginary button communicates with the machinery of his chivalric make-up and causes him to raise his hat with all the gracefulness of intended and hearty deference.

"Men are made up of a series of buttons, and all their actions are controlled by the pressure brought to bear on them. To a large extent our lives are the lives of automatons. All we have to do is to push the right button at the right time and the right thing is done.

"The well bred person never gives any apparent attention to his grammar or his English, or his etiquette. How delightful it is to meet such a person.

"But there are limits to automatons. I used to go to see a steel image of a man. It wore a hat and had a cigar in its mouth, and there was a door in its back where the coal was shoveled in. There was a place where you started the machinery and off the man would walk until the machinery was stopped.

"But one day there was a hitch in the stopping of the machinery, and it walked straight to the end of the room and stuck its cigar and hat brim into the wall, and its legs moved up and down in automatic attempts to proceed.

"There are a lot of people in this world who can get along very well automatically so long as there is nothing to hinder the working of the machinery, and nothing to impede their progress.

"But when they get to a stone wall of difficulties that they are not able to surmount they stick their hat brims and their cigars into the obstruction and their legs go up and down in their mechanical attempts to move ahead."

A KNIGHT FOR A DAY PLEASED AUDIENCE

The big musical gaiety, "A Knight for a Day," with its record of over six hundred nights in Chicago and six months in New York, as well as one whole summer in Boston, delighted a large audience at the Plainfield theatre last night. Comedian Frank Deshon, whose clever impersonations of the nervy little waiter masquerading as a knight, elicited the unanimous praise of all, and Connie Mac as "Tilly Day" was funny in the extreme. She and Deshon kept the audience in continual laughter.

The production is one typical of the B. C. Whitney trade-mark, and in addition to some of the most unique electrical surprises, the chorus was an exceptionally good one. The music is particularly catchy and a well-balanced chorus sang well from the rise to the fall of the curtain. "The Little Girl in Blue," "Dreaming," and "Life is a See-Saw" were among the songs that made a hit, while the electrical see-saw was a clever bit of stage-craft.

GOVERNOR'S WINTER HOME.

Although in his last annual message to the Legislature, Governor Fort recommended an appropriation to be used in renting a house in Trenton for the use of the Chief Executive and his family, and later induced the Appropriation Committee to put an item of $2,500 in the supplemental appropriation for such a purpose, it is now understood that the Govenor will not avail himself of the money in the hands of the State Treasurer for establishing an executive mansion.

At present Governor Fort and his family are living at their summer cottage at Spring Lake, and they will remain there until November, when they will go to East Orange for a few weeks. They will probably spend the holiday season and the early part of January with the Governor's son, Leslie E. Fort, at Lakewood. When the legislative season begins the Governor plans to locate in or near Trenton. It is not unlikely that he will locate at Princeton for the winter.

EPISCOPAL CHURCH MEN MEET AT PROVIDENCE

The twenty-fourth annual convention of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew will be held in Providence, R. I., beginning tomorrow.

Rev. George A. Warner, rector of the Church of the Holy Cross, with a number of young men from the church, will attend. A cordial welcome will be given the laymen of other denominations who attend the convention.

The program provides for a large number of prominent men as speakers, including bishops, priests and laymen of the church. Among some of them are Bishops McVicker, of Rhode Island, Codman of Maine, Grafton of Fond du Lac, Parker of New Hampshire, and Gailor of Tennessee. Other speakers will be the Rev. Floyd W. Tomkins, of Philadelphia; the Rev. Paul B. Bull, one of the chaplains of the British navy; the Rev. F. H. Sill, and the Rev. Harvey Officer, both of the Order of the Holy Cross of the Church. The founder of the brotherhood, James L. Houghteling, of St. James' church, Chicago, as well as Robert H. Gardiner, the president. Other men of prominence in the Brotherhood of St. Andrew and the church are among the list of speakers.

From 12:30 to 12:55 on Thursday, Friday and Saturday, noonday mass meetings will be held in an open house. At past conventions these meetings have been crowded with men.

The Annual Corporate Communion will be celebrated at 7 a. m. Sunday, the 17th. This will undoubtedly be the most inspiring service of all. Only men will be present at this service. There will be mass meetings Sunday afternoon for men and for boys. The convention will close with the farewell meeting on Sunday evening, which will be conducted by the president of the brotherhood.

It is expected that delegates will be in attendance from every chapter in this city, as well as from all over the United States, and from England and other countries.

PIANO CONTEST FAKES EXPOSED!

IMPORTANT FACTS FOR HOLDERS OF GOLD BONDS, PIANO COUPONS AND DISCOUNT CERTIFICATES.

There are several Piano houses which have no prices for their goods except grossly inflated ones arranged expressly for fake discounts in connection with schemes of various kinds. These houses seem to find it impossible to dispose of their pianos in a legitimate, straightforward way, but instead resort to one scheme after another—catch-penny devices, so crude as to be positively insulting to the intelligence of the public. These schemes usually take the form of guessing contests, drawing puzzles and various feats of little skill. In all of them the object is identical to mislead the prospective buyer into the belief that he is getting something for nothing, while at the same time prices are arranged sufficiently high to off-set the allowance to which his prize certificate entitles him.

EVERYONE WHO MAKES A GUESS GETS A PRIZE!

If you have ever answered one of these ads you received a discount certificate. EVERYBODY DOES. It matters not whether the answer is good, bad or indifferent, from adult or child it draws a prize in the shape of a certificate or due bill (generally from $65.00 to $100.00) to apply on the purchase of a new Piano. Of course the price of the Piano is fixed accordingly and the purchaser pays a high price even after the amount of certificate is deducted, usually a much higher price than an instrument of similar quality could be secured for in any legitimate music store.

To test the value of one of these certificates present it in payment for something other than a new piano—say a low priced used piano, music cabinet or a bench, and see how quickly the dealer will turn you down. He will not even give you 50 cents worth of music for it. Try the experiment!

AT $185.00 WE WILL SELL A BETTER PIANO THAN THE SCHEME HOUSES ASK $325.00 TO $400.00 FOR! Such well known and high grade makes as Haines Bros., Brewster, the Genuine Mathushek and others too numerous to mention.

Bradley Land Passed—Steam From Frozen Seas—Half the Food Allowance Used—Maddening Effect of Polar Glitter—Despair of Ahwelah, "Beyond Is Impossible" -o-

[The Cook expedition was equipped at Gloucester, Mass., and was ready to start on July 3, 1907. Dr. Cook and Rudolph Francke were put ashore at Annootok, Greenland, with ample stores and during the winter made preparations for the polar dash. On Feb. 19, 1908, the main expedition started for the pole with eleven men, 103 dogs and eleven heavily loaded sleds. Going a little north of west, the party on March 18 reached the northern end of Heiberg island. Here the expedition divided, six men returning. The real race to the pole now began. On March 18 twenty-six miles were made and the next day twenty-one. Then two more of the men returned, leaving only two young Eskimos to accompany Dr. Cook, with two loaded sledges and twenty-six dogs. On March 20 sixteen miles were covered, twenty-nine miles on the 21st, twenty-two the following day and afterward for several days an average of seventeen or eighteen. Near the northern edge of Grant Land a great open lead was encountered, which was crossed with some peril on the young ice. Some days later after a severe storm the ice split open under the igloo, and Dr. Cook in his sleeping bag sank into the crevice, being dragged to safety by the young Eskimos. The advance was halted by storms, in one of which the dogs were buried and in another the men themselves. To the west a new land, named Bradley Land by Cook, was sighted, extending from 83 degrees 20 minutes to 83 degrees 51 minutes and close to the one hundred and second meridian. Dr. Cook's own account of his dash from Bradley Land to the pole is given below.]

OVER the newly discovered coast lines was written Bradley Land, in honor of John R. Bradley, the benefactor of the expedition. As we passed north of this land there was nothing substantial upon which to fix the eye.

There was at no time a perfectly clear horizon, but the weather was good enough to permit frequent nautical observations.

Thus day after day the marches were forced, the incidents and the positions were recorded, but the adventures were promptly forgotten in the mental bleach of the next day's effort. The night of April 7 was made notable by the swing of the sun at midnight. For a number of nights it made grim faces at us in its setting. A teasing mist, drawn as a curtain over the northern sea at midnight, had given curious advantages for celestial staging; setting into this haze, we were unable to determine sharply the advent of the midnight sun.

Now the great bulk was drawn out egg shaped, with horizontal lines drawn through it. Again it was pressed into a basin with flaming fires, burning behind a curtain of frosts; blue at other times, it appeared like a huge vase, and it required very little imagination to see purple and violet flowers.

The change was often like magic, but the last display was invariably a face—disforted faces of men or animals were made to suit our fancy.

We had therefore followed the sun's northward advance—from its first peep at midday above the south ice of the polar gateway to its sweep of the northern ice at midnight. From the end of the polar night late in February to the first of the double days and midnight suns we had forced a trail through darkness, blood hardening temperature and over leg breaking irregularities of an unknown world of ice to an area 200 miles from the pole.

Now we had the sun unmistakably at midnight, and its new glory was quite an incentive to our life of shivers. Observations on April 8 placed camp at latitude 86 degrees 36 minutes, longitude 94 degrees 2 minutes. In spite of what seemed like long marches we had advanced only 106 miles in nine days. Much of our hard work was lost in circuitous twists around troublesome pressure lines and high, irregular fields of very old ice. The drift ice was throwing us to the east with sufficient force to give us some anxiety, but with eyes closed to danger and hardships the double days of fatigue and glitter quickly followed one another.

The temperature, ranging between 36 and 40 degrees below zero F., kept persistently near the freezing point of mercury, and, though the perpetual sun gave light and color to the cheerless wastes, we were not impressed with any appreciable sense of warmth. Indeed, the sunbeams seemed to make the frost of the air pierce with a more painful sting.

There was a weird play of orgies, seemingly most impressive at this time—clouds of steam rose from the frozen seas. In marching over the golden glitter snow scalds the face, while the nose is bleached with frost.

In camp a grip of the knife left painful burns from cold metal. To the frozen finger the water was hot. With wine spirits the fire was lighted, while oil delighted the stomach. In dreams heaven was hot, the other place was cold.

All nature was false. We seemed to be nearing the chilled flame of a new hades. In our hard life there was nothing genuinely warm. The congenial appearances were all deception, but deat'h offered only cold comfort. There was no advantage in suicide.

We should have enjoyed this curious experience, but with endless bodily discomforts, combined in aching muscles and an overbearing languor, there could be no real joys from the glories of nature. The pleasure was reserved for a later retrospect.

We now changed our working hours from day to night, beginning usually at 10 and ending at 7. The big marches and prolonged hours of travel with which fortune favored us earlier were no longer possible. Weather conditions were more important in determining the day's run than the hands of the chronometers.

When the storms threatened the start was delayed, and in strong blows the march was shortened, but in one way or another we usually found a few hours in each turn of the dial during which a march could be forced between winds. It mattered little whether we traveled night or day—all hours and all days were alike to us—for we had no accustomed time of rest, no Sundays, no holiday, no landmarks or mileposts to pass. To advance and expend the energy accumulated during one sleep at the cost of our pound of pemmican was the one sole aim in life.

The observations of April 11 gave latitude 87 degrees 20 minutes, longitude 95 minutes 19 seconds. The pack disturbance of Bradley Land was less and less noted in the northward movement. The fields became heavier, larger and less crevassed.

We had now passed the highest reaches of all our predecessors and had gained the inspiration of the farthest north for ourselves. The time was at hand, however, to consider seriously the necessity of an early return.

Nearly half of the food allowance had been used. In the long marches supplies had been more liberally used than anticipated, and now our dog teams were much reduced in numbers. A hard necessity had forced the cruel law of the survival of the fittest, for the less useful dogs were fed to the steady working survivors. Owing to the food limits and the advancing season we could not prudently continue the outward march a fortnight longer.

We had dragged ourselves 300 miles over the polar sea in twenty-four days. Including delays and detours, this gave an average of nearly thirteen miles daily on an air line in our course. There remained an unknown line of 100 miles before our ambitions could be satisfied. The same average advance which we had made on the pack would take us to the pole in thirteen days. There were food and fuel enough to risk this adventure.

In the diary of the succeeding days' doings there appear numerous tabulations of work and observations. In the new cracks the thickness of the ice was measured. The water was examined for life. Atmospheric, surface water and ice temperatures were taken, the barometer was noted, the cloud formations, weather conditions and ice drifts were tabulated.

I watched daily for possible signs of dangerous failure in strength, for serious disability now meant a fatal termination.

A disabled man could neither continue nor return, but every examination gave another reason to push human endurance to the limit of the strain of every fiber and cell. The hard work which followed, under an occasional burst of burning sunbeams, brought intense thirst.

Forcing the habit of the camel, we managed to take enough water before starting to keep sufficient liquid in the veins for the day's march, but it was difficult to await the melting of the ice at camping time.

In two sittings—evening and morning—each took an average of three quarts of water daily. This included the tea and also the luxury of an occasional soup. There was water about everywhere in heaps, but it was in crystals, and before the thirst could be quenched several ounces of precious fuel, which had been carried thousands of miles, must be used. And still this water, so expensive and so necessary to us, ultimately became the greatest bane to comfort. It escaped through the pores of the skin, saturated the boots, forced a band of ice under the knee and a belt of frost about the waist, while the face was nearly always incased in a mask of icicles from the breath—a necessary part of our hard lot in life, and we learned to take the torture philosophically.

From the eighty-seventh to the eighty-eighth parallel we passed for two days over old ice without pressure lines or hummocks. There was no discernible line of demarcation for the fields, and it was quite impossible to determine if we were on land or sea ice. The barometer indicated no elevation, but the ice had the hard, waving surface of glacial ice, with only superficial crevasses. The water obtained from this was not salty, but all of the upper surface of the ice of the polar sea makes similar water. The nautical observations did not seem to indicate a drift, but nevertheless the combined tabulations do not warrant the positive assertion of either land or sea for this area.

The ice gave a cheering prospect. A plain of purple and blue ran in easy undulations to the limits of vision without the usual barriers of uplifted blocks. Over it a direct air line course was possible. Progress, however, was quite as difficult as over the irregular pack. The snow was crusted with large crystals. An increased friction reduced the speed, while the surface, too hard for snowshoes, was also too weak to give a secure footing. The loneliness, the monotony, the hardship of steady, unrelieved travel were now keenly felt.

It is not often that man's horsepower is put to the test as ours was. We were compelled to develop a working energy to the limit of animal capacity. Day after day we had pushed along at the same steady pace over plains of frost and through a mental desert.

As the eye opened at the end of an icy slumber the fire was lighted little by little, the stomach was filled with liquids and solids, mostly cold—enough to last for the day, for there could be no halt or waste of fuel for midday feeding. We next got into harness and paced off the day's pull under the lash of duty. We worked until standing became impossible—longer in light winds, shorter in strong winds, but always until the feet became numb and heavy.

Then came the arduous task of building a snow house. In this the eyes, no longer able to wink, closed, but soon the empty stomach complained, and it was filled up again—not with things that pleased the palate, only hard fuel to feed the inner fires, while the ear sought the soft side of ice to dispel fatigue; no pleasure in mental recreation, nothing to arouse the soul from its icy inclosure.

To eat, to sleep, to press one foot ahead of the other, was our steady vocation, like the horse to the cart, but we had not his advantage of an agreeable climate and a comfortable stable at night.

Words and pictures cannot adequately describe the maddening influence of this sameness of polar glitter, combined with bitter winds, extreme cold and an overworked body. To me there was always the inspiration of anticipation of the outcome of ultimate success, but for my young savage companions it was a torment almost beyond endurance. Their weariness was made evident by a lax use of the whip and an indifferent urging of the dogs. They were, however, brave and faithful to the bitter end, seldom allowing selfish ambitions or uncontrollable passions seriously to interfere with the main effort of the expedition.

On the morning of April 13 a strain of agitating torment reached a breaking point. For days there had been a steady cutting wind from the west, which drove despair to its lowest reaches.

No torment could be worse than that never ceasing rush of icy air. Ahwelah bent over his sled and refused to move.

His dogs turned and looked inquiringly. I walked over and stood by his side. Etukishuk came near and stood motionless, staring blankly at the southern skies. Large tears fell from Ahwelah's eyes and piled a little frost of sadness in the blue of his own shadow for several minutes. Not a word was uttered, but I knew that each felt that the time had come to free the fetters of human passions. Slowly Ahwelah said, "Unne sinig pa—oo-ah-tonie i-o-doria" ("It is well to die—beyond is impossible").

"I can send well now," she exclaimed. "I spent lots of time in the Irvessa's little wireless room. It seems so much more wonderful on sea than it did on land. Oh, the mystery of it all!

"Think of being away off tossing about in a boat, with nothing but sky and water anywhere in sight, and to have one who is"—she hesitated a moment, and a bright flush rose as she went on, correcting herself quickly—"I mean, of course, if there should be some one very dear to you on that same ocean. You don't know where, how near or how far, but by touching a key you can send your thoughts flying in every direction, and the little wave currents bearing your message will quiver around him, brush by him, perhaps touch his cheek in passing, and you wonder if he feels it."

The man was looking at her queerly.

"By Jove, that's strange!" he said, low, as she finished.

Frances laughed teasingly.

"Why, have you ever felt a message dancing about you?" she questioned.

Sommers shook his head.

"No, but the Roanoke did. It was very singular, I assure you. I was in the wireless room one night a couple of weeks ago talking to the operator"—the girl leaned forward with sudden, tense eagerness—"when suddenly, without a call or getting our response or any preliminary that the well regulated message indulges in before coming to you, over our recorder there came clicking in a wonder message."

His voice softened to a note of tenderness.

"It was a message of love—the tenderest and sweetest I've ever known. No one could tell for whom it was intended. I don't think it knew itself. It had gone astray.

"It was sent by a woman—it must have been—and it found a home with us. Not a man on that ship but carries it now in his heart. May I tell it to you?"

The girl was looking at him, her heart in her eyes.

"A love message? Of course," she said softly. "But how extraordinary!"

Sommers nodded.

"Wasn't it? It seemed almost cruel that such a dear little message, so innocent and pure, should have been thrown out into this hard old world of ours to dash through the air, through heat and cold and storm, vainly seeking an owner; going on and on, miles and miles, in every direction, until at last it became weak and faint—and died."

"But, you see, it didn't die," added the girl tenderly.

"No," said the man. "By some chance as it flew by us we caught it, and we loved it. That message will live until the last man on that ship has fought his fight."

"And it was sent to no one in particular?" questioned the girl.

"To you," he answered.

"To me!" she exclaimed, startled.

Sommers shook his head, smiling.

"No, no, that was the address. Listen: 'To you, my own one, I send this little message overflowing with my love.'"

He was bending across the table eagerly, speaking low the wonder message that had come to him; giving it back, his own declaration of love to the girl.

"Yes," said she softly, for she understood.

At her tone an intuition came to him. He caught her look. He, too, understood. And so he dared misquote a little.

"Should it ever reach you, would you know it came from me?"

"No, no, it wasn't that," exclaimed Frances sharply. Then she stopped abruptly, the crimson rushing to her face.

"What's the matter? Didn't I get it right?" he asked, with pretended innocence.

The girl, caught, now was trembling.

"Why, how should I know?"

The pretense of innocence was hopeless. He shook his head, smiling tenderly.

"How should you know? Because you sent it. Oh, that message was like you, only"—

"Only what?" she asked.

He looked at her with a queer smile.

"Only every other fellow thought it was like some one else. Did you send it to any one in particular?"

The girl lifted her eyes to his with a sudden shy daring very sweet to see.

"How was it addressed?" she asked.

The man's hands were trembling as he leaned toward her.

"Tell me, please," he begged.

Faltering, she looked down.

"'To you,'" she said very softly.

Without a word, careless of who might see, the man of action caught her hand and, leaning across the table, kissed her.

"Lieutenant Sommers?"

The same cool voice which had startled Frances earlier now made the two start apart guiltily. Sommers looked up angrily. The big man with the shrewd eyes was standing beside the table, his face as unemotional as though carved from stone.

Without a word, the man of action, leaning across the table, kissed her.

"What do you want?" asked the naval officer sharply.

"My name is Bradley," said the man, "United States secret service. I've brought a message to you from Washington, lieutenant."

"Well?"

"You are wanted at Washington, lieutenant, to answer some questions at the court of inquiry."

With an involuntary exclamation of fear and sympathy, Frances stood closer to her lover. He was staring at the secret service man, astounded.

"A court of inquiry!"

Bradley nodded.

"Yes, sir. Your gun exploded three weeks ago. Two men were killed outright and three mangled. One will be blinded if he lives."

CHAPTER XIII.

"DON'T YOU SEE I LOVE YOU?"

"TWO dead; three mangled; one blind"—

Slowly, in dazed, mechanical fashion, Sommers repeated the awful summary of his failure. Frances' face was horror stricken, too, but with a quick, impulsive gesture of love and faith she put her hand on his arm.

"It isn't your fault," she said. "I know it isn't your fault."

His hand caught hers with a quick grip of thanks for the renewed courage her sympathy and faith brought him.

"Won't you leave us now?" he said, low. "I'll see you and tell you what he has to say."

Reluctantly the girl bowed and hurried away into the hotel to wait there alone until her lover could see her. When she had gone Sommers turned quickly to Bradley.

The secret service man had been standing there, his face expressionless, but his shrewd eyes taking in and his keen brain analyzing all that had transpired.

"Why was I not informed of this before?" asked Sommers, still partly dazed.

"They decided to keep it from you until you came ashore," replied the secret service man. "How it all happened will be decided at the court of inquiry. I have been on the case since the accident occurred. Your gun stood the test at the proving ground. It's my opinion that it was killed in the tempering bath."

A wave of light swept over Sommers. He saw everything now. It was all plain. He understood why a drunken foreman had been left in charge of the job. He knew why Pinckney had been so solicitous. He realized why, finally, he himself had been assaulted in the last desperate effort to keep him from witnessing the transfer of the gun to the tempering bath.

Finally he understood why Frances had come there that night. She must have suspected, and she had come to save him. The thought of the dastardly trick enraged him.

"It was killed in the tempering bath! I swear it was!" Sommers exclaimed fiercely. "Pinckney was in the room that night at the Durant works. He's here—here at this hotel. I'll settle with him!"

He had taken a step when the secret service man caught him by the arm.

"Easy, lad, easy!" he cautioned. "Don't lose your head! I've made investigations in Pittsburg, and I'm going to question Mr. Pinckney myself."

With a desperate effort under the restraining hand Sommers regained his self control. His mind began to work again logically, shrewdly. He saw what he had to do and how he must help this friendly officer.

"May I ask when you were in Pittsburg did you question a man named Marsh?"

"You mean the draughtsman? No," replied Bradley. "Do you think he knew anything of it?"

Sommers shook his head in puzzled fashion.

"He may have known something. He ought to. He was there."

"Did you ever see a Mr. Rhinestrom about there?" asked Bradley next.

Sommers still looked puzzled.

"No; I didn't see him, but I heard a great deal of him. Marsh was greatly interested in the gun Rhinestrom had invented.'"

Bradley looked keenly at the naval officer.

"Oh, Marsh was interested in that gun? But you never saw Rhinestrom about there?" he said significantly.

Again there came that startling flash to Sommers. He began to suspect just how blind he had been, but before he could say another word Pinckney came out quickly from the hotel. The general manager stopped, surprised at sight of the naval lieutenant.

"How are you, Sommers?" he said coldly.

LAST TRIBUTES TO THE LATE COL. J. F. WILSON

In the fullness of golden years, 'neath the glow of a setting sun,
He sits, and dreams of a far off past, and the days of a race well run.
And memories come and go, as echoing footsteps fall;
Salute, ye men of a newer day, the noblest Roman of all.

(When the late Col. Wilson's picture appeared this summer among the series of cartoons featured in this paper, he wrote a letter of appreciation and many of his close friends made favorable comments on the cartoon and the accompanying verses which are here reproduced by permission of the family.)

The friends of the late Col. John Farmer Wilson will be given a last opportunity this afternoon from 4 to 7 o'clock to view the remains at the beautiful home, "Tunlaw," on Greenbrook road, and hundreds of residents of the city and borough, together with a large number of former business associates from New York, and nearby points will call to pay their last respects. These will include Mayor Samuel Townsend, members of the Borough Council, and other officials of North Plainfield, who had learned to admire and respect Col. Wilson. The casket is almost completely hidden with beautiful and costly floral tributes from relatives and friends.

The remains will be taken from Plainfield on the 8:45 o'clock train tomorrow morning for Baltimore, where they will be buried in the family plot. At Baltimore, Maryland Lodge, No. 120, F. & A. M., of which Col. Wilson was a member, will have charge of the funeral services and burial. This was the wish of Col. Wilson, especially as he was born in Baltimore, spent many years of his life there and counted a host of the citizens of that city his warm personal friends.

In the death of Col. Wilson his many friends in North Plainfield recognize that they have suffered a distinct loss, for he was one of its most public spirited citizens and always took a keen interest in civic affairs.

BID PASTOR FAREWELL

Park Avenue Baptist Church Congregation's Reception for Rev. and Mrs. Finn.

SOME HANDSOME PRESENTS.

Rev. Mr. Finn Receives Solid Silver Service and His Wife a Silver Toilet Set.

More than three hundred members and friends of the Park Avenue Baptist church thronged that edifice last night at the farewell reception tendered to the retiring pastor, Rev. A. E. Finn and his wife. While the affair was a pleasant one, a feeling of deep regret over the departure of pastor and wife was expressed.

The church was attractively decorated with autmn boughs. A twelve piece orchestra, under the leadership of Arthur S. Mosher and Miss Mamie Clark, pianist, readered a splendid musical program of classical and popular selections. It was one of the pleasing features of the reception.

During the evening Mr. and Mrs. Finn were presented with a solid silver service, filled with greenbacks by the congregation. In addition Mrs. Finn was presented with a silver toilet set by her Bible class in the Sunday-school. George W. V. Moy made the presentation speech of the silver service to Mr. and Mrs. Finn. Among other things he said: "I have the peculiar sensation and pleasure in addressing you on this, your farewell reception. We have found you to be a good pastor, a good friend ever ready to help and minister unto your parishioners.

"Every beginning must have an end. We had the joy of your coming and now we have the sorrow of your going. Lest you forget the Park Avenue Baptist church and its people, it has been deemed wise to purchase and give you some remembrance of your pastorate here. Once a week, if I remember aright, you will have to clean and polish this silver service. You will then remember and bless the Park Avenue Baptist church and its people. On behalf of your people I present this service to you. May God bless you and be with you in your new pastorate."

Mr. Finn accepting the gift, spoke with intensity of feeling. He said:

"Words fail to convey my feelings and they do fail me now. I am, indeed, sorry to go. When I came here six years ago, I didn't know such friendship would be developed. Before I accepted your call, an astute business man here wrote and begged me not to accept, but thank God I did. I am called upon to part with you under the direction of Him, who sent me here. While thanking you for your present, I do not need presents to be reminded of you.

"Friendships have been made which severance of church ties won't sever. The Park Avenue church and all its people will always have a warm spot in my heart. I thank you again for the many kindnesses which you have heaped upon me. Since my resignation, I have realized more and more the love and deep appreciation. Don't make it too hard for me to go. I desire that this church be a mighty factor in the community.

"Rally around your new pastor and give him the co-operation you gave me and you will make it so. The church is in better condition financially and spiritually than when I came here. We shall remember you. We thank you again for your gifts."

Mrs. Charles F. Dayton, in a few well chosen words, then presented Mrs. Finn with a silver toilet set. The latter was overcome with emotion and in a few minutes made a happy response. Refreshments were then served by Mr. Finn's adult Bible class, under the direction of Harry Johnston.

Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, Rev. John Y. Broek, Rev. J. W. Musson, Rev. L. R. Howard and Rev. Dr. C. E. Herring were present as representatives of the Plainfield Ministers' Association.

The committees in charge were as follows: Reception, Deacon and Mrs. Theodore I. Runyon, Deacon and Mrs. D. M. Runyon, Deacon and Mrs. Charles F. Dayton, Deacon and Mrs. Isaac Giles; decorations, Miss Mary Giles; music, Arthur S. Mosher and G. W. V. Moy; refreshments, Mrs. Wheaton S. Lowry, Miss Carrie Dunham, Mrs. Charles VanWinkle and Mrs. James S. Pray.

Senior Class Outing.

The senior class of the P. H. S. held a picnic yesterday on the Watchung mountains, near Johnston's drive. Twenty-seven pupils spent the day on the mountains. Principal Lindsey Best, Miss Bass and Miss Ball chaperoned the party.

PUBLIC ACCOUNTANTS' ASSOCIATION MEETS

The October meeting of the Society of Certified Public Accountants of the State of New Jersey, was held at Truell Hall, last night, after a fine dinner, which was served at 6 o'clock. The feature of the meeting was an address by J. E. Sterrett, president of the American Association of Public Accountants, which has a membership of about 800.

Mr. Sterrett's talk, which was of an informal character, treated entirely with the work of certified public accountants not only in New Jersey, but throughout the country. His words were a source of much encouragement, indicting steady progress in the way of recognition of those in the profession.

Reference was also made to legislation which it was believed would be advisable in this State in advancing the interests of the society. At present there are no laws in New Jersey which are of a direct benefit to the society, and it is proposed that some measure be introduced and passed that will accomplish this and bring recognition to the society.

There are about fifty members of the New Jersey society and those present last night were William H. Beidelman, Frank G. DuBois, of Newark; W. Sanders Davies, of New York; Edwin E. Gano, of Bound Brook; August Hartkorn, of Hoboken; Henry C. Magee, of Camden; Benjamin F. Pabodie, of Montclair; Thomas Gullen Roberts, of Hoboken; William T. Sawyer, of Elizabeth; Edward L. Suffern, George Wilkinson, Edwin G. Woodling, of Cranford. Thomas Cullen Roberts is secretary of the American Association.

GREAT GATHERING OF EPISCOPAL LAYMEN

Plainfield is represented by Rev. George A. Warner at the annual convention of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew in the United States, which began today at Providence, R. I., and will be concluded on Sunday. Ten thousand delegates are present.

Workers among boys and young men in all sections of the country, including clergymen, lawyers, judges, teachers and probation officers will attend and will make addresses. Among the speakers will be the following: Robert H. Gardiner, president of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew; the Rt. Rev. Robert Codman, D. D., bishop of Maine; the Rt. Rev. William N. McVicker, bishop of Rhode Island; the Rt. Rev. E. M. Parker, D. D., bishop coadjutor of New Hampshire; the Rt. Rev. T. F. Gailor, bishop of Tennessee; the Rt. Rev. F. J. Kinsman, D. D., bishop of Delaware; George H. Randall, associate secretary of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew; Hubert Carleton, general secretary of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew; G. Frank Shelby, New York district secretary; W. A. Cornelius, Pittsburg Local Assembly; F. A. Lambert, Baltimore, Md.; L. V. Webb, field secretary of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew; W. A. Haberstro, Central West secretary; James L. Houghteling, Chicago, founder of the Brotherhood; the Rev. Floyd W. Tomkins, rector of Holy Trinity church, Philadelphia; H. A. Phelps, Christ church, Junior Chapter, Ansonia, Conn.; I. P. Wishart, Christ church, Junior Chapter, St. Louis, Mo.; C. C. Bentley, Christ church, Junior Chapter, Oswego, N. Y.

The brotherhood was organized twenty-five years ago in St. James' church, Chicago. James Houghteling conceived the idea of forming his Bible class of young men into an organization which he called the St. Andrew Brotherhood, the purpose of that organization being to bring other men to church. It had two rules, the rule of prayer and the rule of service. The rule of prayer was that each member should pray each day for the spread of Christ's kingdom among men, and the rule of service was that each member should make an earnest effort each week to bring some man under church influence.

From this small chapter, starting twenty-five years ago in Chicago, has grown one of the most powerful organizations of the Episcopal church, numbering at the present time between 17,000 and 18,000 members.

YOKOHAMA MISSIONARY AT CRESCENT AVE. CHURCH

Miss May Tracy, formerly of Plainfield, but who for nearly seven years has been engaged in mission work in a girl's boarding school at Yokohoma, Japan, gave a delightful informal talk yesterday afternoon before the Women's Foreign Society of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church. There were about one hundred members of the society and friends present.

There was special interest in the meeting because Miss Tracy spent the greater part of her life in Plainfield and was active in the work of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church. The school in Yokohoma, where she teaches, is one of the oldest in that place, being established thirty-eight years. It is non-sectarian.

Miss Tracy spoke in an encouraging way of the work, although she said that it was naturally slow. The greatest results are to be found after the girls leave the school and return to their several homes. It is there that their good influence is felt among the people of their race.

While the mission school is non-sectarian, being supported by all denominations, the Crescent avenue church has always maintained a deep personal interest in Miss Tracy's work. She was given a cordial reception upon this her first visit to Plainfield since going to Japan.

After the meeting there was a social hour and tea was served, Mrs. Eugene H. Hatch and Mrs. Evarts Tracy presiding. An opportunity was given at this time for those present to personally meet Miss Tracy. During her visit here she is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Jewett, of Central avenue.

ARCHITECT'S PLANS FOR PUBLIC MARKET

Architect Fred L. Lancaster has completed the plans for the public market to be established by the Quoin Investment Company on the property now occupied by the Plainfield Cab Company on North avenue, and bids for the work will be asked for at once. The cab company will vacate the property November 1, when operations will begun on transforming the place into a market.

The plans provide that the entire second floor shall be removed and the building opened to the roof, permitting plenty of air and light. A solid concrete floor will also be laid. One of the features of the market will be a women's rest room, with all public comfort conveniences. This will be located near the main entrance on North avenue. It will be furnished with tile flooring and all modern sanitary appliances, making it an attractive place for the women.

The company has already received great encouragement in the project and it is believed that the numerous stalls will be rented readily by the merchants.

It has been, and still is the intention of the Crystal Ice Company to sell ice to the people of Plainfield at a moderate and fair price. OBSERVE COLUMBUS DAY

Watchung Council's Knights Listen to Speeches on the Explorer.

AN ENTERTAINING PROGRAM.

Following the Addresses, a Comedian and a Magician Amuse the Members.

Watchung Council, Knights of Columbus, celebrated Columbus Day, with an informal program of entertainment at its lodge rooms on East Front street, last night. It being the first time that Columbus Day was generally observed as a legal holiday, the local knights planned to observe the occasion in a fitting manner.

During the early part of the evening there were two excellent addresses one by Andrew E. Kenney and the other by Arthur A. Cannon. Both spoke of Columbus and his achievement in discovering America. Mr. Cannon referred especially to the voyage of Columbus to America, describing in detail the hardships encountered. He spoke of his perseverance as against the resistance of his crew, which plead earnestly for Columbus to turn back.

In his reference to this Mr. Cannon compared the voyage of Columbus with the trip of Dr. Cook to the North Pole, showing how the latter had the co-operation of a band of Esquimaux, who lent every assistance to his remarkable acheivement, while on several occasions Columbus was threatened with his life by his crew and every obstacle was placed in his way.

The rest of the evening was devoted to entertainment, a program being furnished by a magician and comedian from New York. Johnny Campbell also favored the knights with piano and vocal selections. A collation was served afterward. John Carty, as lecturer of the Council, was in charge of the affair. The rooms were attractively decorated with American flags.

COMMANDERY AUXILIARY HONORS MRS. J. F. BUCKLE

The Ladies' Auxiliary of Trinity Commandery, No. 17, K. T., gave a luncheon and euchre party this afternoon in honor of its president, Mrs. James F. Buckle, who with her husband will soon leave on a trip around the world.

Mrs. Buckle was presented to the assembled women by Mrs. Winfield S. Angleman, after which Mrs. James S. Pray presented Mrs. Buckle with a handsome leather pocketbook, on behalf of the auxiliary.

After the luncheon, euchre was enjoyed. The favors were miniature brooms in the shape of candy boxes. The decorations consisted of greens and pink carnations. Novel place cards were used for the members and guests. The committee in charge comprised Mrs. Winfield S. Angleman, Mrs. Arthur McVoy, Mrs. Frank G. Parson, Mrs. H. W. Marshall, Mrs. James S. Pray and Mrs. Elizabeth Woodhard.

PEARY'S PROOFS.

Cook did not reach the North Pole is made public today. The second instalment of Dr. Cook's thrilling narative of his conquest of the North Pole will also be found in this issue.

Will Tell of Italian Mission.

Missionary Boretti, who is in charge of the Italian Mission in this city, will address a meeting at Warren chapel, tomorrow night at 8 o'clock, in which he will explain fully the work of the Italian Mission here. This mission although supported by all denominations is new to many and the public speaker is cordially invited to be present and hear the speaker. HeH will be accompanied by several Italians from the mission, who will sing. Miss Nora B. Schenck, soprano, will also sing a solo.

Bible Class Meeting.

Judge William N. Runyon's Bible class at Hope chapel, to the number of about twenty-five, met last night at the chapel and discussed various matters. It was decided to elect officers and adopt by-laws at a meeting to be held Tuesday night, October 26.

C. E. FINANCE REPORTS; RESOLUTION ADOPTED

At the meeting of the general and finance committee of the Christian Endeavor Union, held last night at the Y. M. C. A. building, the finance committee passed on all bills and the general committee ordered William Latourette, treasurer, to pay the same. Chairman Frank Stewart reported a substantial balance on hand, after all bills were paid.

The members of the Union will decide what they will do with the surplus at the next mass meeting of the union which will be held in November. It was found that the delegates in attendance at the session of the State convention, numbered 1,000 and exceeded the expectations of the local committee. The chairman was authorized to send the best wishes of the committee to Rev. Dr. Francis E. Clark, founder of the Endeavor society, who will leave New York on Friday on his fifth world tour in the interest of the Endeavor movement. The following resolution was unanimously adopted by the committee:

"Be it resolved, That we, the undersigned members of the convention committee, of the Plainfield Christian Endeavor Union do hereby show our grateful appreciation of the faithful service and untiring devotion of our secretary, Charles F. Windham, in the manifold duties incumbent upon him and that we as individuals do thus sincerely thank him for the many helpful suggestions and cheerful assistance he has given us in the performance of our respective duties."

A committee was appointed by the chair to draft resolutions thanking all who assisted in making the convention a success.

CONGREGATIONAL CLUB ELECTS NEW OFFICERS

At the annual meeting of the Men's Club of the Congregational church last night Dr. Frank T. Clawson was re-elected president and J. A. Powlison vice-president. The other officers are Dr. D. V. Hubbard, secretary, and C. E. Steiner, treasurer. The executive committee named was M. C. Van Arsdale and A. N. Neilson.

During the past year eleven new members have been added to the club's roster and the work accomplished among the men of the church in a social way has been somewhat better than in previous years. All the reports tended to show that the club is in a flourishing condition and that interest in all its various activities had been stimulated through the feeling of brotherhood which has prevailed during the many years of the club's existence.

After the business meeting the entertainment committee introduced Emil Closs, a humorist of diversified abilities who entertained the thirty or more members of the club in some decidedly clever impersonations. A light refreshment followed the caricatures by Mr. Closs.

THREE CELEBRATIONS IN ONE BY MR. AND MRS. L. B. HARRIS.

Mr. and Mrs. Lester B. Harris, of West Front street, celebrated the twenty-eighth anniversary of their wedding, the bride's birthday, and Columbus Day all at once, so to speak, with a reception and collation last night. The day also marked the twenty-eighth wedding anniversary of Mrs. Harris' sister, Mrs. John M. Anderson. The sisters were married at the same place and hour at Greenville.

All of the celebrants' immediate family were present. An informal musical program was given, wiith Hugo Schopenhauer at the piano. The dinner table was decorated with autmun leaves to good effect.

GOVERNMENT EXPERT TALKS ON WEATHER.

The woes of the "weather man" were told in detail to fifty members of the Men's Club of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church last night by Prof. R. A. Abbey, weather expert. While his address was largely of a scientific nature, he managed to make all of his points clear to his audience.

Prof. Abbey called for and replied to a variety of questions on barometric conditions. A collation was served.

COLUCCI AND AFFINITY HELD FOR GRAND JURY

The case of Ernest Colucci and Mary Jarrell was brought up this morning in the City Court before Judge Runyon for further hearing and the pair were held under $200 bonds each to await the action of the grand jury. A warrant for the arrest of Colucci, signed by Justice of the Peace John W. Young, of Dover, was served on Colucci in the court room by Chief of Police Edward Byram, of Dover, and Colucci was released under a $300 bond to appear before that Judge on Wednesday, November 3.

Alfonso Colucci, an uncle of the prisoner, signed the bonds in the case of Colucci, giving as security the house and lot at 805 North avenue, valued at $4,000. As no one appeared to give security for the Jarrell woman she will be taken to Elizabeth to await the grand jury's action in the case.

Colucci this morning seemed to realize that indifference to the claims of his wife would hardly pay and suggested a reconciliation. Mrs. Colucci, while willing, for the sake of her children, to return to her husband was not ready to take the risk without some security as to the fulfillment of her husband's promises to take care of her and their three children. In the meantime, it is believed, that with the other woman out of the way, the married relations of the couple can be resumed and that they will live happily together. It is quite likely that Colucci's uncle will sign the necessary bond to secure his nephew's good behaviour in the future.

MISS ALICE DE MOTT, G. C. O'NEILL'S BRIDE

Miss Alice Mae DeMott, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry DeMott, of Somerset street, and Grover C. O'Neill, son of Mrs. John A. O'Neill, of New Brunswick, were married last night by Rev. Dr. Charles M. Anderson, pastor of the First M. E. church, at the home of the bride's parents in the presence of a large number of relatives and friends.

The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Ada Belle DeMott, as maid-of-honor. Another sister, Miss Jennie DeMott, and Miss Elizabeth Perrine, a cousin, were the bridesmaids. The best man was Newell L. Powelson, of the borough, and the ushers were George Burton, Frederick Ayres, and Arthur Farley, all of New Brunswick, and Arthur Farley, of this city. Little Miss Gladys Brokaw was the flower girl.

The ceremony was performed in a bay window under a bell of carnations and ferns. Miss Anne Giddis, of Bound Brook, a cousin of the bride, played the wedding march from Lohengrin. The bride's dress was a princess lace robe over satin with pearl trimmings. The maid-of-honor's gown was lavender trimmed with satin and gold, and the bridesmaid's dresses were of pink satin with pearl trimming.

Many beautiful presents were tendered the happy pair. At the end of the evening, they escaped into an automobile and foiled the rice-throwers by catching a convenient night train to New York, whence they will go to Washington, where the honeymoon will be spent. Before leaving the house, the bride presented the maid-of-honor with a gold necklace, the bridesmaids with gold rings, and the flower girl with a gold bracelet. The groom's present to the best man was a diamond watch fob and the ushers were tendered tie clasps. The groom presented the bride with an upright piano.

Both the bride and groom's immediate families were present. Among the bride's relatives present were Mr. and Mrs. Abraham Giddis, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Conroy, Dr. and Mrs. E. A. Giddis, Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Giddis and Mr. and Mrs. Louis Perrine, of Plainfield, and Mr. and Mrs. William DeMott, of Green Village. Among Mr. O'Neill's relatives in attendance were Mr. and Mrs. Elmer O'Neill, Mrs. Amelia Price, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Houghton and Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Ryerson, of New Brunswick, and William H. O'Neill, of New York.

The couple will reside in New Brunswick.

"Our New Minister."

A play that pleases everybody comes along but once in a generation. "The Old Homstead" was this sort of piece. Denman Thompson and George W. Ryer, who wrote that idyl, have certainly done the trick again, with absorbingly interesting and wholesomely amusing reflex of life in a small country town which they call "Our New Minister." The piece was one of the biggest hits this season and is at the Plainfield theatre this afternoon and tonight.

EVILS OF THE TARIFF TOLD BY JOHN MOODY

Theory That Protective Legislation Encourages Legitimate Business Interests He Says is False.

EXPOUNDS PARTY DOCTRINE.

The evils of a protective tariff were laid bare last night by John Moody, publisher of Moody's Manual, before a large gathering of representatives of both the big political parties at Coward's hall, the regular meeting place of the Democratic club under whose auspices Mr. Moody spoke. The trusts, the labor question, railroad rates, political corruption and the cost of living are the direct results of the high protective tariff with which the people of the country have been saddled for the last forty years.

In an estimated national wealth of 110 billions of dollars about one-half is represented by the capitalization of the trusts. Prosperity is only another name for imposition, according to Mr. Moody's theories, and the proof is very simple of attainment if one will only think. For instance—An article which under the Wilson Bill was sold at retail for 2.25 is now sold for 3.25, and the consumer pays the difference. This notwithstanding the fact that while the article in question had an import duty of 25 per cent. ad valorem under the old tariff and 50 per cent. under the new.

What Mr. Moody wanted to bring home to the voters was the fact that although the people say they are not affected by the tariff if they do not buy imported goods they are in error for the prices on articles of domestic manufacture are sold at the same prices, practically, as those brought from abroad upon which the protective has had a considerable influence on the selling price.

Mr. Moody spoke at great length on the relative disproportion of wages and the present cost of living, giving facts and figures to prove that while clothing and food had advanced in cost to the consumer from 50 to 160 per cent. wages had advanced but a meagre 25 to 50 and this increase of wages does not include the day laborer. He emphasized the injurious effect of the present protective legislation on all smaller industries and said that it was a mistaken idea among Democrats and Republicans alike that it had been the one big asset which has encouraged "legitimate busines interests."

Summarized these are the results of high tariff: The trusts become more formidable every year; labor is not receiving its just proportion of our vaunted prosperity; political corruption is rampant among our law makers; railroad rates, both passenger and freight are a burden to the country. The remedy will be found only in eliminating the trusts and making their existence impossible. This the Democratic party alone can do by electing Democratic Senators and Representatives.

Speaking of the financial disasters of 1893 and 1907 Mr. Moody said both were attributable to the tariff measures known as the McKinley Bill and the Dingley Bill. That of 1893, which was proclaimed the direct result of the Wilson Bill which Grover Cleveland refused to sign was in reality caused by the McKinley tariff which allowed the trusts to issue watered stock in anticipation of a prosperity which did not materialize. The Steel trust, a corporation captalized at one and a half billions, has made good its watered stock only through the protection offered by a high tariff. But this great industry is paying its dividends through the enormous demands for its products by the railroads of the country, who in turn derive their revenue from the people who ride in its coaches and pay the freight. If the Steel trust did not charge such high prices for their product the railroads could lower their rates and still pay the dividends to their stockholders.

In his preliminary remarks Mr. Moody defined the difference between Republicanism and Democracy, saying the former means a limited freedom and the latter absolute freedom including free trade. We do not want legislation to regulate the trusts, but we do want the trusts legislated out of existence; then and only then will the people of this country have the real prosperity, he said.

"Why do the Republicans stand so closely together on the vital questions of the day?" he asked, "be-

HAPPY RESULTS.

Have Made Many Plainfield Residents Enthusiastic.

No wonder scores of Plainfield citizens grow enthusiastic. It is enough to make anyone happy to find relief after years of suffering. Public statements like the following are but truthful representations of the daily work done in Plainfield by Doan's Kidney Pills.

Mrs. J. C. Manchester, 129 Lafayette place, Plainfield, N. J., says: "I was a sufferer from kidney and bladder trouble for a long time. I doctored a great deal but failed to find a cure until I saw Doan's Kidney Pills advertised and made up my mind to give them a trial. Good results followed their use and my kidneys were soon restored to a normal condition. I believe my cure is a permanent one and I will always give Doan's Kidney Pills my endorsement when an opportunity occurs."

She was ill and is supposed to have wandered away.

Men employed in the immediate vicinity Monday found the body of a man about forty-five years old in Newton Creek, near the West Jersey and Seashore Electric Railroad bridge. In one of the pockets of the man's clothing Coroner Litchfield found a badge, No. 13, the kind used by seamen; gold nose glasses, two old watches and a receipt given by the American Steamship Line in the name of Edwards. The man had a sandy mustache. The body is at the morgue.

Charged with doing second-story burglar work, Elizabeth Seabright, a fourteen-year-old girl, is in the Mercer county jail at Trenton in default of bail. The child's home is in Broad Street Park, a suburb of Trenton. A next-door neighbor charges that one night last week the girl climbed out of her bedroom window on the second floor, made her way over the roof of a shed kitchen and entered the second-story window of the neighbor's house, ransacking a room and taking a quantity of jewelry.

Francis and Eugene Walker, aged twelve and fourteen years respectively, are, the Atlantic City police claim, the champion bad boys of the city. Evidence was brought out yesterday before Judge Higbee, of the Juvenile Court, that the boys refuse to attend school; that they stole the rent money which their father had saved and threatened to shoot their mother when she endeavored to correct them. The lads were arrested for the theft of two bicycles which detectives found them riding in glee, and they will be sent to the reform school.

At a meeting of the special committee of the Board of Education that has charge of the corner-stone laying for the new high school, at Paterson, last night, it developed that the committee has as yet not been able to secure a speaker for the occasion. Efforts have been made to get President Nicholas Murray Butler, of Columbia University; President Woodrow Wilson, of Princeton; former President Eliot, of Harvard, and other prominent educators, but none of them could find time for this purpose. An effort will now be made to secure Superintendent A. B. Poland, of the Newark schools.

A Trustee Dependable

The advantages which come to an estate through the appointment of a good TRUST COMPANY as executor are so obvious that it seems to be necessary to do little more than to call the attention of testators to these advantages to secure the INVARIABLE SELECTION OF THE TRUST COMPANY RATHER THAN THE INDIVIDUAL.

The NEW YORK SUN in a recent editorial gives some of these reasons in a very comprehensive way;

Trust Companies as Executors.

One advantage in making a rich trust company your executor is obvious. Even if your estate is mismanaged the executor is responsible and a judicial decree compelling it to make good the loss is always capable of enforcement. This is particularly important in cases where women without any knowledge or experience in business are the beneficiaries of a testamentary trust. If their trustee is an individual and he steals or squanders the trust property the beneficiaries are ruined; whereas, they are exposed to no such danger if their trustee is a solvent trust company. It is true that the representatives of the trust company who actually manage the affairs of the estate may so manage them as to incur inexcusable losses, but if this happens the losses fall upon the trust company and not upon the beneficiaries.

This element of financial security appeals more and more to thoughtful testators, and the appointment of trust companies as executors is much more common than it used to be.

FIDELITY TRUST CO.
NEWARK, N. J.,

with 27 million dollars of Resources and 9 million dollars of Surplus, presents advantages to the Estate WHICH NO TESTATOR SHOULD IGNORE.

The Plainfield Baseball club has concluded its baseball season for 1909, with a record of which it can be proud. It has played stronger teams than in years past and has won several notable contests.

The Y. M. C. A. has also finished its baseball season with an excellent record of victories. It was not a member of any league this year, but met some of the best clubs in and out of the State. Manager Listman feels proud of his team's achievements.
